THE BLACK HAT LAMA

The eighth incarnation of Karmapa, Mikyo Dorje, the symbolic form of the Mahamudra teachings, shown holding a book and wearing the Black Hat. He is surrounded by past and future emanations of the Kargyudpa Lineage. A detail from a large banner depicting the complete Lineage ‘tree’ of the Karma-Kargyudpa sect, used for visualisation. It is at Rumtek monastery, Sikkim.
TRANSLATION OF THE MESSAGE

With boundless wisdom and skillful means Lord Buddha taught us to cultivate virtue and avoid wrong actions, especially stressing the value of true compassion, in order that Liberation and Supreme Knowledge be effectively achieved.

In accordance with the prediction of my predecessor I was, as a child, recognized to be of the unbroken lineage of the Gyalwa Karmapa. It has been especially difficult for me to propagate the Noble Teachings as fully as my great predecessors, but I have most earnestly endeavored to be truly beneficial and helpful to all beings, without distinction. If henceforth the true and pure Buddhist Teachings can penetrate throughout the world in every language then I believe that all worldly troubles and miseries will be assuaged.

This book, on the origin and tradition of the great Kargyudpa Lineage, will be most helpful for understanding the Buddhist Dharma and will be beneficial for all who long for Enlightenment. I am therefore most grateful to those who have worked with faith and devotion translating and compiling it.

At this time in the Dark Age, when there is disease, famine, war and people die before their time, I pray that the merit obtained from this work may benefit all beings and bring peace. I also pray that all may learn loving kindness for one another, that there may be a wealth of happiness and that all will achieve Enlightenment.

I, the Gyalwa Karmapa, holder of the unbroken Lineage, by my own hand have sealed this. The year 1973.

(Seal and Signature)
INTRODUCTION

This remarkable document, scrupulously compiled from authentic Tibetan sources, tells of the transmission of mystic teachings from India to Tibet and their subsequent embodiment in the line of successive incarnate Lamas known as the Karmapa Black-Hats. For the first time the Teachers of the great Kagyu 'Oral Transmission' are shown as an interconnected lineage and their truly extraordinary life-stories related in an historical context, right up to the present. The consciousness expressed shows a distinctly Eastern view of reality, in which the concept of rebirth and the acceptance of the all-pervading influence of action (Karma) in the formation of destiny is of particular importance.

Karmapa means 'Man of Action', a Master of Karma. As an emanation of the compassionate Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara he was the first incarnate Lama (Tulku) of the Tibetans and has been honoured as a Living Buddha for the last eight hundred years, in an unbroken succession. The present sixteenth incarnation of Karmapa, His Holiness Rangjung Rigpe Dorje, was recognised and brought up in the manner of his predecessors, but the Chinese invasion of his country forced him to take refuge in Sikkim, where he has founded a large monastic Centre for the promulgation of the Buddhist teachings. It was through his enthusiasm and generosity that this work came into being. The story is his, told in the traditional manner and under his scrutiny and guidance. In Tibetan life-stories of eminent Lamas are believed to be excellent vehicles for an inner awakening and are read in the spirit of actual initiation. In this English rendering copious footnotes and references have been added where relevant, as a means of aiding the reader to understand the significance of the incidents. It is hoped that the extensive appendices and the lengthy glossary will make this a complete book.

The first part concerns the ancient transmission, which began in India about one thousand years ago. The Yogi Tilopa receives the highest initiations, perfects the Tantric teachings and becomes a Master, a Siddha. He transmits the essence of his attainment to his disciple Naropa, who in turn becomes fully perfected. Siddha Naropa teaches Lama Marpa, a Tibetan, who later becomes Realized and undertakes the work of translating the esoteric teachings. Lama Marpa accepts Milarepa as his disciple and after many hard tests transmits the complete teachings to him. From the Hermit-Yogi Milarepa the teachings pass to Gampopa, who in turn initiates Dusum Khyenpa, the first Karmapa (1110-1193).

Traditionally the coming of the first Karmapa fulfils a prophecy made by Lord Buddha some sixteen hundred years previously. As an emanation of the Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara he comes to the world in order to help alleviate the sufferings of humanity and immediately takes on the task. He builds monasteries, distributes alms, heals the sick and preaches to the people. In subsequent incarnations, travelling widely, he becomes the Teacher of great Emperors and Kings, using his influence to further peace and spirituality in Tibet, China, Mongolia, Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim and India. A Master of miracle and prophecy, Karmapa uses his powers to emphasise the relevance of his teachings.

The sixteen life-stories of the Karmapas, compiled from Tibetan biographies and diaries, cover eight hundred years of events of great cultural and historical importance. Detailed accounts of the initiations, visions, miracles and prophecies give a great insight into the structure of Tibetan mysticism, pointing to parallels only recently being explored in the West. Throughout the life-stories the play of Karma is ever-dominant, transcending life-times, forming the course of history. It is in this respect that the teachings of the Karmapas have a relevance particularly suited to the present age.

Every effort has been made to ensure accuracy and clarity. Sometimes it has been valuable, in the footnotes, to give a full transliteration from the Tibetan, whereas in the text itself we have kept to a simpler and more easily readable form. Various Western terms such as Deity, Goddess, Saviour have been used to express Eastern concepts, which should be understood in their Buddhist sense. The manuscript was compiled under extremely difficult conditions, owing to the very limited time in which the original Tibetan reference works could be consulted in Sikkim. Final additions and corrections were made while accompanying His Holiness The Sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa on pilgrimage in India. The reader's indulgence is requested for any minor errors which may remain.

Most grateful thanks are owed to H. H. The Gyalwa Karmapa and all those at the Rumtek monastery who gave their time to make this work possible. Further acknowledgements are due to the Ven. Chogyam Trungpa Rinpoche; the Ven. Akong Rinpoche and the Ven. Dorzong Rinpoche for their kind help in supplying valuable additional material, to the Government of India, Benares Hindu University, Benares Sanskrit University, the Bengal Asiatic Society Calcutta and the Tribhuvan University of Nepal for their assistance in making available all research facilities. Special credit to the work of G. C. C. Chang, Karma Khechog Palmo, Karma Tinlay Rinpoche, H. E. Richardson and G. N. Roerich, as also to those who have contributed photographic material and services. Finally, particular credit to Meryl White, who has worked with me on this project and to Messrs Luzac & Co, who have brought it to completion.

Nik Douglas
Tilopa was born into a Brahmin family of Eastern India, in the male earth mouse year (988). Legend tells that as a boy he was put to a test by the great Siddha Nagarjuna, who asked for his help across a river. Carrying the Teacher on his back, the young Tilopa waded fearlessly through the raging waters, never doubting that he would reach the other side safely.

Some years later Nagarjuna again appeared in the district and found Naropa playing at being a king, with two young girls as his Queens. The young man immediately prostrated himself before the Siddha, who asked him if he would really like to become the King. Laughing, Naropa replied that indeed he would, but added that it was unlikely ever to happen. When the King of that region died, however, the State Elephant, guided by Nagarjuna’s magical powers, placed the ritual vase of holy water on top of Tilopa’s head, thus indicating the Divine choice for the new monarch. At the same time the great sage conjured up a mighty and invincible army which would only obey the commands of Tilopa.

The young man was crowned King and after reigning for several years began to weary of the life of luxury. Renouncing his kingdom he became a monk. He received formal initiations into the priesthood, being ordained by his uncle at the Tantric temple of Somapuri, in Bengal. One day, while engaged in his priestly duties, an ugly Hag-like woman appeared before him and asked if he would like to attain true Enlightenment. Tilopa recognised her as a Dakini, a keeper of esoteric secrets, and begged for her instructions. She initiated him into the Chakrasambhava Tantra and he was able to absorb the teachings fully.

Tilopa stayed at Somapuri for twelve years, engaging himself in the revealed teachings. He was able to visit the realms of the Dakinis, surviving many ordeals and temptations, culminating in his meeting with the Dakini-Queen herself, from whom he received the full and final transmission of the teachings. He united with a Yogi-ascetic, who was a pounder of sesame seeds, and on this account was driven out from the order of monks. He went to live in lonely cremation-grounds and was believed to be a madman.

Tilopa travelled throughout India, meeting many fine teachers from whom he received initiations into many esoteric practices. Sometimes he pounded sesame-seed (Skt. Til) to earn a living and it is said that his name derived from this. His main teacher was the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara, from whom he received the direct transmission of the teachings, without the need of any intermediary. The Mahamudra especially was revealed to him in this way. Of the Siddhas with whom he came into contact some of the better known were Lupa, Krishnacharin, Vajraghanta, Matang, Vinapa and Darikapada.

From the Four Directions he received the Four Precious Doctrines, and the three esoteric teachings of North Korsen were also revealed to him. He brought together the many schools of Indian Tantra, consolidating them into one system, expressible in seven parts. The teachings derive both directly from the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara and from his numerous human teachers. Thus:

(NORTH)
Luipa
Drengipa
Darikapada
Sukhadari

(WEST)
Dholipa
Vinapa
Lawapa
Indralikhiti

(WEST)
TILOPA
Sukhasiddhi
Tanglopa
Shinglopa

(EAST)
Nagarjun
Aryadeva
Chandrakirti
Matangi
Karanapa

(SOUTH)

He lived in deserted places and became recognized as a great Yogi by the heavenly light which continually surrounded him. Once he appeared seated on a lion and manifested the power of controlling both the sun and the moon, so putting to shame a non-Buddhist Yogi called Mati who had boasted that he possessed the most occult power. On another occasion Tilopa flew high in the air with his consort and could be seen from a crowded marketplace.

Tilopa had a number of fine disciples, the foremost of whom were Lalitavajra and Naropa. His teaching was the expression of the highest realization of Yoga. He passed away in the female earth bird year (1069), at the age of eighty-one and entered the subtle realms.

"Do not imagine, think or deliberate, Meditate, act, but be at rest. With an object do not be concerned." (Tilopa)
The main Siddhas of the Kagyu sect. A detail from the great Lineage Tree thangka at Rumtek monastery. At the top is Lotro Rinchen, with the Siddhas Saraha and Nagarjuna to the left and right. Underneath are Siddhis Shavaripa and Siddha Maitripa and below them the Vajras Siddhis Yeshe Khandro (centre), with Siddhis Matangi and Siddha Taipa to the left and right. Chandrakirti is below Yeshe Khandro, with Siddha Darikapada to the left and Siddha Sukhadrari to the right. Under Chandrakirti is Siddha Drungipa with Siddha Vinapa and Siddha Lawapa to the left and right. Below is Siddha Dholippa (centre) with Khandro Kelpa Zang to the left and Siddha Tanglopa to the right. Under Dholipa is Siddha Indralhuti with Siddha Kamarepa and Siddha Kumpa to the left and right. Finally at the bottom centre is Siddha Shinglopa with Jnanagarbha to the left and Siddha Pentapa. The Lineage Tree continues with the Adi Buddha, followed by the direct Kagyu transmission of Siddha Tilopa, Siddha Naropa, Marpa, Milarepa, Gampopa, and the Karmapas, Khamrapas, Situps, Gyaltiapas and soon.
Naropa was born into a royal family of Bengal, in the male fire dragon year (1016). There were many unusual and auspicious omens at the time of his birth. The child was named Samantabhadra and was carefully brought up with the idea that he would eventually become King after his father, however his interests moved towards the Buddhist Dharma. At the age of eight he demanded to be allowed to go to Kashmir for higher education, and after much dispute he was permitted to make the journey. He arrived there at the age of eleven and began to study the arts, the sciences, grammar, rhetoric and logic under the most eminent teachers.

The young scholar remained in Kashmir for three years and then returned to his parents. He was forced into marriage with a Brahman girl, Vimaladiti, and lived with her for eight years during which time he became his disciple. Then he insisted that the marriage be dissolved, so enabling him to continue with his studies in Kashmir. There he was ordained as a novice and engaged himself in studies for three years. He became renowned for his remarkable scholarship and learning.

At the age of twenty-eight Naropa returned from Kashmir and went to live at Pallahari. He joined the nearby Nalanda University which was presided over by four great Buddhist Masters. Upon the death of one of them he was elected to the vacant place. Thus, taking the name of Aihayakiri, he became an Abbot of Nalanda. His fame spread far and he converted many to the way of Buddhism. For eight years he taught at Nalanda.

One day, while studying his books, an old woman appeared before him, manifesting thirty-seven ugly features. As an embodiment of the Vajra Dakini she revealed to him the futility of book-knowledge and explained that her "brother" (Tilopa) could transmit real knowledge. Naropa left his exalted position at the university, gave up his books and set out in search of his destined teacher.

Travelling towards the East, with only a robe, a staff, and a begging bowl, he encountered many strange manifestations in the search for his teacher. As he was about to commit suicide out of despair he suddenly met Tilopa, "a dark man dressed in cotton trousers, his hair knotted in a tuft, and with protruding blood-shot eyes."

Tilopa revealed the Lineage teachings to Naropa and then put him through twelve hard tests, each of which ultimately resulted in the transmission of an important esoteric teaching. Though Naropa suffered considerably he persevered and received all the higher initiations. For some years he frequented the cremation-gounds of Eastern India and was generally taken to be a madman. Having absorbed the full transmission of his teacher, Naropa travelled to a remote region and there engaged himself in meditation.
Some time passed and then Tilopa instructed other disciples to fetch Naropa, declaring that there was some work for him to do. Naropa returned to Pulihari, where in a vision he saw the arrival in India of the Tibetan pilgrim Marpa, who was soon brought to him. Marpa was accepted as a disciple, was initiated into the higher Tantras and taught the Mahamudra to perfection. On two other occasions Marpa travelled from Tibet to meet Naropa, thus enabling the oral transmission to be preserved into the future.

Naropa spent his last years in isolation, only occasionally appearing to his closest disciples in times of need. He passed on to the subtle realms in the maleiron dragon year (1100), at the age of eighty-four. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SIDDHA DOMBIKI HERUKA (Dombhika): He was a King of Magadha, in the East. From Siddha Virupa, he received preliminary initiations. He united with an outcaste girl (Sahajayogini Cinti) and kept her as his mistress. When his subjects showed disapproval the King went off to live with her in the jungles. There was a famine in the land, after which the King returned with his mistress, riding upon the back of a tigress and holding poisonous snakes. He survived an ordeal by fire, took over his Kingdom and spread the Dharma widely. Siddha Dombhika was a teacher of Siddha Krishnacharan and also of Lama Dragmi (992-1072), the founder of the Sakyapa sect in Tibet.

(ii) SIDDHA SHANTIPA: He was born in Magadha, into a Brahmin family, and studied the Vedas as a young man. He became a monk and was admitted to the Vikramashila university where he received teachings from Jetari. He became an Abbot of Somapuri and taught there for several years. Then he accepted the invitation to Ceylon, travelling there in order to spread the Dharma further. After a stay of three years he returned to Eastern India, on the way meeting and initiating the future Siddha Kodalipa. Upon his arrival at Vikramashila he was appointed Abbot of the Eastern quarter and quickly became famous for his erudite scholarship and supreme mastery of debate. He had many fine disciples, one of the foremost of whom was Lama Dragmi, the founder of the Sakyapa sect in Tibet. Siddha Shantipa passed away at the age of one hundred and eight years.

(iii) SIDDHA MAITRIPIA: A great teacher of the Lineage of Siddha Saraha. He influenced many of the important new teachers, especially Dipamkara Atisha (982-1054) and Marpa. He was also the teacher of Bodhichikara.

(iv) SHANTIBHADRA: A great Tantric teacher of Eastern India.
(v) PITOPA: Who developed and expounded the Kalabaktra Tantra.
(vi) DIPAMKARA ATISHA: He was born as the second son of a Bengali King, in the year 982. As a young man he studied hard and soon became a master of debate. At the age of twenty-two he had a vision of Heruka and shortly afterwards he met the teacher Rahulagupta, who initiated him into the Vajra Dakini Tantra. He met a Dakini, who was wearing a necklace of bones and skulls and from her he received initiations and the mystic songs. The Siddha Avadhutipa bestowed further initiations on him. He also studied under the famous master Dharmakirti.

At the age of twenty-nine Atisha received ordination as a monk, after which he spent his time studying the many Mahayana Sutras under the most illustrious teachers. He became Abbot of Vikramashila, which prospered greatly under his guidance and after some years accepted an invitation to visit Tibet, arriving there in 1042. He travelled all over the country, preaching and establishing religious centres. He passed away in the year 1054. His main disciple was the Lama Dompyna.

(vii) MARPA: The Tibetan "Translator", who carried the teachings to Tibet, so forming the beginnings of the Kargyu sect. His life-story follows.

(1012-1097)

FOOTNOTES

21 She became a great Yogini, known as Niguma, and taught the Tantras.
22 Who were called Shvetalakshmi-Jungna, Naroppa (Krishnacharan), Jetari and Ramakrishnacharan.
23 Tib. Thug Phyugma.
24 Three of these seven ugly features are likened to 37 "Nightways" (Naddis), the subtle channels, as also to 37 different kinds of worldly dissatisfaction.
25 The line of direct transmission.
26 Especially the Heruka Tantra, the Guhyasamaja Tantra and the Chakrasamvara Tantra.
27 Sahajayogini Cinti was a great female ascetic, a disciple of Siddha Naropa. She was a devotee of Upasamvara.
28 Lama Dragmi spent eight years at the famous Vikramashila Tantrik University. He was also a disciple of Siddha Shantipa, who initiated him into the Heruka Tantra.
29 Virupa, a disciple of Lakshminara, taught Avadhutipa a great Siddha.
30 Siddha Kodalipa was a farmer in the South of India. Shantipa gave him a meditation for his work and soon he became perfected.
31 This Lama Dompyna taught Marpa Sakshita.
32 Which was brought from Shambala country, which may be identified as the region of Samalpur, in Orissa. A wealth of evidence suggests that Pitopa came from Eastern India. See "Buddhism in Orissa" by N. K. Sabu, published by Utkal University, 1958, page 108. The location of Shambala has always been linked to that of Utgiri, once believed to lie in the Swat region of N. W. India, but recently more positively identified with Orissa.
33 (1005-1064), Tib. Rims shon.

(For full details of Naropa's life-story, see "The Life of Naropa", translated by H. V. Guenther, Oxford University Press, 1963.)
Marpa was born in the male water mouse year (1012) in Southern Tibet. His father prophesied that he had the potential for great spiritual attainments, provided that he chose the right path. At an early age he embraced Buddhism, taking the name of Dharma-buddhist. He studied Sanskrit with the Sakyapa Lama Drogon. Then he exchanged all his worldly possessions for gold and set out for India in the company of a friend.

The journey took the two young men through Nepal, where they met two disciples of the Siddha Naropa who impressed them greatly with their practical knowledge. After a long and difficult journey Marpa was led directly to Naropa, who accepted him as a spiritual son and began to transmit the teachings to him. Marpa presented all the gold to his teacher as an offering.

For sixteen years Marpa received initiations and teachings from Naropa. He received additional teachings from Jnanagarbha in the West and from Siddha Karuipa in the South. Another of Naropa’s disciples, Siddha Maitripa, taught him the Mahamudra to perfection. Marpa spent some time living in cremation grounds and then returned to Tibet.

Marpa spent many years translating the manuscript copies of the Tantric teachings brought with him from India. He established a community farm and monastery at Lhubrag, and married Dagmema who bore him several sons. He was known as a teacher by only a small exclusive group of disciples, amongst whom he dispersed the essence of his understanding. He became famous as a translator.

The teacher Marpa made a second journey to India in order to bring back more teachings to Tibet. Upon his return he took Milarepa as a disciple, but submitted him to repeated trials and tests before finally bestowing the secret teachings on him. In answer to a query from Milarepa concerning the most secret Dhong-jag teachings Marpa searched through all of his manuscripts but found that he had not the explanatory treatises for this practice. Therefore he decided to return once again to India, in the hope of being able to receive those teachings as well.

Despite his advanced age Marpa undertook the long journey to India, his disciples contributing gold for the expense of the journey and for presentation to Naropa. In India Marpa met up with Dipamkara Atisha, who informed him that Naropa was just about to leave the world. However on his arrival in Eastern India he was able to have a miraculous meeting with his teacher, who appeared in a vision and transmitted the required teaching to him. Marpa then returned to Tibet.

Marpa always utilised dreams and omens for understanding the course of destiny. He was a hard teacher, famous for his raging tempers, yet equally noted for sudden moments of great generosity and good humour. Amongst his four main disciples he distributed the esoteric teachings, along with various holy relics brought with him from India. In the female fire ox year (1097) he passed away at the age of eighty-six, having firmly established the beginnings of the Kargyudpa sect in Tibet. His foremost disciples were:

(i) JETSUN MILAREPA: From Gunthang. Who received the teachings of the Mystic Heat, some clothes which had belonged to Naropa and a hat of Maitripa.33 (1052-1135).

(ii) NGOCHU DORJE (Ngodun Chudor): From Zhung. Who received Tantric teachings, the Six Ornaments,34 a sacrificial spoon and a ruby rosary which had belonged to Naropa.

(iii) TSURTON WANGYE (Tsurtom Wangne): From Dor. Who received the Transference teachings, relics of Naropa’s hair and nails, precious pills35 and a head-ornament of paintings of the five Dhyani Buddhas.

(iv) METON TSONPO: From Tsang. Who received the Clear Light teachings, a thunderbolt-sceptre (Dorje) and bell (Trillu) which had belonged to Naropa, as well as a small double-drum (Damara) and an oyster-shell libation cup.

---

FOOTNOTES

33 Lama Drongmi was a disciple of Siddha Shantipa and from Siddha Dronbhiv Heruka he received the initiation of Hayagriva.

34 Who initiated Mipha into the Guhyasamaja Tantra.

35 Who received Enlightenment through his dog, an emanation of Acalakshirasana.

36 The Dzong Zajell teachings are for entering the bodies of others. Used for the animation of corpses. The Transformation Yoga.

37 The Siddha, a disciple of Naropa, teacher of Dipamkara Atisha.

38 Rose-petals, hat, arm-bands, necklace, bracelets and ear-rings. They are symbols of the constituents of the initiation Mandala.

39 Precious pills are generally made of Five Elixirs (Skt. Pandurangadaka), often mixed with relics. The present Gyalwa Karmapa distributes such pills, especially in connection with the Black Hat ceremony.
MILAREPA (1052-1135) (Tib: Mi-la Ras-pa)

Milarepa was born in the Gungthang province of Western Tibet, close to the Nepalese border, on the twenty-fifth day of the seventh month of the male water dragon year (1052). His father died when he was only seven, and the family property was lost in the care of greedy relatives who treated his mother and himself very badly. She became very bitter and, as soon as her son was old enough, she sent him off to learn the art of Black Magic in the hope that he would be able to avenge the wrongdoings.

The young man quickly learned how to manoeuvre the powers of destruction. He brought havoc to his village and caused the death of many people. However, his teacher repented for the misdeeds and sent him off to find someone who could help him counteract all the bad Karmas accumulated through his magical incantations. Thus he became a pupil of a Nyingmapa Lama called Rongtong, who soon directed him to Marpa the Translator, who was living in Lhobrag.

At the age of thirty-eight Milarepa became a pupil of the great Lama Marpa, who had had a vision of his coming. Marpa allowed him to remain at Lhobrag but refused to admit him to the inner circle of initiates and would not give him any teaching. For six years Milarepa was treated like a servant and was given extremely difficult physical work. After several frustrating attempts he finally built a nine-storied tower according to the specifications of Marpa.

Dagnema, Marpa’s wife, helped Milarepa in his moments of despair and pleaded with her husband to allow Milarepa the initiation which he sought. Finally, the difficult trials were over, the bad Karma used up, and quickly Milarepa was given the full teachings and initiations. Marpa prepared him for a life of solitary meditation and imparted the secret teachings of Naropa, in particular the Yoga of the Mystic Heat. clad only in cotton, Milarepa lived for many years in total isolation in high mountain caves. He engaged himself in the perfection of the teachings transmitted to him.

The years passed and the cotton-clad Yogi became fully Enlightened. People got to hear about him and sought him out to listen intently to the mystic songs through which he expounded his teachings. After completing nine full years in isolation he began to accept disciples. He continued to live a very simple life, spreading his teachings through his mystic songs, many of which survive to this day. He became famous throughout Tibet.

In the female horse bare year (1135), at the age of eighty-four, Milarepa passed away, leaving eight ‘greater’ and thirteen ‘lesser’ disciples. Five of the eight disciples did not spread any teachings and went straight to the subtle realms. Three remained in the world, two of which received and transmitted the esoteric teachings of Siddha Naropa. These foremost disciples were:
(i) JE GAMPopa (Drugpo Lharje): From Nyal. He received the complete teachings. His attainment was compared to the Sun. The detailed life-story follows. (1079-1153)
(ii) RECHUNGPA (Rechung Dorje Trakpa): From Gungthang. He met Milarepa at the age of eleven. He contracted leprosy and at the age of fifteen he set out for India in search of a cure. There he met and was initiated by Siddha Balachandra,44 who also cured his disease.

Rechungpa returned to Tibet where he remet Milarepa and received instruction from him. Some years later he again visited India and was there initiated into further teachings of Naropa and Maitripa. These he passed on to Milarepa and Je Gampopa. His attainment was compared to the Moon. (1084-1161).

The other foremost disciples were:
(iii) SHIWA OD REPA: A young nobleman who met Milarepa at a river-crossing. He became very devoted to him after listening to his songs. He renounced the world and became a Yogi, receiving many of the teachings.
(iv) SEWAN REPA: From Dota.
(v) NGAN DZONG CHANGCHUB GYALPO: From Chimlung.
(vi) KHIYIRA REPA: From Nyishang.
(vii) DRIGOM REPA: From Mus.
(viii) SANGYE KYAB REPA: From Ragma.

FOOTNOTES

44 At his birth he was called Thopaga, meaning 'Delightful to hear'.
45 At Kyang Tha, a few miles East of modern Kyirong.
46 Karmas (Actions) have a tendency to accumulate.
47 The older Red Hat sect.
48 An Indian Nath Siddha, of the Carpati Gopichandra Line.

GAMPOPA (1079-1135) (Tib: Gampo pa)

Gamopana was born in Nyal, Eastern Tibet, in the female earth sheep year (1079). His father was an excellent physician and brought up his son with a thorough knowledge of the profession. By the time Gamopana was fifteen he was well versed in many of the Tantras and was also considered to be a competent doctor. At the age of twenty-two he married, producing a son and a daughter. There was an epidemic in the region and the two children died suddenly. The young man was very upset, especially when his wife also caught the disease. Try as he could there was no way to cure her and as she was dying she asked him to devote his life to the Buddhist Dharma.

At the age of twenty-six Gamopana received ordination as a monk, taking the name Sonam Rinchen and following the doctrines of the Kadampas. He studied under many illustrious teachers and quickly developed a good understanding of the Buddhist Dharma. At the age of thirty-two he overheard some beggars talking about Jetsun Milarepa. Immediately he felt filled with devotion and realized that this Yogi must surely be his destined teacher.

Gamopana set out in search of Milarepa and after many hardships managed to find him. For a period of thirteen months he received teachings directly, the doctrines of Naropana, the Mystic Heat Yoga in particular and also the complete teachings of the Mahamudra. Then he travelled to Dragspo, in the South Eastern part of the province of 'U', and there engaged himself in deep meditation. He spent many years in retreat there and founded a monastery which came to be called Dragsla Gampo. He soon attracted many disciples.

Je Gamopana blended the doctrines of the Kadampas with his own realizations of the Mahamudra, so producing the basis for the many aspects of the Kargyuupa. He was a fine writer, renowned for his clarity and deep analytical insight. He always stressed the importance of simplicity in matters of doctrine. Popularly he became known as Dragspo Lharje, the Doctor of Dragspo, though most of his later years were devoted to the healing of spiritual rather than physical sickness. There are Tibetan traditions declaring him to be the reincarnation of Chandrakirti, whereas others declared him to be that of King Srong Tsen Gambo, the first Buddhist Ruler of Tibet. Of the two main disciples of Jetsun Milarepa he was entrusted with the transmission of the complete teachings.

The four main disciples of Je Gamopana formed the four 'larger' branches of the Kargyuupa. Eight 'smaller' divisions developed later, of which three were to become very important. There were two kinds of disciple: those who were taught the Mahamudra exclusively (about five hundred in number) and those who received the complete transmission of the Vajrayana in addition (only five).

In the female water bird year (1153) Je Gamopana passed away, at the age of seventy-five, having firmly established the Kargyudpa teachings. At this time there were many remarkable and auspicious omens.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

His foremost disciples were:

(i) DUSUM KHYENPA: From Khams, Eastern Tibet. He was the earliest and most devoted of all the disciples. He received the complete transmission and founded the Khams-Tsang-Kargyud branch and the Line of successive incarnate Karmpas. His life-stories follow in detail. He was the first incarnate Lama (Tulku) of Tibet. (1110-1193)

(ii) PHAGMO GRU DORJE GYALTSEN: From Talung, Eastern Tibet. At the age of nine he took the primary ordination and over a period of years he studied under sixteen different Lamas. At the age of twenty-five he took the final ordination from Lama Dunzin. He travelled to Sakya monastery where he received the higher initiations from Sakya Kunga Nyinpo (1092-1158). Then he perfected the Subtle Breath Yoga.

Later in his life he met Je Gampopa, who complimented him on his spiritual attainment and imparted the teachings of the Mayam德拉. Lama Phagmo Gru founded the first great Kargyud monastery of Densa Thil (in 1158), which became better known as the Phagmo monastery. Thus he established the Phagmo Gru branch of the Kargyupa and produced eight smaller divisions in it. He had about one hundred disciples, five hundred of whom became skilled in the practice of meditation. At the age of sixty Lama Phagmo Gru passed away. At this time there were many auspicious rainbow omens in the sky. Auspicious relics were recovered from his funeral pyre. (1110-1170). His foremost disciples were:

(a) JIGTEN SUMGUN: From Khams. He spent twenty-eight months with his teacher and quickly attained perfection in higher meditation. He was a victim of leprosy, but, on account of his great compassion for all beings, the disease left him. At the age of thirty-five he took full ordination from Lama Shongam Topa. In the year 1179 Lama Jigten Sumgun founded the great Drigung monastery, thus establishing the Drigungpa subdivision within the Kargyupas. This monastery was soon to house more than eight hundred monks. Lama Jigten Sumgun was believed to be an incarnation of the Siddha Nagarjunas. He produced an incarnate Line of successors, as well as many fine disciples. (1143-1212)

(b) LINGREPA PADMA DORJE: From Nagtrod. At an early age he had visions of the Protector Mabakala, Yamantaka (The Lord of Death), and Chakrasambara. He met Lama Phagmo Gru and received the teachings of Mayam德拉 from him. Within three days he had the full Realization of it.

Lingrepa founded the important monastery of Rahung (c.1180) and established the Drukpa subdivision within the Kargyupas. Once, in a dream, he had the complete teachings of the Kanjars revealed to him. He revealed many precious teachings and wrote a fine commentary on the great Tantra of Chakrasambara. From Dusum Khyenpa, the first Karmapa, he received important initiations. Before his passing he transmitted everything to his disciple Tsangpa Gyare, the founder of the Tsangpa Kargyupa. (1128-1188)

(c) TANGPA TASHI PAL: He was born at Yungshu. He studied under many other teachers. At the age of twenty-six he met Lama Phagmo Gru and received important teachings and initiations. As advised by his new teacher he perfected his meditation and then travelled to Taklung where he built a large monastery (between 1180-1185), to be known as Taklung. Thus he founded the Taklungpa subdivisions within the Kargyupa. He had many disciples and successors, and passed away at the age of sixty-nine. (1142-1210)

(d) CHOSJE MARWA DRUPOT: Also known as Martsang Sherab Senge. He founded the Martsang subdivision, passing the teachings to Yeshé Gyaltser and Rinchen Lingpa.

(e) DROGON GYALTSA: Founder of the Trophu subdivision.

(f) YERPA YESHE TSLEGPA: Founder of the Yerpa subdivision. He established the great Yerphug and Tarna monasteries.

(g) ZHARAWA YESHE SENG: Founder of the Yanzang subdivision, and the monastery of the same name (in 1206).

(h) NYIPHU GYERGOM CHENPO: Founder of the Shuqeb subdivision and the monastery of the same name (at Nyiphu).

(iii) WEUNGOM TSULTRIM NYINGPO: He became a disciple of Je Gampopa and received many important teachings and initiations. He founded the Tsalpa branch of the Kargyupa, through his famous disciple Lama Shang (1123-1193), who established the important monasteries of Tsal (in 1175) and Gungthang (in 1187). He was also known as Gomtsul.

(iv) DHARMA WANGCHUK: From Bahram. He received many important teachings and initiations from Je Gampopa. He excelled in meditation. He founded the Bahrampa branch of the Kargyupa and the monastery of the same name.

Je Gampopa had a fifth disciple, SALTONG SHOGAM, from Khams, to whom he also transmitted the complete teachings. He remained in meditation and did not take any disciples.

Thus it can be seen how the four main disciples of Je Gampopa formed the four 'larger' schools of the Kargyupa sect, continuing the unbroken transmission of the precious teachings through their disciples and the future incarnations.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

FOOTNOTES

45 Founded by Lama Dronmopa (1008-1064).
46 Founded in 1121.
47 The son of a wealthy householder in Rajgit (Bihar), who had asked Lord Buddha to preach the Samadêvya journ.
48 Who died c. 649. He had two wives, one from Nepal and the other from China. They converted him to Buddhism.
49 A disciple of Kunzok Gyalpo, founder of Sakya monastery.
50 Not an incarnate Line.
51 According to the Dél-Ter-Ma Pa, "He accomplished so many deeds for the benefit of others that it cannot even be conceived." (p. 203).
52 Canonical literature, of 100 or 108 volumes ("Buddha's Words").
53 Not an incarnate Line until the first Matul Tulku. The present incarnation is in Dhalasusr, India.
54 The Drakpa subdivision developed especially in Bhutan and Ladakh.

PART TWO

THE LINE OF KARMAPAS
(Life-stories from the Tiletan)

(For more details of Gampopa and his teachings, see "Gampopa: The Jewel Ornament of Liberation", translated by H. V. Guenther, Rider & Co., 1959).

26
The Line of Karmapas

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Incarnation</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Period</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st</td>
<td>Dusum Khyenpa</td>
<td>(1110-1193)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2nd</td>
<td>Karma Pakshi</td>
<td>(1204-1283)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3rd</td>
<td>Rangjung Dorje</td>
<td>(1284-1339)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4th</td>
<td>Rolpe Dorje</td>
<td>(1340-1383)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th</td>
<td>Derzhin Shigpa</td>
<td>(1384-1415)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6th</td>
<td>Tongwa Donden</td>
<td>(1416-1453)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th</td>
<td>Chos Trag Gyaltsang</td>
<td>(1454-1506)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th</td>
<td>Mikyo Dorje</td>
<td>(1507-1554)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th</td>
<td>Wangchuk Dorje</td>
<td>(1556-1603)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th</td>
<td>Chos Ying Dorje</td>
<td>(1604-1674)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th</td>
<td>Yeshe Dorje</td>
<td>(1676-1702)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12th</td>
<td>Changchub Dorje</td>
<td>(1703-1732)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13th</td>
<td>Du Dul Dorje</td>
<td>(1733-1797)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14th</td>
<td>Tshig Chog Dorje</td>
<td>(1798-1868)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15th</td>
<td>Kha Char Dorje</td>
<td>(1871-1922)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16th</td>
<td>Rangjung Rigspe Dorje</td>
<td>(1924-present)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
THE LIFE-STORIES OF THE GYALWA KARMAPAS

Compiled from

The 'Dzaa-Chu-Sheg-Gyi-Treng-Wa', the 'Moon-Water-Crystal-Rosary', by the eighth Situ Tulku, Choskyi Jungnes (1700-1774).

The 'Rke-Pdi-Ga-Ton', the 'Exposition of Panditas', by the second Powo Tulku, Tsuklak Trengwa (1504-1566).

The 'Deb-Ter-Ngan-Po', the 'Blue Annals', by Go Lotsawa Zhonu Pal (1392-1481).

The spoken commentary of H. H. The Sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa, Rangjung Rigpe Dorje, the present incarnation.

Under the direction of:

(i) H. H. The sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa.
(ii) The Ven. Sharma Tulku, Choskyi Lodru, the thirteenth incarnation.
(iii) The eighth Trangpa Tulku, Khenpo Karma Lodru Ringlak Naseng.
(iv) Damchos Yongdu, General Senior Secretary to the Gyalwa Karmapa.
(v) Jamkar Gonpo Namgyal, Personal Secretary to the Gyalwa Karmapa.
(vi) Tenzin Namgyal, Secretary in the Tibetan department of Rumtek monastery.
(vii) Dr. Urgyen Jigme Choewang (Chungde Tsering), Personal Physician and General Secretary (English Section) to the Gyalwa Karmapa.
(viii) Lama Chotbak Tenphel, General Assistant.

Compiled by:

Karma Yonten Paljor (Nik Douglas) and Karma Dolma Chosphel (Meryl White)

At the new Rumtek monastery in Sikkim.

In the water mouse and water ox years. (1972/3)

MAY IT BE AUSPICIOUS!
DUSUM KHYENPA: THE FIRST KARMAPA  (Tib: Dus-gSum-mKhyen-pa)
(1110-1193)

Dusum Khyenpa was born in the male iron tiger year (1110), in the village of Ratag, situated in the snow range of Treshod, Do Khams, Eastern Tibet. His father was a Yogi-devotee of Yamantaka, called Gompa Dorje Gon and his mother, Gangham Mingden, a natural Yogi. He was a remarkable and gifted child and was given the name of Gephel.

From his father he received the Mantra* of Eka-jata, the great secret Mother-Goddess and Protector and by his eleventh year he had propitiated and realized her fully. From Lama Jagar Bhairo he learnt the rites of the great Protector Mahakala and quickly perfected them. Obtaining miraculous powers he made a clear imprint of his hand and foot on a rock.

At the age of sixteen the unusual boy received ordination from Khenpo* Choskyi Lama and Chepa Choskyi Senge and was given the new name of Choskyi Trakpa. He studied the rites of Chakrasambhava according to the method of Palden Atisha and soon became very adept at them. At the age of nineteen he travelled to Tod Lung where he met the famous Geshe* Gya Marwa, became his disciple and learned the Doctrines of the Future Buddha Maitreya and the Prajñāpāramitā teachings.

For one year he travelled from teacher to teacher, eventually meeting Geshe Zhara, who introduced him to the Doctrines of the Kadampas. Lama Patap Nyima Trakpa, a great Translator, taught him the 'Six Treatises of Siddha Ngarjuna' and these he also quickly perfected. Through a vision of Maitreya, the Future Buddha, he was initiated into five important esoteric practices. In the presence of Khenpo Mal Duldzin and Lhelo* Yeshi Lodru he was, at the age of twenty, fully ordained as a monk and set himself the task of thoroughly studying the Vinaya precepts.

Dusum Khyenpa travelled to the Penyul Gyal* monastery and there met the great teacher Pal Galopa and others, who gave him the teachings of the great Kalachakra cycle, together with those of Mahakalakakamukha, the crown-headed form of Mahakala. At the age of thirty he decided to go to meet Je Gampopa and set off on the journey. Arriving at Dragpo Trakha he met the master Gomtsul and Shapa Lingpa, who were residing there. From Gomtsul he learnt the Mahayogini Tantra and at that time had a most auspicious vision of the white Tara Goddess. Then he proceeded to the Dragsha Gampo monastery, where he met Je Gampopa, his destined Lama.

Dusum Khyenpa presented a silk scarf and obtained precepts from Je Gampopa, who taught him the Lamrim* of the Kadampas and said, "I meditated on it! So should you!" Sometime later he begged for further teachings and was initiated into the mysteries of Hevajra. During the empowerment rites Je Gampopa manifested before him in the form of Hevajra himself. Within a period of nine days Dusum Khyenpa received the full transmission of the esoteric teachings. His Inner Heat was developed and he felt a strong feeling of well-being. Wearing only a single cotton-cloth he went into retreat for nine months, fasting and meditating under the guidance of his teacher. A great faculty for concentrated trance was born in him at this time and of the hundreds of disciples of Gampopa it was realised that he had the greatest ability at meditation. Gampopa made a prophecy about him.

Still continuing his meditation he travelled to the Til cave at Zangri, where he stayed for four months. Then he went to the Phugmo monastery where he remained for one month and five days. Attaining the power of fixing his mind on anything whatsoever he returned to his teacher and remained with him for three more years. From Rechungpa, a disciple of Jetsun Milarepa, he learnt the teachings of Naropa and Maitripa, the 'Six Doctrines' and others. As indicated by Gampopa he stayed in a cave at Ki Wo Che and there, in a vision, a woman said to him "Don't stay here! My mother is coming back!" Taking this as a good sign he spent fourteen months practising the meditation of compassion and as a result gained complete control of the Inner Heat. Many wonderful signs manifested, so he returned to Gampopa.

Dusum Khyenpa explained his realisations to Je Gampopa, who told him to continue with his meditation for some months more. Six months passed and, like the sun bursting through the clouds, he attained complete Enlightenment. Gampopa recognised the great attainment of his disciple and laying a hand on Dusum Khyenpa's head he said, "My Son, you have severed your bond with the world of phenomenal existence," adding that it would henceforth be his duty to impart his realisations to others.

According to an ancient scripture, Lord Buddha had once predicted that approximately sixteen hundred years after his own passing there would be born a man of great spiritual attainment and infinite compassion. This man would spread the Buddhist Dharma for many successive incarnations and would be known as the Karmapa, 'Man-of-Karma'. Je Gampopa and the two great Masters of that time, Lama Sakya Shri from Kashmir and Lama Shang,* recognised that Dusum Khyenpa was indeed the Karmapa foretold in the prophecy.

Acting on the instructions of Je Gampopa, Dusum Khyenpa, the first Karmapa, left for Mon and went to the residence of King Gathung, who immediately became his patron. Then he travelled all over Tibet on pilgrimage and began preaching and teaching. He spent three summers and winters on a rock at Yabzang and attained the power of being able to pass right through solid rocks and mountains. For four months he remained on the 'Flat White Boulder' at Phalung Karleb, which had been a seat of Guru Padmasambhava and there he was fed by the Dakinis. He returned to his teacher once again and was told to visit Kampo Nesang "as it would be of great benefit for living beings".

Sometime passed and then Karmapa heard of the departure of his teacher. Immediately he returned to the Dvagilha Gampo monastery, where he met two of the disciples, who were in tears. He had a vision of Je Gampopa in the sky and then engaged himself in extensive rites for the propagation of the Kagyuupa Line. It was while he was there that he promised his disciples that he would live until his eighty-fourth year.

The Protector Dorje Pal Tseg of Nesang, in the Khams province, requested that Karmapa visit the area, which he did, establishing the large Kampo Nesang monastery there in his fifty-sixth year (1165). This place is noted for the huge rock upon which the Tibetan letter 'Ka' appears whenever a new Karmapa incarnates into this world.††

One day, while practising the Light Yoga of Siddha Naropa, fifteen heavenly Dakinis appeared before him, manifesting in the circle known as Dolma Yeshe Khorlo, the Mandala of the Goddess Tara‡‡. On another occasion Karmapa miraculously travelled to Singara, Ceylon, where he had an audience with Siddha Vajraghanta Heruka,‡§ who gave him the greater initiation of Chakrasamvara. He next travelled to the heavenly realm of Gaden and again met the Future Buddha Maitreya, from whom he received many important teachings. It was at this time that the Nesang monastery was completed.

At the age of seventy-four Karmapa Dusum Khyenpa left Kampo Nesang for a place called Tri-o, in Khams, situated on the banks of the Dri river. Reaching Dampa Choschuq he stopped and preached to several thousand monks before continuing on through the province of Trehodo. Do Khams, where he intervened to end hostilities between rival villagers. In the village of Leh he established a new monastery, calling it Khams Mat. Then he travelled to Karma Gon, where he founded another monastery, which later became one of the largest and most important Kagyuupa centres. At this time Karmapa bestowed many blessings, teachings and initiations on the people, as well as miraculously healing those who were sick. He made the blind see again.

One of Je Gampopa's disciples, Jigten Sumgun, sent a message asking Karmapa to visit the Dvagilha Gampo monastery, in accordance with Gampopa's last wishes that his foremost disciple should reside there for some time. Karmapa undertook the long journey and upon his arrival began reconstructing his teacher's monastery. He bestowed blessings and initiations on the many monks and Lamas there. As soon as supervision of the alterations was completed he travelled to a place about fifty miles West of Lhasa, called Tsurpu, and there arranged for the building of a large new monastery‡¶ of that name, which became the principal seat of the Karmapa incarnates.
Karma pa: the Black Hat Lama of Tibet

Karma pa sent seven large turquoise and seventy Yaks laden with tea to the Dragsha Gampo monastery. He arranged for four copies of the greater Prajna-paramita to be written in gold and along with a further one hundred and eight volumes of religious scriptures, ten more large turquoise and fifty fine horses, he sent them all as an additional offering to the monastery of his teacher.

He made a prediction containing all the details of the place where his next incarnation would be found and left it in the care of Dragsha Rechen, one of his foremost disciples. He declared that there would be many future Karma pas, adding that there were already other incarnations of himself in existence: one being in the region of Purang (near Ladakh), one on the Nepal-Tibet borderland, another in Eastern India as an incarnation of the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara and a fourth in the Eastern world as a King named Trakpa Taye. During the last years of his life the letter ‘Ka’ appeared on the large rock at Kampo Nesang. He told his senior attendant to distribute his accumulated wealth amongst the monastic communities. Then, in the female water ox year (1193), at the age of eighty-four, he passed away and was received by numerous Dakinis. Many miraculous omens appeared at that time and auspicious relics were recovered from the funeral pyre. His foremost disciples were:

(i) De Chung Sangye Pa: Renowned for his accurate predictions.
(ii) Bat sa Trag Delwa: Renowned for his miraculous powers.
(iii) Drogon Rechen: A fine spiritual guide and teacher.
(v) Tangpa Chenpo: Founder of the Taglung subsect.
(vi) Gyalwa Lingprepa: Founder of the Drukpa branch.
(vii) Drogon Tsangpa Gyare: Founder of the Tsangpa subsect.

(1161-1211)
(viii) Sangye Yonten: From Ring Gong.
(ix) Kadampa Desieig:

Footnotes:
53 Lord of Death. Tib. Shwin-je
54 Mystic syllables.
55 Lm. 'One Hair', a secret Mother-Goddess, especially familiar to the Nyingmapa sect. A Tantric form of Mahakhaleshvar, depicted with one eye, one tooth, one breast and one hair.
56 The Great Black One.
57 Siddhi.
58 Khenpo means Abbot.
the centre of the forehead which, according to local stories, came from the mouth of the celestial hawk Garuda. The image had been designed by the eighth Gyalwa Karmapa (1507-1554) and he himself had carved the sandalwood throne. The images of the past and future Buddhas were made of clay mixed with consecrated herbs; they were decorated with precious stones and each had a ruby on its forehead. A table for offerings was placed before each image.

Seen from the outside, the monastery was a grand sight with the fast-flowing river below and the screen of mountains behind. It was built in three tiers, the uppermost roof over the high chamber of the three Buddha images was gilt surmounted by a golden "serlo", a crest ornament denoting dignity, largely used in Tibet over monasteries.

The cloisters contained eight Buddha images and four Stupas ten feet high, made of precious metals and placed under gilt canopies. All these had been brought from India in former times, three of the Stupas came from Nalanda.

The monastery of Karma was a wonderful example of the artistry of the incarnation of Gyalwa Karmapa and especially of the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth of the line; these Lamas were experts in carving, sculpture, painting and embroidery, and in smelting and casting precious metals. Karma was a unique example of the beauty of the traditional art of Tibet.

Karma Pakshi: The Second Karmapa (Tib: Karma Pak-shi) (1204-1283)

Karma Pakshi was born in the male wood rat year (1204) in Drilung Wontod, as the son of a noble family from the race of the great Tibetan King, Tri Shong Detsen. There were many auspicious signs at his birth and he was soon noticed to be quite an exceptional child. He was given the name of Chosdzin. By the age of six he was fully proficient in the art of writing, even though he had no teacher. At ten he had completed a study of the religious texts available to him and only needed to glance at a text or hear it once in order to know it fully. It was this power of natural knowledge which finally convinced his parents that he had a high spiritual birth.

His first teacher was Lama Gyalsay Bom Trakpa, a disciple of Drongchen, whom the first Karmapa had entrusted with the prediction details of his future incarnation. The Lama said to him, "Today the Heroe" and Dakius appeared in the sky like a mass of clouds. You will be blessed by Dakius!" The same night the Tutelary Deities informed the teacher that the boy was the new Karmapa and there were many auspicious indications to confirm it. He told the boy 'You are fortunate! All the Kargyudpa teachers, including Dusum Khynpa, have appeared. Now you should practise the doctrines!'

At the age of eleven Karma Pakshi received the primary ordination1 from Khathog Champa Rin and was given the name of Choskyi Lama. He was taught the mystic Dukha-songs2 of Siddha Saraha and the Ganopoopa teachings of the Makamudra. Whilst instructing him in the art of meditation his teacher found that the young Lama was already perfected in it. He was initiated into the mystic teachings of Siddha Tilopa and during this period had a vision of Avalokiteshvara, who manifested in the form with eleven heads and many arms. For ten years he practised meditation, perfected the Yoga of Inner Heat3 and frequently received visions of the Goddess Tara while reciting her Mantras.

Disturbances broke out in the region and the young Karmapa left for Tashi Pom Trag, Eastern Tibet, where he stayed in the Tsonorg Gon monastery and engaged himself in deep meditation. There he had a vision of the Protector Dorje Pal Tseg of Nesnang, who asked him to visit his territory. Karmapa undertook the journey and on his arrival there sat on a large rock close to the small Nesanang lake and once more practised his meditation. He had a most auspicious vision of Chokrasamvara, and used his powers to control many demons and demigods who were living in a nearby mountain. To the human eye the mountain appeared to dissolve in landslides. The Protector Dorje Pal Tseg then promised to protect all future disciples of the Karmapas.

Once, while visiting a place of pilgrimage called Sharthog Pung Ri, Karmapa saw many Dakinis dancing together and the Great Protector Mahakala himself, apparently busy constructing a building. Feeling that the place must be extremely suspicious Karmapa decided to found a monastery there. The Dakinis informed him that the singing of Mantras during the building would greatly help the progress. As a result of this, the monastery was completed in a remarkably short time. Karmapa resided at this place for eleven years and engaged himself in the practice of the Subtle-Breath teachings. On many occasions rainbows were seen all around him and coloured light streamed out of his body. His fame spread far and wide and many pilgrims came to receive his blessings.

In the South there was a place called Rong-Tsen Kawa Karpo, known to be inhabited by the Tutelary Chabrasamvara. No human had ever been able to find a way to reach the sacred spot but Karmapa had a vision of the route there and had soon opened it up for pilgrimage. He spread the teachings far and wide, and brought the doctrines of the Kargyudpas right to the regions on the Sino-Tibetan borders. He journeyed to Tuk, in central Tibet, to rebuild the monasteries of Dasum Khyenpa and also to revitalise the spread of the Buddhist Dharma in the provinces of Dri and Den. Then he visited eighteen regions of Southern Tibet and stayed for a while in the great monastery of Karma Gon. Hearing of excessive hunting in the country of Jiang he sent a message prohibiting it.

Karmapa travelled to the important Tsurphu monastery, badly damaged during local wars. Completely rebuilding it he spent six years there and bestowed many teachings and initiations on the Lamas, monks and lay-people. He left for Tsang, in Western Tibet, passing by the Lam lake from which the great Lake-Goddess Lam Tso Lhama appeared and presented him with a golden elixir-jar.

At this time China was partially under Mongol rule. The Emperor of Mongolia was called Mongkor Gen (Mongka) and his brother Kublai (Gorbe La) was ruler of the Sino-Tibetan border regions on his behalf. From Kublai an envoy was sent bearing an invitation for Karmapa to visit China. At the age of forty-seven he set out on the long journey. Travelling for a period of three years he spread the Kargyudpa teachings widely and reached the great Wuk Tok palace in the female wood rabbit year (1255).

The Sakya Pandita, Kunga Gyaltshen, had been staying in the palace for some years previously, but had passed away before the arrival of the Kargyudpa party. Karmapa was highly honoured and there were many fine celebrations, culminating in his blessings being bestowed on Kublai and his court. By this time the Sakya sect was firmly established in China, through the influence of the Sakya Pandita, who expounded the Buddhist teachings to the Mongolians. Unfortunately political factions resented the arrival of the Gyalwa Karmapa, and threatened inter-sectarian schisms. Karmapa decided to return to Tibet, despite repeated requests from Kublai, who demanded that he must remain. He left the palace and travelled to the Mi Nya province, there establishing a large temple and many smaller ones. Thousands were converted to the way of Kargyudpa Buddhism.

In the second month of the male fire dragon year (1256) he reached Amdo Tsong Kha region of North Eastern Tibet. In the meantime there had been disputes between the Mongolian rulers: Kublai had been ousted by Mongkor Gen, who now ruled over Mongolia and a large part of China. Hearing of the wondrous deeds of the Karmapa the Emperor invited him back to China. The invitation was accepted and upon his return Karmapa was very royally received at the new Emperor's palace. He bestowed many teachings and initiations.

On the nineteenth day of the eighth month of that year (1256) he visited Sen Shing, Tao Si and Er Kaow, where in a debate he defeated many non-Buddhist Sages and converted them all to Kargyudpa Buddhism. On the twelfth day of the ninth month he performed the miracle of stopping the snow and the wind, even though it was the middle of winter. He also arranged for all prisoners in the region to be set free. On another occasion Karmapa recited Mantras to drive away hordes of insects which had attacked the crops. Other pests were likewise dispelled by casting a single handful of soil at them. He then returned to Tibet, on the way establishing a new monastery at Tao Hou Chu Makha, where he stayed for several months.

After four years Karmapa reached the Sino-Tibetan border region of Ila, where he was informed that the Emperor Mongkor had died, to be succeeded by his son Arik Boga, who had subsequently lost a war with Kublai. Thus Kublai established himself as Supreme Khan and Emperor of both Mongolia and China (in 1260). Karmapa was much grieved to hear of all the fighting and bloodshed and spent seven days in the region, meditating and saying prayers for the future peace of China. On the last day of his meditation he had a vision of Lord Buddha standing before him. In this vision he was instructed to arrange for the building of a large statue of the Buddha, twenty-six arm-spans in height, in order to establish a lasting peace and for the salvation of the thousands killed in the war.

The Emperor Kublai Khan, hearing that Karmapa was in Ila and remembering how seven years earlier he had refused Kublai's request to prolong his stay in the palace, sent thirty thousand soldiers to arrest him. When they confronted Karmapa they were immediately paralysed by his two-finger Mudra, but feeling compassion for them he restored their movements and freely allowed them to seize him. They wrapped him in a cloth and tried to tie him up, but his body was like a rainbow, with no substance and they found the task impossible. Then they forced him to drink poison, but far from having any effect blinding rays of light began to stream from his body and the soldiers were very afraid. They took him to a high mountain and pushed him off, but he glided down, landed on a lake and travelled across the surface like a duck. Unsuccessfully they tried to burn him, throwing him with two of his disciples into a blazing fire. Streams of water came out of their bodies and soon put out the flames. The Emperor Kublai Khan heard of the events and ordered that Karmapa should be locked up without any provisions. For a period of seven days people could observe heavenly beings providing him with food and drink. The Emperor relented and became his disciple. For some time he remained in the great palace and was highly honoured.

Karmapa recalled the vision with the instruction for the building of a large statue of Lord Buddha. The task was soon to be undertaken, seven large loads of gold being sent to Tsurpu monastery, accompanied by a message that a smith from Tsang who was living there was one of Karmapa's manifestations and should be put in charge of the work. His disciple Den Gom, having been sent back from China to Tsurpu, supervised details of the construction of the great statue. Materials and funds were continually sent from China so that the work could be successfully undertaken. After three years it was completed, but the image curiously appeared to be leaning over to the left.

Karmapa spent six years in China giving teachings, blessings and initiations. He built many monasteries and temples. His grateful disciples honoured him with many gifts, which he threw into a spring near Shang Tu before leaving the country. Upon his return to the Tsurpu monastery, some two years later, the presents were all miraculously recovered from a pool nearby.

The return journey passed along the borders of Mongolia, where Karmapa found a huge golden roof. It had been taken as booty when the Mongol army had attacked India, but left behind on their way home as so many soldiers were sick that they could no longer carry it. Karmapa took the roof to Kha Chu, on the Sino-Tibetan border, but a bad omen indicated it would be wise to leave one half of it there. The other piece was taken with him to Tsurpu, where it was bent in half and placed on top of the monastery along with two golden peacocks and a golden pinnacle. At Tsurpu monastery, Karmapa sat in meditation posture before the huge new statue of Lord Buddha, lining his body up with the tilt of the image. Slowly he straightened himself up into a vertical position and simultaneously the statue did likewise.

The Siddha Urgyenpa, a disciple of Rigdzin Go Tsangpa, visited the Karmapa and imparted several additional teachings of Siddha Tilopa to him. Karmapa told him that he would be the teacher of his next incarnation. A couple named Choshel and Changden, from Tippi Langkor in Southern Tibet, came to Tsurpu on pilgrimage and had an audience with Karmapa. He told them that his next incarnation would be born as their son and that he had already transmitted part of himself into the womb of the woman.

FOOTNOTES

98 Who ruled wisely (c.740-798), and constructed the great Samye monastery.
99 Vina
100 Tib. Rabjam Grolsal.
101 Tib. Dbyer ba thogrgyang.
102 Tib. gDlam-gso.
103 Usually of wrathful appearance, coloured blue or black.
104 It was, traditionally, the first time that Mantras were sung in this way.
105 Tib. 'Pha lPam, the subtle nerves and breath. A Yoga technique developed by the Siddhas.
106 Started by Bhrti, a teacher-chef-faith.
107 Tib. Pum-ba.
108 According to H. Richardson, Karmapa joined Kublai at Rongul Serdor, which he loses somewhere near Tsashen.[in J.R.A.S., 1938].
109 The Sakya Pandita (1182-1251), a disciple of Sakya Shribhadra from Kashmir, received the following letter from Godan Khan in the year 1246: "I, the most powerful and prosperous Prince Godan, wish to inform the Sakya Pandita Guru Gyaltsen that we need a Lama to advise my ignorant people on how to conduct themselves morally and spiritually. I need someone to pray for the welfare of my deceased parents. It would, of course, be easy for me to send a large body of troops to bring you here, but in doing so harm and unhappiness might be brought to the innocent. So come quickly."
110 In c.1247 the Sakya Pandita was appointed Mongolian Vice-Regent in Tibet by Godan Khan, grandson of Ghenghiz Khan and Governor of the Northern regions bordering on Tibet. After various disputes as to who should be Supreme Khan the power passed from Godan's family to another branch of the Ghenghiz line, and the grandson Mongka became Grand Khan. The Sakya Pandita died just before this change and his nephew Phagpa (who died in 1240, having preserved the Mongol script) diplomatically switched his loyalties to Kublai, Mongka's younger brother. Phagpa entombed Kublai in 1260, and spent most of his remaining years in the court of the Emperor. It was likely that he was there during the stay of Karmapa in the palace.

THE LINE OF KARMAPAS: FROM THE TIBETAN

Five months passed, and then, on the third day of the third month of the female water sheep year (1283) he passed away, having performed the rite of Consciousness-Transference. There were many curious and auspicious omens and on the ninth day the cremation was performed. Numerous relics were recovered from the ashes, among them those of his heart, tongue and eyes, as well as dazzling conch-like forms twisted to the right and interconnected letters, symbolic signs and images. He was in his eightieth year. His foremost disciples were

(i) DRUPTOP URGYENPA: The Siddha from Urgyen.
(ii) NYENRES GEDUN BUM: A great Lama, who taught the next Karmapa incarnation.
(iii) MACHAWA CHANGCHUB TSONTRU: A great scholar and teacher of the Madhyamika.

44
According to Richardson, he went to the grand palace of Zi Ra Un Do in On Ge Yul, South of Mongka’s headquarters at Karakorum.

23 The Tantric “paralyzing” gesture (Mudas).

24 Khusab Khan passed an edict declaring: “In Tibet and other countries you may now practice your religion according to your desire, and let you offer prayers for me.”

25 According to Marco Polo: “The palace is the largest that was ever seen. It has a very high roof. Inside, the walls of the hall and chambers are all covered with gold and silver and decorated with pictures of dragons and birds and hundered and various breeds of beasts and scenes of battle. The ceiling is similarly adorned and so large that it would serve for six thousand people in it. The whole building is so immense and well-made that no improvement could be made. The roof is all shingled with scarlet, green, blue and yellow.”

26 In The Travels of Marco Polo (Tr: Ronald Latham, Faber Society, London, 1968) there is the following interesting reference to the-going-on at Khusab Khan’s court: “Here is another remarkable fact about these eneniarchs (Lamas)., a Bauh‰ to which, for instance, are the two stars in the sky. A man of such a rank as a Bauh‰ is seated in his high-eating table, which is raised more than eight cubits above the floor, and the cups are on the table of the Bauh‰. A good ten pacers distant from the table, and are full of wine and milk and other drinks, these Bauh‰es drink by their enchantment and their art that the full cups rise up of their own accord from the floor on which they have been standing and come up to the Great Khan without anyone touching them. And this they do in the sight of ten thousand men. What I have told you is the plain truth, without a word of falsehood.”

The Bauh‰ referred to seems to be the followers of Karmapa Pakshi, since he was the influential enemiarch of that time. In the memoirs of Lama Phagspa (the Sakya) he mentions that Khusab Khan was friendly with a stranger from a faraway land. Undoubtedly this refers to Marco Polo, who lived for many years in the court of Khusab.

27 Urgyenpa was born in Yerdo Tang, Eastern Tibet, in the year 1230. He took ordinations from Bodong Kingsapa and studied with Go Tsangpa Gyatso (founder of the Tsangpa Kargyud sect). He visited many holy places and travelled on pilgrimage to the land of Urgyen (where Padmasambhava was born), where he was the great Dukje Vajrapani and thus became a lama. He travelled on pilgrimage all around India, visited Ceylon and together with the Ceylonese King contributed to the repair of the great Bodhi Gaya temple. He visited Thruppo monastery and then went to China, where he became a teacher of the Emperor. After his return to Tibet he passed away there at the age of seventy. He had many disciples, the foremost of whom was Gyelwa Yang Gonpa.

28 Tib. Palywa. One of the “Six Yogins” of the Siddha Naropa.

29 In the “Vile Annals” of Zhoua Pal (Translated by G. N. Rossich, Calcutta 1953) is clearly given Karmapa Pakshi’s birth date as the male wood rat year (1204) and his passing as the female water sheep year (1228), mentioning that he was in his eightieth year when he left his body. Other Tibetan sources disagree in the year of his birth, which is put two years later, the male fire tiger year (1206). All are in agreement with the year of his passing. It seems that the records of Zhoua Pal are more likely to be reliable.

Rangdorje was born on the eighth day of the first month of the male wood monkey year (1284), in the evening, just as the moon was rising, on the roof of a house in Tingri Langkor, Southern Tibet. After his birth he sat cross-legged and said, “The moon has risen!” His mother took this to be a bad omen and threw ashes into his mouth, but his father recalled the words of Karma Pakshi and restrained her from acting further. Consequently the boy did not speak again until he was three years of age.

When he was three, while playing with some other children, he suddenly asked them to make him a throne out of cut squares of turf. He sat upon it, produced a black hat, which he put on his head and then declared that he was the Karmapa. He told his friends that they were indulging in Samsara, the cycle of births and deaths, but that he had already transcended it. The children went off and told their parents about the remarkable things that he had said.

His parents took him on a pilgrimage to the image of Lord Buddha at Tingri and on perceiving it he experienced the sensation of a rainbow merging into him. He learnt some Buddhist precepts from his father and knew the alphabet without having it taught to him. In his dreams he had many pure visions.

At the age of five he told his father that he would like to see the Siddha Urgyenpa, so they travelled together to the place where he was staying. The day before they reached there Urgyenpa had a dream in which Karma Pakshi appeared and told him that he would be coming to see him on the following day. Early in the morning Urgyenpa told his disciples of the likelihood of the auspicious event, a throne was set up and a large procession organised. The child arrived, accompanied by his father, went straight up to the high throne and sat upon it. "Who are you that you sit upon the throne of my teacher?" asked the Siddha. "I am the famous Lama Karmapa!" replied the boy. Urgyenpa then asked him to relate how they had met before, to which the boy replied, "One great Siddha once came to me. He was you and told me about all the pilgrimages and travels made throughout that marvellous land of India". He then climbed down from his throne, prostrated before the Siddha and said that in the previous life he had been the teacher, but that in this life he would become Urgyenpa’s disciple. The prediction details left by Karma Pakshi were consulted and it was established beyond any doubt that the child was the Karmapa.

From Siddha Urgyenpa Karmapa received the empowerments of Chakrasamvara, Heruka, Kalarubhaka and Vajrakila,101 as well as the special teachings of Vajrapani. At the age of seven he received the primary ordination from Kunen Sherab at the Tar Phawa monastery, and studied the teachings of Pratimoksha great inspiration and composed a treatise on astrology, which later became established as a new system. On a mountain range behind Tsurphu Karmapa Rangjung Dorje founded a large new monastery with many caves for meditation and called it Dechen Yangri. There he composed another treatise on astrology, called "The Hidden Inner Meaning." He travelled to Southern Tibet and founded an hermitage at Nako. In the provinces of Kong, Lug and Hal he preached to the people, and established a large monastery at Trak Ru, near Bhutan. In the tiger year (1326) he visited Lhasa, preached there extensively and bestowed initiations and blessings. The Mongolian Emperor Toghtemur, who was ruling all China, invited Karmapa to visit him and this he accepted, travelling via Tsurphu. Continuing the journey he reached Dam Shung in the Kham province. There it suddenly started to thunder and snow in an unusual season. Karmapa meditated in the portents of this strange occurrence and found that it indicated the imminent death of the Emperor, so he turned back to Tsurphu and passed the winter there. During this period he sent all the Chinese representatives, who had been with him to organise his journey, on pilgrimage to various parts of Tibet.

On the first day of the second month of the water monkey year (1332), at the beginning of spring, Karmapa again set out for China. When he reached Kham he decided to speed up the journey, in the hope of meeting Emperor Toghtemur before his death. But on arriving at Chin Chow On, in China, sudden flashes in the sky informed him that he was too late, so he set up camp and performed the death-rites. The journey was continued and the party arrived at the Taiya Tu palace on the eighteenth day of the tenth month of the monkey year (1332), where it was confirmed that the Emperor had indeed died on the day of the sudden lightening flashes. Rinchen Pal, who was in charge of the palace, officially welcomed Karmapa, as did all the members of the Royal family, the Ministers and the monks and laity. All honoured him highly and received his blessings. He made a prophecy about an accident which would befall Rinchen Pal.

After one month Karmapa Rangjung Dorje performed great ceremonies and rites in memory of the deceased Emperor. His brother, Toghtemur, was to succeed, but the astrologers had advised a six-month wait, and E-le Temur was temporarily acting as Regent. Then, on the fifteenth day of the first month of the female water bird year (1333) the new Emperor was ceremonially enthroned by Karmapa, who bestowed blessings and initiations on him and his family. In return the Emperor gave him the honorific title "All-knowing of Religion, the Buddha Karmapa." Hundreds of thousands of people were witness to the highly auspicious events.

On the fifteenth day of the fifth month of the male wood dog year (1334)
KARMAPA. THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

Karmapa returned to Tibet, establishing many new monasteries on the journey. He visited Riwo Tse Nga, the great mountain pilgrimage place of the Bodhisattva Manjusri, in Western China, where he performed many rites and had an auspicious vision of the Bodhisattva himself. He reached Tsurphu in the ninth month of the female wood pig year (1335).

Karmapa visited Mi Nya, travelling to all the Kargyu monasteries there in order to revitalise the Dharma. While giving the empowerment of Ashalakshmi to the people a rainbow appeared in the sky overhead and flowers fell down from it. Many of the Bonpos and non-Buddhists in the region were thus quickly converted. In the same period a local war broke out between the provinces of Wang Jo and Mi Nya. A large group of merchants, accompanying herds of some three thousand Yaks, who were in the region of Mi Nya, were suddenly seized and threatened with death. Karmapa intervened and saved them. Then he helped to make a peaceful settlement between the warring parties, explaining to them the value of compassionate action in everyday life. He then returned to Karma Gon.

All the Protectors of North Eastern Tibet, especially in the region of Mi Nya, asked Karmapa to remain and continue spreading the Dharma there. On the twenty-fifth day of the eighth month of the female wood pig year (1335) he preached in the Dam province of Khampa. In the ninth month of the same year he returned to Tsurphu and there received a new invitation to visit China. Instead he travelled to Lhasa, reaching there on the tenth day of the eleventh month of the same year, where he was met by another messenger from the Chinese Emperor, again inviting him to visit China. While in the vicinity of Lhasa Karmapa Rangjung Dorje visited the great Samye monastery and the famous Chim Phu temple, where he stayed in deep meditation for five months. During this period he had an auspicious vision of Guru Padmasambhava and the Mystic Circle of Dakinis. He arranged for the preparation of new copies of the Buddhist scriptures, the Kanjur and Tanjur.

In the eighth month of the male fire rat year (1336) Karmapa set out for China once more, visiting Tsurphu on the way. He performed many rites and ceremonies on the long journey and eventually arrived at the Tai-ya Tu palace. The Chinese Emperor was waiting for him at the gates and welcomed him warmly. There were great celebrations.

Karmapa spent eleven days in each of the palaces of Tai-ya Tu, Tai-ya Tsi and Tai-ya Sri imparting teachings and bestowing initiations. In the great Tai-ya Tu palace he founded a new monastery especially for the Karmapas, in which the Mandala of red four-armed Avalokitesvara was constructed and painted; in addition several beautiful statues of the great Karmapa teachers were installed in the new monastery. The palace Mandala of Chakrasamvara was presented to Karmapa by the Emperor.

THE LINE OF KARMAPAS. FROM THE TIBETAN

Some influential Ministers became anxious at the presence of Karmapa, feeling that the influence of his new Buddhism might interfere with their political ambitions. They arranged for some temples to be destroyed in China and Mongolia and demanded that there should be an immediate inquiry. This was duly arranged and both the Emperor and Karmapa were called to speak. In answer to charges that he was furthering his own political interests Karmapa replied that he had come to China at the request of the Supreme Emperor and that if there was any embarrassment about his presence then he would leave. He was much saddened by this turn of events, particularly since his sole motive for coming to China was that he hoped the Buddhist Dharma would be of help to the people; he had no political ambitions. The Chinese Emperor was very upset and begged Karmapa to remain.

After performing ceremonies to put an end to a severe drought, which had for some time been affecting certain parts of China, Karmapa let it be known that the time was approaching when he would leave his body. The Emperor fervently requested that he remain alive longer and continue his work in China, but Karmapa told him that the moment had come for his departure; that he would be reborn in the region of Kongpo and that he would return to China and see him again in his next incarnation.

To his personal secretary, Kunzok Rinchen, he gave precise details of where and how to find his next incarnation, adding that he would declare himself at the appropriate time. Then, on the fourteenth day of the sixth month of the female earth rabbit year (1339), while in front of the great Chakrasamvara Mandala, having just completed the full rites and distributed the sacramental pills to all the participants, he passed away.

There was great lamentation. However, very early in the morning of the next day, the sentries of the palace looked up in the sky and there in the full moon they could clearly see Karmapa. Immediately the bells were rung to awaken the Emperor and Empress, who looked out of the palace window and saw their Precious Teacher clearly visible in the Mandala of the moon. The very next day a fine craftsman was summoned and instructed to carve carefully a likeness of the Gyalwa Karmapa as he had appeared in the moon. This image when completed was most beautiful and remained one of the most precious possessions of the Emperor.

At the time of his passing Rangjung Dorje, the third Karmapa, was in his fifty-six year. His foremost disciples were:

(i) YAGDE PANCHEN: A fine Lama. He was also a disciple of Yungtong Dorje (1284-1376), the Sakya leader who was also greatly influenced by Karmapa Rangjung Dorje.

(ii) KUNZHEN DOLPOPA SHERAB GYALTSEN: From Dolpo, North-Western ROLPE DORJE: THE FOURTH KARMAPA (Tib: Rol-pa'i sDo-rje) (1340-1383)

Rolpe Dorje was born on the eighth day of the third month of the male iron tiger year (1340), at sunrise, in A-la Rong of the Kongpo province. His father was called Sonam Dondrup, and his mother, Zobsa Tsordru, was a natural wisdom-Dakini. While still in her womb he could be heard reciting the 'Mani' Mantra and his body frequently assumed strange postures, which caused her to shake. As soon as he was born he sat cross-legged and said, "O mani Padme Hum! Hri! I am the Karampa!" Then he recited the letters of the alphabet. His father was very sceptical but his mother told him not to doubt as she had had many highly auspicious dreams.

At the age of three the child was taken to Nyangpo and there he said to his mother I am the reincarnation of Karma Pakshi. I shall have many disciples in this world, just you wait and see!" He assumed the meditation posture of Amitabha, the Buddha of Boundless Light, and then told his mother not to mention his conversations to anyone else. He then added that he would eventually go to Tsurphu and Karma Gon and that he already had many fine disciples in the Imperial palace of China.

A search party, looking for the Karmapa incarnation in the Kongpo province, heard of the remarkable child. Led by the personal secretary of the previous Karmapa they were quickly convinced that the new incarnation had been found and he was taken to the Dragsha monastery of Je Gampopa. Upon his arrival there he immediately pointed to the statues of past Karmapas, saying 'That is me!' to each of them.

Once the ascetic Gon Gyal asked him about the Tushita heaven, explaining that one of the disciples of the previous Karmapa had had a vision of him living there. Karampa Rolpe Dorje replied, "Yes, I went there in the form of a unicorn and sometimes was a vulture. On the whole, Tushita is not far off!"

On being pressed further he said "In Tushita all the waters are Elixir, the stones are jewels. The things of men have no value there."

At the age of six Rolpe Dorje received the primary ordination from Tokden Ye-Gyalwa, a disciple of his previous incarnation. At nine he began a deep study of the Chakrasamvara Tantra, the Mahayoginitantrasara, the 'Five Treatises' of Maitreya and the 'Heart Drop' teachings of Vimalakirti. The full empowerment of the Kangyur was given to him, together with the transmission of the 'Six Doctrines' of Naropa. Then he travelled to Tsari, where he had many visions of Teachers of the Kargyudpa Lineage and received the secret rites of Korukulla. Many songs were sung by him at this time.

Karampa travelled to the great Tsurphu monastery and then to Phagmo.

monastery, where he explained his understanding of non-duality and had a vision of the Goddess Vajrasaro. At the age of thirteen he visited Lhasa, where he was greatly honoured by the Rules, Tai Situ Chaughub Gyalten. He made offerings at all the main shrines in the city and had wonderful visions of the Tutelary Deities. Then he returned to Tsurphu for the continuation of his studies.

From Kechen Drup Pal he received the next ordination at Tsurphu, and was given the name Dharmakirti. The teachings of the Vinaya, the Pratimoksha and the Karikas were passed to him and he received the initiation of red Manjushroha. He had visions of the Bodhisattva Vajrapani and other Deities.

At the age of eighteen he received the final ordination from Kechen Drup Pal. For a while he studied philosophy and religious debate with the most learned Lamas of Tsurphu and then invited Gyalwa Yung Tonpa to come from Ri Wo Che and impart the esoteric teachings of Tilopa to him. Once Yung Tonpa, a disciple of his previous incarnation, asked for evidence of his former lifetime. The young Lama told him stories of how he had converted the Mongols and the jealousies that he had made.

Karampa Rolpe Dorje observed all the Vinaya precepts. He forbade anyone to bring even the smallest piece of meat into his presence. Always keeping many books around him it was said that he was able to read them in his dreams. He also knew more than sixty different kinds of scripts and always amazed his teachers with his vast knowledge. Once, at Dechen, he gave full description of the Imperial palace of Tai-yi Tu, in China, stating the number of inhabitants and the names there of all the officials there. He said "Keep it in mind, and later when we reach there you will find it to be true!" Shortly afterwards an invitation was received to visit China.

On the twentieth day of the fifth month of the male earth dog year (1358), at the age of nineteen, the journey was started. Lightning suddenly struck at places on the way, without doing any harm at all, so Karampa took this to be a favourable omen. Throughout the journey he preached and bestowed blessings on the people. At one place, near China, he met five Indian Holy Men, who presented him with three precious statues; one being of Lord Buddha in meditation, and two others made by Nagarjuna depicting miracles of Buddha's life.

Karampa reached the Tai-yi Tu palace on the eighteenth day of the eleventh month of the male iron rat year (1360) and was warmly welcomed by Emperor Togthon Temur, who was especially delighted since he had been a devoted disciple of the previous Karmapa. He bestowed the initiations of Vajrayogini and Chakrasamvara and preached extensively to the people. To the Emperor he gave the special teachings of Akshobhya and composed a number of treatises for his benefit. Karampa spent several years in China and established many monasteries.
THE LINE OF KARMAPAS: FROM THE TIBETAN

Visiting Amdo Tsong Kha, in the North-East, he composed a treatise,141 which was a great help to the community.

Once he visited Kam Chu Ling,142 and near the throne in the monastery there appeared a flower unseen previously in that region. It had one hundred stalks springing up from one root, each stalk having one hundred flowers, and each flower having one thousand golden petals, with a red centre and a yellow stamen. Everyone was amazed. At this time there was a plague in the region, but he effectively subdued it.

At another place in China he delivered a sermon before a great multitude of people, many of whom spoke different languages. On the right side of his throne stood Mongol and Uighur translators, and to the left were Mi Nya and Chinese translators. Thus his disciples were clearly able to understand his words. He set numerous district officials and important personalities of China, Mongolia, Uighur, and Mi Nya on the path of highest Enlightenment. He pacified revolts, stopped famines and eased droughts.

Karmapa foresaw a great change of events in China, and said “Harm will come to the Imperial throne. And soon I must myself leave for Tibet.” Those Ministers who heard him say this were very upset and refused to allow him to leave. Then he said “Marvellous indeed is the play which comes to its end before a large audience. The duty of a monk is to go wherever a peaceful place is to be found and to help spread the doctrines through compassion to all beings.” These words were written down by the officials and were preserved as a sacred relic. He was granted permission to leave.

He proceeded Northwards and then on to Mi Nya, where he met Prince Ratna and Princess Punyadhari and preached to them. At Zor Gon Moche he established a large monastery and made a rule that those who had received his blessings on one day should not come again on the next. He used to dispense blessings without interruption from morning until sunset and once continued to do so for nineteen days without a break.

A great epidemic spread in the province of Kam Chu, and Karmapa was asked to help drive it away. “Well don’t wake me up!” he said, and then seemed to be asleep. Sometime passed and then a loud bump was heard on the roof of the monastery and he awoke saying, “Just now I assumed the shape of a huge Garuda143 bird and devoured all the demons who had sent the epidemic. I came down on the roof of the house, which was why the loud bump was to be heard.” The epidemic disappeared completely.

One day a family brought a young boy to him for the primary ordination. Instead of giving the expected one he bestowed the fuller ordination and at the same time (1361) made a prediction that the child would eventually become a great spiritual leader. This was Lobzang Trakpa, who later became the great... teacher Je Tsongkhapa, founder of the Gelugpa sect. Karmapa was asked to remain in the region longer, but he decided he had to leave.

Once Princess Punyadhari told Karmapa that she had had a dream in which she was told that if anyone made a Buddha image the size of the Yang Pen rock then it would be of great benefit to all. Karmapa told her “Make it! I shall also assist you.” When the image-makers did not know how to do it he himself laid out the outlines of the image with white pebbles on the slopes of the mountain. Then the huge appliqué banner was prepared by seven hundred artists, who worked continuously for thirteen months. Karmapa sent a considerable fortune on the preparation of it and himself supervised all the details. When it was finished it was eleven full arm-spans between the right and left ears of the central Buddha figure. To the left and right were images of Manjusri and Maitreya and below the lotus throne were embroidered many beautiful birds and animals. It was consecrated by Karmapa and hung over the huge rock on auspicious days.

After the completion of the banner Princess Puyadhari presented it to the Karma-Kargyudpa sect and it was preserved at Nyangpo. She invited Karmapa to Liu-pin Shan and when he reached there strong rumours spread that troops were likely to invade. Karmapa said “If it is true that I have never harmed living beings, then let the soldiers not come!” and they did not. Then he returned to Tibet, to the Karma Gon monastery.

In the male earth monkey year (1368) the Yuan dynasty of the Mongol Emperors fell and the first Chinese Emperor of the Ming dynasty, named Tai Tsung, sent messages to all the most highly revered Lamas of Tibet at that time, requesting them to visit him. Karmapa was among those who were invited, but being unable to go personally he sent an envoy of learned monks and Lamas to represent him.

On the way to Karma Gon while crossing the Shamnam Dzung river, he met the incarnation of Shamar Trakpa Senge, recognised him and named him Kha Chod Wangpo. After a period of extensive preaching he reached Karma Gon, where he indirectly predicted that he would soon be leaving his body. He said “I shall not die right now. Don’t be afraid! But afterwards, if I should fall ill in a pure place where numerous stags are roaming about, then please don’t scatter my books!” Before going to the Northern region of Chang he indicated that there would be a need for scented wood for the funeral pyre and said “I suspect there is a scarcity of firewood in the North, therefore cut a large quantity of Juniper wood and take it along.”

Karmapa Rolpe Dorje journeyed towards a solitary mountain in the far North, preaching extensively on the way. He set up camp on the barren mountainside and said “Should the remains of a good monk be cremated on the summit of this mountain, then Chinese troops will not invade Tibet!” There, at the age of forty-four, beginning on the fourth day of the seventh month of the female water pig year (1383) he showed signs of being indisposed. On the night of the fifteenth of that month he performed a ceremony, packed up all his personal books and ritual items, explaining that they should be carefully preserved for his future incarnation who would be reborn in Nyang Dam, circumambulated the Holy Objects fifty-five times and passed away.

His remains were cremated on the mountain, amidst numerous auspicious signs such as rainbows, glowing lights, tormos and showers of flowers. Disciples saw him in the sky, sitting inside a rainbow circle, riding on a lion and sitting on the sun, the moon and the stars. Many remarkable relics were recovered from the pyre. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SHAMAR KHA CHOD WANGPO: The second Shamar Tulkus. (1350-1405)
(ii) DRIGUNG GYOSKYI GYALPO:
(iii) DRIGUNG LOTSAVA:
(iv) JE TSONGKHAPA: Who established the Gelugpa sect. (1357-1419)

FOOTNOTES:
129 A Jakmi Jakmi: A Wisdom-holding Goddess. Generally there are believed to be 108 at any one time.
130 Tub. Cang-sher Khyetsa
131 Gom. Amrin
132 Tub. Grelyon
133 Tub. mila 'gyu ri' je mna.
134 Tub. Byams chos
135 A Jakmi who holds a bow and arrow made of flowers.
136 Punya Thub. founded by Lama Drango Gyatso.
137 (1302-1364).
139 Tub. Nyersang.
140 In Kham.
141 Sado.
142 All these statues are preserved at the new Komtek monastery.
143 Tub. Dorje Naljampa.
144 The 'Yiwa Nyenri',
145 Kan-chou, in Kansu province.
DEBZIN SHEGPA: THE FIFTH KARMAPA (Tib: De-bzhin gshegs pa) (1384-1413)

Debzhin Shegpa was born on the eighteenth day of the sixth month of the male wood rat year (1384), at sunrise, in the region of Nyang Dam in Southern Tibet. His father, Guru Rinchen, was a Tantric, and his mother was a Yogini called Lhama Kyi. Even before his birth he could be heard reciting the 'Mani' Mantra and the alphabet inside his mothers womb. At the time of his birth his mother and numerous other people dreamed of the coming of Karmapa, of rainbows made from rainbows, showers of flowers and sweet fragrances. As soon as he was born auspicious rainbows appeared everywhere. The child wiped his face and said "I take refuge in the Buddha, the Dharma and the Order of monks. I am the Karmapa! Om Mani Padme Hum, Hri!"

The Lamas at Tsurphu heard of the birth of the remarkable child. He was brought to the monastery, where he was immediately recognised by Shamar Kha Chod Wangpo, who had been his disciple in the previous incarnation. At the age of seven he received the primary ordination from Khempo Nyapu Sonam Zango and studied the Vinyayas, the Pratimoksha and the Karikas. He was given the name Chosphal Zango. For some years he engaged himself in intense studies. Visiting the Kongpo region, he stopped the fighting which had broken out there and then travelled to Karma Gon and Ri Wo Che, where he spread the Dharma widely.

At the age of twenty, in the horse year (1402), he took the final ordination from Khempo Sonam Zango and Yon Lowa, at the Namdrub Riwo monastery in Kongpo, along with eighty other monks. Under the guidance of the most learned scholars he studied the Prasnepanamita and other related teachings and the great Pandita Kazhipa Rinchen Pal taught him the essence of Buddhist philosophy. He spread the teachings continuously and many influential people from all over Tibet came to take refuge with him. By this time he was considered to be one of the greatest spiritual teachers.

In the female wood bird year (1405), at the age of twenty-two, Karmapa Debzhin Shegpa received an invitation to visit China. The letter from the Emperor Tai-Ming Chen was written in gold letters and it requested that he make the journey as it could be of great benefit to the Chinese people. Karmapa accepted the invitation and set out on the journey, travelling via the Karma Gon and Lha Ten Gon monasteries, accompanied by Situ Choskyi Gyaltsen and many monks and Lamas.

On the twenty-first day of the first month of the fire pig year (1407) the party reached the outskirts of Nanking, where they were warmly welcomed and Karmapa was placed on an elephant. At the gates of the city the Emperor himself* received Karmapa, who presented him with a golden 'Wheel of Dharma' and received an auspicious white conch-shell in return. Many thousands of monks gathered to pay their homage, and all received his blessings.

Karmapa bestowed the empowerments and initiations of the red Avalokiteshvara and Hevajra. The sixteenth Arhat, the Protector of the Dharma in China, appeared before him whilst the Emperor was present. For the next hundred days Karmapa performed wonderful miracles, one for each day and the Emperor was so impressed that he referred to Karmapa as the Tathagata.

On the first day there appeared an iridescent cloud of five colours of most beautiful hue, expanding and contracting in various ways and as brilliant as the Wish-granting Gem. Then a ray of light, like the full moon, shone out above and around a Stupa containing Holy relics and two bands of golden rays rose up above the place where Karmapa was staying. On the sixth day there were seen a large number of iridescent clouds shaped like begging bowls, which filled the whole sky and in the South-Western sky there appeared many figures of Arhats, each followed by a large retinue. On another occasion flowers fell from the sky, some fully open and others in bud; their stems and upper parts were like crystal and they floated everywhere, both high and low. After that a five-coloured rainbow appeared above the temple where Karmapa had prepared the Mandala of initiation. Then more Heavenly Beings appeared, carrying begging-bowls and pilgrim staffs; some were wearing hats and others held Yak-tail whisks, and moved about among the clouds. On the eighteenth night there appeared two heavenly lamps of a very intense red colour, as well as other lights of different kinds and they lit up the whole sky. In the distance Gods could be seen adorned with precious jewels, riding on blue lions and white elephants. The Emperor instructed his finest artists to paint these events on a silk scroll, which was then sent to the Tsurphu monastery.

The Emperor presented Karmapa with seven hundred measures of silver objects, and bestowed upon him the honorific title 'Precious Religious King, Great Loving One of the West, Mighty Buddha of Peace'. He told Karmapa that there were too many different sects of Buddhism and that it would be much better if there was only one, the Karma-Kagyudpa, offering to bring this about by force.

Karmapa explained to him that this was not his desire, nor could it be beneficial to humanity, since mankind requires varying methods of teaching and that in reality all sects are but one great family of Buddhism. Despite pressures from his Ministers the Emperor Ming Chen understood the advice Karmapa had given him and withdrew his forces from the borders of Tibet, even though they were in a great position of strength and could easily have overrun the country. The Emperor took teachings and initiations from Karmapa, eventually becoming a great Bodhisattva himself.

H.H. Gyalwa Karmapa displays the Black Dorje Hat (Vajra Mokur) during a special ceremony. It was presented to the fifth Karmapa by the Chinese Emperor Tai Ming Chen. The origin of the Vajra Hat goes back to very ancient times, when the Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara was presented with it by the other Enlightened Ones. The Gyalwa Karmapa is an emanation of Avalokiteshvara, and in the custodian of this Black Crown, the mere sight of which is believed to ensure Liberation within one lifetime.
One day, during a ceremony, the Emperor saw a mystic Vajra-hat, made from the hair of one hundred thousand Dakinis, lowering over his Teacher’s head. Realising that it was visible only on account of his own advanced spiritual attainments, he decided to make a hat that would be visible to all. When it was finished he presented it to Karmapa and this same Black Hat has been worn by successive Karmapa incarnations since that time. It is said that this Hat has the power of conferring deliverance-on-sight to all living beings who behold it.

Karmapa travelled far and wide, through China, Mongolia, Yunnan and Mi Nya, bestowing teachings and initiations and converting many thousands of people to Kargyudpa Buddhism. After some years spent in China he reached the Karma Gon monastery in the female earth ox year (1409), having given teachings and bestowed blessings throughout the long return journey. From Karma Gon he went to Tsurphu, and was warmly welcomed along the way by many leaders of the different sects, Sakya Drakpon, Drigung Rinpoche and the Rinpoche of the Densa Thil monastery. At one village a messenger arrived from Je Tsonphapa, the Gelugpa leader, bearing a statue of Lord Buddha and a letter saying that though he could not come in person he hoped that they might have further contact with each other in the future. The place where Karmapa received the auspicious statue is called Nakchu Kha, in North Eastern Tibet, where the river flows towards Burma.

From Tsurphu he travelled to Lhasa and offered a precious yellow robe, covered with pearls, to the statue of Lord Buddha in the great Jokhang temple. The local Ruler, Wang Trakpa Gyaltshen, invited Karmapa to the Nyi’u Tsong palace, situated on the banks of a river, and there he was highly honoured. The ruling family and all the Ministers received initiations and became patrons of the Karmapa. He then returned to Tsurphu, rebuilt many shrines and Stupas, and completely renovated all the living accommodation there.

At the invitation of Liu Pi, the Ruler of Central Tibet, Karmapa revisited Lhasa in the mule water dragon year (1412), staying for several years in the great Potala palace. He preached and gave many initiations. Meeting the young incarnation of Shamar Tulkha, Chospal Yeshe, he supervised his ordination and bestowed many initiations on him.

Karmapa became afflicted by a serious disease and it seemed that he was ready to leave the world. His disciples held a propitiation ceremony for the prolongation of life, but Karmapa said, “Following an omen I have projected myself to a place in the vicinity of Karma Gon. You should address your prayers in that direction and I shall protect you.” To the head servant he said “Do not scatter the books and images, for an owner will soon be coming.” Then he handed over all his ritual implements, precious relics and personal books, predicted that he would be born again at She Khyung and told his disciples that he would meet them again in future incarnations.

On the first day of the eighth month of the female wood sheep year (1415), in the Potala palace, he passed away, at the age of thirty-two. At the time of his cremation many rainbows, haloes and showers of flowers were observed. Images of Avalokitesvara, Chakrasamvara and Manjushri were recovered from the ashes.

His foremost disciples were:
(i) SHAMAR CHOSPAL YESHE: The third Shamar Tulkha (c.1406-1452)
(ii) SITU GYALTSHEN: The first Situ Tulkha (c.1377-1448)
(iii) TRUNG MASE TOKDEN: The first Trungpa Tulkha
(iv) TSURPHU JAMBHYANG CHENPO: Trakpa Gyaltshen, an incarnation of the Buddha Vairocana (1374-c.1431)
(v) RINCHEN ZANGPO:
(vi) NGOMPA CHA GYALWA:
(vii) KHACHOPA:

FOOTNOTES
145 The second Shamar Tulkha who enthroned him and transmitted the higher teachings to him.
146 The Emperor Yongzheng (1688-1735), also known as Ch’ing Ta.
147 According to Tshultrim Tshewang, the historian: “The Chinese monks and officials burned incense, blew on conch shells, and sprinkled flowers on the road. Some three thousand of the highest officials, wearing exquisite garments and standing in respectful silence, rode the road from the gate to the three palace doors. The emperor seated at the center door and accompanied Karmapa through it. The emperor and Karmapa occupied two thrones at the centre of the hall.”
148 This description is taken from the translation of the scroll at Tserpu. See H. Richardson’s “The Karmapa sect” (R.A.S. 1959).
149 H. E. Richardson saw in Tsurphu monastery in 1949: “a silk brocaded measuring 50ft by 25ft, beautifully illustrated and reuniting in five languages - Chinese, Tibetan, Arabic, Mongol and Uighur - miracles performed by the Karmapa Lama on twenty-two days during his stay in the Chong Ta Emperor's court.”
150 Luka Shakpa (Tib. 'Dzong nying, the 'Black Hat').
151 This hat is with the present Gyawa Karmapa and is used on ceremonial occasions, by special request.
152 It was called ‘Chheg Khaspa’.
153 Trung Mase was born as the son of a Ruler of Mi Nya, Eastern Tibet. He met Karmapa at the Tsurphu monastery and received the precepts from him. Later, when Karmapa visited his country he made large offerings to him and received additional teachings. In Lhasa he received the Oral teachings from Karmapa, including some which were never given to others (these are known as the Oral Precepts of Sarnagang). For ten years he remained in retreat and ultimately attained the perfection of a Buddha. He founded the great Sarnagang monastery and organised the Sacred Dance of the Kargyudpas. He was also known as Konpa Gyaltshen.
154 Who was also known as Namkha. He was an adept at deep meditation and later became known as mikhyen ngag pa (Heavenly priest), as he left no body relics behind, only his nails and his hair.
THE LINE OF KARMAPAS FROM THE THITIRAN

TONGWA DONDEN: THE SIXTH KARMAPA (Tib: mThon-ba Don-laden)
(1416-1453)

In accordance with the prediction Tongwa Donden was born on the eighth day of the second month of the male fire monkey year (1416), at Ngamtöd She Kyöng, near Karma Gon. While in his mother's womb both his parents had highly auspicious dreams. As soon as he was born he sat upright, looked at his mother and laughed. When the umbilical cord was cut the smell of beautiful incense pervaded the whole region.

On the twelfth day of the third month his parents took him on a begging round and on this occasion he met Ngönpa Cha Gyalwa, a disciple of the previous Karmapa. The small baby became very excited at the sight of him and began to recite the alphabet.157 Ngönpa then took him to a solitary place and asked him who he was. The small baby grasped his finger and said, "I am unborn, free from all names, place less and the glory of all living beings! I shall lead many to liberation!" Later he told the Lama that he was the new Karmapa, but asked him not to disclose this yet.

At the age of seven months he made a throne, stood on it and recited the names of Lord Buddha and the 'Mani' Mantra. He also bestowed blessings on the people around him. At the age of one year he was taken towards Lha Chum and on being asked why he had come there he pointed to the monastery and said "For this!" Upon reaching the main building he pointed out the Stupa of Karmapa Dusam Khynapa and then grasped hold of a black hat, saying "Its mine!" For three days there was a great shower of flowers from the sky and afterwards he was proclaimed to be the new Karmapa. The third Shamár Tulku, a disciple of his previous incarnation, came and recognised him officially and performed his enthronement ceremony, later taking him to his own monastery. He recognised all the precious possessions of the past Karmapa incarnations and made a number of prophecies.

Karmapa Tongwa Donden received the initiations of Vajrayogini, Hvajra and the Mahamudra from the great Pandita Sowon Kzhipa and also studied the Tathagatavivadana,158 the Chakrasambhava Tankha and other Sambhas and Tantras. From Shamár Chöpa Yeshi he received all the esoteric doctrines of Siddha Tilopa, as well as the complete Kargyudpa Lineage teachings. Once, while performing the consecration ceremony of a painting, seven of the barley grains thrown by him remained suspended in the air and on another occasion during a drought he played with water and it suddenly began to rain.

In the male wood dragon year (1424), at the age of nine, Karmapa took the primary ordination from Nakphu Sonam Zangpo at the Olka Tashi Tang monastery in Central Tibet. He took the vows of a Bodhisattva and received initiation into the Kalachakra. During this time he composed a treatise on the Dance of Mahakala159 and had a significant vision of the Goddess Sarasvati160. Later he travelled to Kongpo where he also had visions of Siddha Tilopa and Vimalakirti.

For a number of years Karmapa practiced deep meditation and received numerous visions of Atalekitesvara, Tara, Bodhisattvas and the sixteen Arubas.161 Then he spent some time rebuilding the monasteries of Nakphu and Saplu and on their completion journeyed to Lhasa where he gave teachings and initiations to Kuchen Rongton and ten thousand monks. Then he returned to Saplu monastery where he restored the ruined statues, changed their ceremonial robes and recasted all the precious relic boxes. He travelled to Lhasa and Kongpo, bestowing his blessings freely and preaching the Buddhist Dharma to many thousands of people.

In the male water monkey year (1452), while staying at Tse Lha Gang, it appeared that his passing was imminent, so Lama Sangye Senge began to offer prayers for the prolongation of his life. Karmapa said "This year nothing will happen to me. For nine more months I shall take responsibility for my life." Then he travelled to Saplu monastery and went into retreat. At the age of thirty-seven he imparted all the Vajrabhara162 teachings to Gyaltshap Goshi Paljor and entrusted to his care a sealed letter giving all the details of his next incarnation. Many unusual signs were observed, such as earth tremors, sudden darkness and showers of flowers and all knew that soon he would be leaving the world. One day he said "I also belong to the Lineage of the Kargyudpas!"

Karmapa Tongwa Donden collected together his books, images, garments and Black Hat and gave them into the care of his chief attendant. He made some secret prophecies163 and then, in the female water bird year (1453) he passed away. The body was cremated and many extremely auspicious relics were recovered from the region of the heart, the tongue and the eyes. These were like small conch-shells, dazzling like crystal. They were carefully preserved by his followers. His foremost disciples were:

(i) GYALTSHAP GOSHI PALJOR DONDRUP: The first Gyaltshap Tulku.
   (c.1427-1489)

(ii) SITU JAMLY NAMGYAL: The second Situ Tulku (1450-1537)

(iii) PENVAR JAMPA ZANGPO:

(iv) KUCHEN RONGTON KHENOPO: From Rong province. A great scholar.

(v) TAKLUNG-SHABDRUNG:

FOOTNOTES
157 "At Kali": the vowes and concomitants. The esoteric significance is the relationship with the left and right nubile forces (NaDak). It has been said that "the whole universe is only At Kali".
CHOS TRAG GYAMTSO: THE SEVENTH KARMAPA
(Tib: Chosrgags Gya-mTso) (1454-1506)

Chos Trag Gyamtsos was born on the fifth day of the first month of the male wood dog year (1454), at Kyi Lha, Northern Tibet. As he was born he wiped his face and said, "Ama-La!" ("Mother!"). At the age of five months he said, "Ali-Hung! There is nothing in the world but voidness. People may think there is something, but they are really quite wrong. For me there is neither birth-nor-death!"

At the age of nine months he met the first Gyaltshap Tulku, who immediately recognised him and arranged for his enthronement. All the details of the prediction letter were found to correspond exactly with the facts of his birth. Many people came to pay their respects and the young child astounded them all by reciting the alphabet correctly.

On the first day of the third month of the male earth tiger year (1458), at the age of five, he received the empowerment of the Buddha of Boundless Life, Amitayus, and later, the initiations of Chakrasamvara and Malamaya.

When news reached him that the provinces of Lo and Men had begun hostilities, he went there and made a lasting peace. Acquiring many new disciples in this way he asked them to undertake ten million repetitions of the 'Mani' Mandala, saying that it was undoubtedly the cure for all ills. Later both Jetsun Milarepa and Heruka appeared to him in a vision and in accordance with details revealed to him Karmapa Chos Trag Gyamtsos told his disciples to construct an iron bridge over the Tsog Chu river.

Karmapa then visited the monastery of Tsan Den and then went on to Karmo Gon. On the eighth day of the ninth month of the male water horse year (1462), when he was nine years old, he received the primary ordination from Gyaltsha Goshi Paljor. The young Karmapa made the vow to fulfill his obligations with the greatest compassion for humanity. Flowers rained down from the sky as he took the vows of a Bodhisattva.

At the age of twelve he received the next ordination from Penkar Jampal Trangpo, who had been a disciple of his last incarnation. From Gyaltshap Tulku he received all the teachings of the Vinaya Sutras and at the age of thirteen he received the esoteric transmission. One of his closest advisors at this time was the second Situ Tulku, Tashi Namgyal, who also imparted the Oral teachings.

Karmapa was invited to visit the borderlands of Chang Mo, Trivo, Dar Tse Do and Mi Nya. On the fourteenth day of the eleventh month of the female wood bird year (1465) he travelled from Karmo Gon to these areas, giving teachings and initiations to many thousands of people. Prior to his arrival there had been fighting in the area and a number of people had been imprisoned. Karmapa arranged for their release, with the result that tension was lessened and peace was restored.
the Mi Nya monastery of Rya Wa Gang he engaged the five most senior Lamas \(^{165}\) in religious debate and was able to correct any mistakes which had crept into their doctrines.

Karmapa travelled to Li Thang, where again he was able to resolve local disputes. He visited the hermitage of Karma Pakshi, arriving there in the third month of the female iron rabbit year (1471) and also visited the Khaka Riphug temple. While he was there he performed a special ceremony and the grains of consecrated rice thrown by him were stuck permanently onto the rocks. He also left his footprint permanently-embedded in a hard stone. Then he travelled to Ron Tsun Kawa Karpo, the pilgrimage-place of Chakrasamvara, where he founded a small monastic meditation centre. \(^{164}\) For several years he practised meditation there.

Karmapa returned to Karma Gon, bestowing initiations and preaching to the people along the way. Upon his arrival he built several large statues of Lord Buddha for the monastery and after a short time left for Southern Tibet where he rebuilt many of the Kargyudpa monasteries. Reaching Tsurphu he found that the gigantic statue of Lord Buddha, built by Karma Pakshi, had been damaged by an earthquake, so he restored it. He founded a large theological college, which became well-known throughout Tibet. In the town he went to Nyi Nge Dong Tser, where he met the fourth Shamar Tulku, Choskhy Trakpa, to whom he taught the Six Doctrines of Naropa and imparted the Lineages teachings. On this occasion the Black Hat ceremony was performed for the young Shamar Tulku.

Karmapa travelled to Chokshor Lungpo, a very large monastic college where he appointed Karma Tinlay \(^{166}\) as Abbot and founded a new school of philosophy, \(^{167}\) thus greatly increasing the number of his disciples. He travelled to Lhasa, where he had a vision of the Future Buddha Maitreya, who advised him that a monastery should be built around the large statue of Lord Buddha \(^{168}\) there. The local rulers, \(^{169}\) Nupa, did not agree with the project, however a small monastery was built just outside of Lhasa. As soon as the work was completed five hundred soldiers destroyed the whole building. \(^{170}\)

The Supreme Ruler of Tibet at that time was the fourth Shamar Tulku, Choskhy Trakpa, who had been elected by the Ministers in his forty-sixth year (1498). Hearing of the great insult to the Gyalwa Karmapa and the Kargyudpa sect he decided to punish the local ruler. Karmapa would not hear of this and told him that the matter was already well into the past. He left Lhasa and went to the Ting region of Kongpo, where he founded an hermitage.

Karmapa Chos Trag Gyamtsos sent a messenger to Bodh Gaya \(^{171}\) in India with an offering of gold to be painted on the statue of Lord Buddha there, together with many prayers written out in Sanskrit, to be distributed freely. The King of Ragir in India and the great Pandita Vidyasharma, sent the messenger back to Tibet bearing leaves from the Bodhi tree and earth from many pilgrimage places.

---

FOOTNOTES

165 Tble: 'Temponed' 166 'Mahamaya' 167 Lo and Mon are regions of Southern Tibet. 168 'Mahayana' 169 'Temponed'
MIKYO DORJE: THE EIGHTH KARMAPA (Tib: Mi'bsKyud tDorJe) (1507-1554)

Mikyo Dorje was born early in the morning of the fourth day of the eleventh month of the female fire rabbit year (1507), in the province of Dam Chu, Eastern Tibet. There were many auspicious signs and a strong smell of incense pervaded the region. A rainbow pillar formed over the house of his birth and many flowers fell down from the sky. The newly born baby wiped his mouth and declared, "I am Karmapa! I am Karmapa!"

Situ Tulku heard of the birth of a very unusual child, in the province indicated in the prediction letter. He sent a messenger to determine if it could be the new Karmapa. Soon he was called to the place himself, where he asked the following questions:

"What are the names of the mother and father? Are there any palm-trees near the house? Which direction does the doorway face? Is there a stream nearby, and if so in which direction does it flow?" He was told that An Jam was the father's name and Ama Drum the mother's. Yes, there were palm-trees, the doorway faced East and a nearby stream also flowed towards the East.

All the answers accorded with the details given in the letter of prediction, so it was established that the child must indeed be the new Karmapa. When he was only one and a half months old he declared, "Eh-Ma-Ho!" Don't doubt me, for I am the Karmapa!" At the age of three months Situ Tulku took him to the Karma Gon monastery, where he was regally received.

At the age of four months Karmapa Mikyo Dorje met the Gomchen, Ser Phuwa, who had been his disciple during his last incarnation and who presented him with a ritual bell and a double-drum. Immediately the small boy became very happy and played them both with great delight. When asked by the Gomchen which teachings he had transmitted to him in his past life the boy replied, "I gave you the Mahamudra and the Six Yogas of Naropa."

When he was five he was invited to the house of Lhongspa, a nobleman from Ri Wo Che, in Eastern Khams. One day, while staying there he was asked by Lama Sonam Rinchen to say who he really was. Immediately the small boy laughed and said, "Sometimes I am Padmasambhava, sometimes Saraha and at other times I am the Karmapa!"

At about the same time the mother of a child born in the Amdo region declared that her son appeared to be the new Karmapa. The news of this boy spread rapidly. Gyaltap Tulku Tashi Namgyal and Lama Yang Ropa travelled to Ri Wo Che in order to settle the matter, and vowed not to show any distinction between the two little boys until it was determined beyond doubt which of them was the true incarnation. However when they were presented before Mikyo Dorje they found themselves automatically doing full prostrations to him and thus realised that he must undoubtedly be the real Karmapa. Immediately, on the fourteenth day of the second month of the female water bird year (1513), at Ri Wo Che, the full enthronement ceremony was performed by Gyaltsap Tulku, who had been a close disciple of the previous Karmapa.

At the age of eight Karmapa Mikyo Dorje went to the Surmang monastery, where he had a series of visions which revealed the details of his past incarnations to him. Sangye Nyenpa Druprop invited him to visit Denkhang, and upon his arrival there he was honoured by thousands of monks. While staying at the Changchub Ling monastery he had a vision of Lord Buddha, and on the following day Dharmakirti and Dhimag appeared before him and imparted the teachings of the Madhyamika school of philosophy. At the age of eleven he visited Kongpo Kam Ra and Gyalten, where he explained the nature of Karmic causes and effects, and how the cycle of rebirths can be transcended. Many people took his words to heart and became his disciples.

In Leh, Ladakh, a huge python entered the palace assembly-hall and refused to be driven out. Several meetings were held to find the way to get rid of it, but no solution could be found. Finally one of the Lamas suggested that Karmapa should be contacted for advice. A delegation was sent to Kongpo laden with gifts of dried plums, apricots and grain. Karmapa sent a letter back, with a message, saying, "Oh python, it is my personal order that you return to your own place in the lake, without any more bother", and the instructions that the letter should be read out loudly from the window of the hall. This advice was followed and upon hearing the contents of the letter the great snake started shaking so violently that even the palace walls seemed to tremble. Slowly it unwound itself and leaving the assembly hall went straight to a nearby lake and disappeared into the water.

The King of Iyang, in the Yunnan region, heard of the teachings of the young Karmapa Lama and sent an invitation for him to visit his country, despatching four Generals and ten thousand soldiers to accompany Karmapa on the long journey. On the third day of the fourth month of the male fire rat year (1516) Karmapa reached the borders of Tibet. There he was met by the King of Iyang, riding on a pashquim, with his brother and uncle both on elephants and escorted by many coloured horses in a magnificent procession. The King prostrated before the young Lama and as he did so the elephants broke away from their tethers and also howled down three times before him, raising their trunks to the sky. At the same moment great claps of thunder were to be heard overhead.

Karmapa was led to the palace amidst great rejoicing. A huge drum dragged along by sixteen people was sounded in his honour. He entered the palace, scattering grains of consecrated rice which were much sought after by the people. Seated on a high throne next to the King and the Royal Family, he was most highly honoured according to the customs of the country. The King, who had formerly been opposed to Buddhism, now took the Buddhist refuge and received teachings and initiations. He promised to send five hundred boys to Karmapa annually to be trained as Buddhist monks at his expense, and also made a vow to keep the peace with the neighbouring territories for the next thirteen years. Arrangements were made for the construction of a hundred monasteries and temples throughout the land.

Mikyo Dorje, the Eighth Karmapa

A detail from the Lineage 'tree', a banner in the Rumtek monastery, Sikkim. Mikyo Dorje occupies the prominent central position, being renowned for his preachings and writings on the Mahamudra. Above his head is the figure of Karma Pakshi, the second Karmapa, usually shown with a beard.
Karmapa, the Black Hat Lama of Tibet

Karmapa Mikyo Dorje spent seven days in the palace of the King, converting many to the ways of Buddhism, and before leaving he made a promise to return within seven years. Passing through Li Thang, where many miracles had been performed in the past, he met a crowd of people and pointed out all those who had connections with him in previous lives. While in the region of Nyeu he heard of the passing of the second Gyaltsap Tulku and sent a message that the relics should be collected and preserved in a Stupa.

Karmapa travelled to Tsarlin Dari, where he performed a special rite for Je Tsongkapa 'father and two sons', and then went to Rincheng Ling in Tog Go. Wishing to receive further initiations himself, Karmapa wrote to the third Situ Tulku, asking that Sangye Nyenpa Drupon be sent in order to impart them.

In the eleventh month of that year Karmapa Mikyo Dorje received the preliminary ordination from Sangye Nyenpa Drupon. The 'Puspanalita', the Karikas, the Vinaya Sutra and the Bodhisattva vows were all fully explained to him, together with the complete transmission of the Tilopa and Naropa higher doctrines. He also studied all aspects of the Kalachakra Tantra in great detail. He then made visits to Buju Phug, Phugnes, Kolk Morde, Cham Sar and Gadang Ling. Though he received an invitation to visit Sokpo in Mongolia he did not have enough time to make the long journey. He returned to the Changchub Ling monastery, visiting all the pilgrimage places on the way there, after which he proceeded to Karman Gon.

The Emperor Wu Tsung of China sent five hundred senior army officers to Karmapa bearing presents of gold, silver, pearls, sacred images and monastic robes, with a request that he visit China. At this time Karmapa had a vision of two suns in the sky, one of which he saw suddenly fall to the earth. He took this as a sign that the Emperor had just died and sent the envoy of officers back to China, where they found that Karmapa had indeed been correct in his divination.

For the next three years Karmapa received all the remaining teachings from Sangye Nyenpa Drupon, who passed away in the Karman Gon monastery when his work instructing the young Karmapa was completed. In the first month of the female earth rabbit year (1519) a memorial ceremony was performed for him, during which he miraculously reappeared and gave teachings specific for the occasion. Some years later Shamar Tulkun passed away also (c.1524), at the age of seventy-two.

At the age of twenty-two Karmapa Mikyo Dorje received the final ordination from Kenchen Chosbrop Senge and took further teachings from the Abbot Karma Tilay, including those of the Five Doctrines of Maurya, seven volumes of Dharmakirti's philosophy and the Abhidharma in two volumes. Altogether he studied twenty-five different teachings and thoroughly assimilated them all. Then he went to the Dragpo Sherdup Ling college where he instructed the foremost pupils in advanced doctrinal matters.

While travelling to the pilgrimage-places of Tsari, where there is a natural image of Chakrasamvara, Karmapa was met by a group of pilgrims who rushed to prostrate before him. Among them was a small boy whom he recognised to be the new incarnation of Shamar Tulku, so he took him along to see the wonderful image of Chakrasamvara. Together they returned to Central Tibet and when, in 1529, the boy was five years old Karmapa enthroned him as the fifth Shamar Tulku, Kunchok Yenlak.

Once, when staying at Tsurpchu monastery, Karmapa had a vision of the Sakya Pandita, who appeared to him surrounded by many Bodhisattvas, from whom he received important teachings. At this time he made a small marble statue of himself with a piece of left-over marble he made an impression of his palm by squeezing it. When the statue was consecrated, in the presence of many Lamas, Karmapa addressed it, asking if it was a good likeness of himself. The statue replied, 'Yes, of course!' much to the amazement of all those present.

Karmapa recognised the new incarnation of the fourth Situ Tulku, Gsheunkyi Gocha, enthroned him and took him as a disciple. Later he also recognised the fourth Gyaltsap Tulku, Trakpa Dodrub. He composed a commentary on the Vinaya Sutra, another on the Prasangaparvanita, one on the Abhidharma and as well as many works on the Mahamudra and related doctrines.

Karmapa Mikyo Dorje passed on all the higher teachings to Shamar Tulku, appointed him as his acting successor and entrusted him with all his personal belongings, relics and ritual items, as well as the letter containing the prediction of his next birth. Then he prepared to leave the world.

At midday on the twenty-third of the eighth month of the male wood tiger year (1554), while staying at the Dragpo Sherdup Ling monastery college of Shamar Tulku, he passed away in his forty-eighth year. At the time of his passing there were many auspicious signs in the sky and precious relics were found among the ashes of the funeral pyre. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SHAMAR KUNCHOK YENLAK: The fifth Shamar Tulku. (1525-1583)
(ii) SITU GSHUNKYI GOCHA: The fourth Situ Tulku. (1542-1585)
WANGCHUK DORJE: THE NINTH KARMAPA
(1556-1603)

Wangchuk Dorje was born on the seventh day of the seventh month of the male fire dragon year (1556), in the region of Treshod in Eastern Tibet. Before his birth his mother dreamed that she was blowing on a white conch-shell and that many people were rushing towards her. While still inside his mother's womb the baby could be heard reciting Mantras. When he was born he sat cross-legged, wiped the face and said, "I am the Karmapa!". He remained sitting in that position for three days and his father was so overawed that he started prostrating before him. At this the child stood up, said "Om-Ah-Humi!", and started to laugh. His mother untied her apron strings and tried to wrap up the child in it, but he threw it off saying "Oh No No!". Then he was wrapped up in a sheepskin, which he accepted.

People in the neighbourhood told his father that the child must surely be the Karmapa, but he doubted them. However, on returning to the house he found the baby sitting in the lotus-posture of a Buddha, gazing up at the sky, with a bright light moving around his head. By the time he was eighteen days old he could walk very easily and was totally independent. The fame of the child spread far, reaching the ears of Shamar Tulku, Kunchok Yenlak, who sent Lama Gyaltzen to investigate.

It was found that the letter of prediction correctly indicated the place of his birth, for it read, "My next incarnation will be born in a place called Treshod Horkok, close by a rock bearing a naturally-formed statue of Avalokiteshvara, near to a river coming out from the Himalaya mountain." As soon as Lama Gyaltzen reached the place the baby boy looked very pleased and started to call out "Shamarpa! Sharmpa!" and told those near him that soon Shamar Tulku would meet him.

At the age of six months he was taken towards Tsurpu monastery, and on the way there he started saying "Situpa! Situpa!". Everyone was very surprised when a messenger from Situ Tulku arrived the very next morning. Some days later the fourth Situ Tulku himself appeared, recognised the child as the incarnation of Karmapa, and bestowed on him the empowerment of Amitsyas, the Buddha of Boundless Life. During the ceremony the young Karmapa saw his teacher in this form.

A few days before reaching Tsurpu monastery Karmapa Wangchuk Dorje joked with his attendants, saying that it was time Shamar Tulku had come to see him in person. Upon reaching Lung Tse the party met up with the fifth Shamar Tulku, who immediately took a great liking for the little boy. Together they proceeded to Tsurpu, reaching there on the twelfth day of the second month of the female iron bird year (1561), which was considered most auspicious. Many ceremonies were performed and presents were received from the King of Jyang, who had been a devoted disciple of the previous Karmapa.

On the seventh day of the fourth month of the same year he received the primary ordination and the hair-cutting ceremony, in front of the large statue of Lord Buddha at the Tsurphu monastery. Then Shamar Tulkou formally enthroned him as the ninth Gyalwa Karmapa. In the company of Shamar Tulkou he travelled to Yang Chien and from there to Central Khams, preaching and teaching wherever they stopped. Altogether some thirty thousand monks were ordained on the journey between Tsurphu and the Chinese border. Monasteries were rebuilt and the Buddhist Dharma was revived everywhere. They took three years to reach Trivo Dar Tse Do, on the extreme North East borders of Tibet.

On the third day of the eleventh month of the same wood rat year (1564) Karmapa and Shamar Tulkou turned back towards Central Tibet, eventually arriving at Karma Gon monastery. On this journey they passed through the region of Karmapa’s birth, giving teachings to many and travelling via the great Changchub Ling monastery of Sangye Nyenpa Drupthob. They continued the journey to Chedo, where thousands were initiated into the religious doctrines.

One day a man brought along a scroll painting252 picturing both Karmapa and Shamar Tulkou and asked for it to be blessed. When Karmapa threw the consecrated prints onto the picture they miraculously stuck, like jewels, onto the hats and remained permanently fixed there. Karmapa and Shamar Tulkou visited Chang, where they were very well received, ordained many thousands of monks and imparted teachings and initiations to the people. Then they finally returned to the great Tsurphu monastery.

At the age of twenty-four Karmapa Wangshuk, Dorje received the final ordination from Shamar Tulkou and under his guidance studied the ‘Vajra Sutra Tikka’ and all the commentaries. Shamar Tulkou returned to the Densa Thil monastery,253 while Karmapa visited Tsang254, Tashi-Lhunpo,255 Sunggrab-Ling, Choode-Takmar, and Sangjen Döp Chen. At Tashi Lhunpo he performed a special rite in front of the ‘Je Tsongkhapa, Father and two sons’256 there. He went to the large Sakya monastery of Thubden Namgyal Ling and there performed a special rite in front of the large statue of Sakya Panchen, the leader of the Sakya. He gave teachings and initiations to Lamas, monks and laymen. Then he returned to Tsurphu where he arranged to have a large applique silk banner of Lord Buddha made. On the day of its completion it was hung over a huge rock and a very bright light was seen coming out of the Buddha’s forehead, producing great illumination everywhere. No one could look directly at it, because of the intense brightness. Shortly after this event Shamar Tulkou visited the monastery and transmitted the remainder of the Oral teachings257 to Karmapa.

The Ruler of Chang, Depa Rimpungpa, invited Karmapa to visit him, and since this was only one of many repeated requests he decided to accept. He imparted teachings all over the land, restored many monasteries and gathered new disciples. He travelled to the Nakpu province of Kungpo, where he rebuilt many monasteries, and on to Tsari, in South-Eastern Tibet, where he gave details of the correct approach to a new pilgrimage place of Chakrasamvara. This place came to be known as Tsari Namgyal. Karmapa founded a monastery there and called it Tsari Tso Kar.

On the return journey Karmapa Wangshuk, Dorje visited Tsari, Chur, Sam Lo, Tong and many other places, bestowing teachings and initiations all the while. When passing through the valley of Dung Tso Kha La he performed the miracle of flying. Everyone who saw this prostrated and many non-Buddhists were quickly converted.

King Ga Thong of Bhutan, himself skilled in magic and sorcery, having heard of Karmapa’s miraculous powers, sent an invitation to him at Tso Nak, requesting him to visit his country. Karmapa accepted the invitation and had soon converted many more to the Buddhist teaching. He was presented with one thousand gold coins and after a short stay in Bhutan he travelled back to Kungpo and Tsari Tso Kar, where he rested.

While staying at Tsari, Karmapa engaged himself in deep meditation for nine months. He had visions of Chakrasamvara and Kalachakra and Deities and Protectors of the great Kargyudpa Lineage appeared before him. At the end of this time he travelled to the Phagmo monastery of Densa Thil, where he met the new incarnation of Shamar Tulkou, Garwang Choskyi Wangchuk. Karmapa formally recognised him and performed his enthronement ceremony at the Dzongpo Sherdup Ling monastic college.

Karmapa wrote brief commentaries on the Vinaya Sutra, the Abhidharma Kosha, the Madhyamika, the Pramapamsita and three major works on the Mahamudra.258 He then received an invitation from the King of Sikkim, requesting him to visit that country, but since he himself was unable to make the journey he sent a highly qualified Lama in his place. This Lama founded three monasteries in Sikkim, the Rolang, the Potaling and the Rumtek.259 Karmapa was asked to consecrate the new monasteries, at which he replied that he would do so from Tibet, as he was unable to make the journey there himself. He sent instructions indicating the auspicious time, day and month of the ceremony, saying that everything should proceed accordingly. At the time of consecration of the Rolang monastery three large eagles came from the direction of Tibet, flew three times around the new monastery and dropped consecrated grains of yellow rice right on top of the new roof.

Karmapa recognised the new incarnation of the fifth Situ Tulkou, Choskyi Gyalsen. He made a visit to the Kargyudpa college-monastery of Sunggrab Ling.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

where he taught and expounded many doctrines. At this time he began to refer to his imminent passing and his health began to decline.

He sent all the prophetic details of his future birth to Shamar Tulku. Then, on the twenty-eighth day of the first month of the female water rabbit year (1603) he passed away. He was in his forty-seventh year. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SHAMAR CHOISKYI WANGCHUK: The sixth Shamar Tulku. (1584-1630)
(ii) SITU CHOISKYI GYALTSE: The fifth Situ Tulku. (1586-1657)
(iii) GYALTSE-TRAPKA-CHOE-YANG: The fifth Gyaltse Tulku. (c.1617-1658)
(iv) PAWO TSUKLAK GYAMISO: The third Pawa Tulku. (1567-1633)

CHOS YING DORJE: THE TENTH KARMAPA (Tib: Chos-dbyings rDo-rje) (1604-1674)

Chos Ying Dorje was born on the twenty-eighth day of the third month of the male wood dragon year (1604), at Golok Khansi Tang, in the extreme North-East of Tibet. During her pregnancy his mother dreamed that Guru Padmasambhava came towards her and entered into her. There were many auspicious omens. When the baby was born he took one step in each of the four directions, sat cross-legged in the centre and said,

致富 "Oṃ Mani Pade Mūlam, Hū! Pity the sufferings of humanity, for I am Karmapa!"

News of the birth of the extraordinary child spread far and wide and reached Chang Mowa, the local Ruler, who invited the baby to be brought to Ma Chu in Eastern Tibet. The child was honoured and taken to the Tsong Mo Che palace. Magyal Pomra, one of the two protector-deities of Tibet, came to receive blessings from the young boy. He stayed in the palace for six years and by the time he was seven he had fully learnt the art of painting, surpassing even the greatest of his teachers.

The sixth Shamar Tulku, who was staying at the Tsari Tso Kar monastery, sent his personal secretary, accompanied by several lamas, to collect the new Karmapa incarnation. They were very surprised when the small boy asked if Shamarpa was well, even before they announced who had sent them. It was found that all the details of his birth compiled with the letter of prediction. He was invited to meet Shamar Tulku at the Zadam Nyinchen Ling college.

On the fourteenth day of the twelfth month of the male iron dog year (1610) the young Karmapa reached the college and was immediately recognised by Shamar Tulku. On the twenty-third day of the first month of the female iron boar year (1611) his enthronement ceremony took place and the young Karmapa performed the Black Hat rite. He entered into debate with about five hundred learned young lamas, and was asked about Lord Buddha's life story, the teachings of the Bodhisattvas, the teachings of the Madhyamika and the Mahayana school of the Karmapa. He excelled in the debate; despite his youth, and was able to clarify many important points to those gathered there. Good omens and lucky signs appeared in the sky and around the monastery and everyone was very impressed by the gifted young Karmapa.

Several days later, while accompanied by his attendants, Karmapa Chos Ying Dorje went for a walk along the banks of the Dza Chu river. He pointed out a large white boulder in the middle of the stream and told those with him to take it out of the water and break it open. Everyone protested that the task was too difficult, however Karmapa insisted that it be done 'for the Dharma and for all sentient beings'. With great difficulty the huge boulder was lifted out of the water.

FORTYNOTES

260 The name of Shamar Tulku ('Red Hat One').
261 The name of Situ Tulku.
262 Situ Tulku.
263 The name of Situ Tulku.
264 P. 324.
265 Near Shigatse. Founded in 1445, it is the monastic seat of the Panchen Lamas.
266 The 'Je Yul Se Nam', the Gelugpa 'trinity' of Je Tsongkhapa and his two main disciples.
267 The 'Dam Ngag'.
268 The 'Phyag chen gSras-brten phyag mtha'ud, the 'chos sku mgyud phyag' and the 'Mangs Mgon sel'.
269 The old Rumtek monastery is a site just below the new monastery.
270 There are people in Nikmat who treasure these yellow grains, kept since this time.

82
and broken in two. Inside it were found a cluster of insect-like creatures, which Karmapa blessed with Mantras. Soon he had released them all from their sufferings and they were reborn in higher realms.

At the age of eight Karmapa travelled to Tsurphu via the Phowol district of Southern Tibet and upon his arrival a rainbow canopy miraculously formed right over the monastery. He took the primary ordination from Powo Tsulak Gyamtsa in the Lha Chen temple where there was the huge statue of Lord Buddha, and at the same time he received the empowerment of the Kangyu and T PANu] scriptures. Remaining at Tsurphu until the age of twelve he engaged himself in the perfection of the teachings.

An invitation was brought from the Tsang King, Phuntsok Namgyal, requesting Karmapa to visit Lhasa. A King from the East named Chi Ew approached the city, leading a huge army, and began to prepare for an attack. The King asked Karmapa to help, and was told that there would be no cause for worry. Miraculously the army simply turned back upon reaching Lhasa and returned in the direction from which they had come. The King was highly impressed and became an ardent disciple of the Karmapa.

Leaving Lhasa the young Karmapa Chos Ying Dorje went to Tsal and Liu Dong Tsen, where he gave teachings and blessings to the people. Accompanied by Shamar Tulkhu, Situ Tulkhu and Powo Tulkhu he journeyed to Lhobrag Nga Tsang, where news reached him of the death of the Tsang King. At the request of the Queen he travelled to the Sandrub Tse palace to supervise the death-rites. It was while he was in this palace that he received the final ordination from Shamar Tulkhu, in the presence of Powo Tulkhu and ten monks. Together they visited the main shrines of Lhasa, where Karmapa performed ceremonies and made offerings in front of the three statues of Lord Buddha in the main temple. Then, together with Powo Tulkhu, Shamar Tulkhu and Situ Tulkhu the 'Tse Chu' ceremony of the eight manifestations of Guru Padmasambhava was performed and dances were held to depict this theme.

Karmapa travelled to the Tsurphu monastery, where he received initiations of Kalachakra, Mahakala and the red Aṣṭakīśṭivañcya. He made five beautiful statues out of rhinoceros horn, depicting the Karyakūpa, Lineage of Vajradhāra, Tilopa, Naropa, Marpa and Milarepa. At this time he received the special Lineage teachings of Siddha Tilopa and engaged himself in deep meditation.

Accompanied by Shamar Tulkhu and Gyaltsen Tulkhu, he proceeded to the great Samye monastery where he received the Bodhisattva teachings from Shamar Tulkhu and took the appropriate vows. Together they went on pilgrimage to all the Holy places in the region. There was much rejoicing and ceremony; many monks were ordained and the Buddhist teachings spread widely.

The visit was to the Nyinche Ling college of Shamar Tulkhu, which was the largest religious centre in Tibet at that time. Karmapa was admitted to the college and received the complete Vinaya Sutra and Madhyamakā teachings, as well as those of the higher Mantrayaṇa. Travelling in a group they visited Tsrung, where they had been invited to stay in the new Wok-Ming Ling palace of the new King of Tsang. Karma Tenkyong Wangpo. They consecrated several new shrines and were most warmly welcomed by the King and the people. All prisoners were released for the occasion and there was much rejoicing. They went to the Sakya monastery in the region and met Dukchen Rinpoche and Dampa Kunga Rinpoche. Together many ceremonies were performed and all those present had wonderful visions of the eighty-four Siddhas.

Karmapa and Shamar Tulkhu travelled to Tingri Lang Kor, where they saw the Sakya Siddha flying in the sky overhead, playing a bell and a drum. Karmapa had a vision of Milarepa laughing in space and it made him very happy. He founded a monastery at Chos Chang Ling and both he and Shamar Tulkhu laboured in the construction of it, helping to carry earth and stones. After completion they performed the consecration ceremony together and then set out for Tsurphu once more. On the journey Shamar Tulkhu became ill and passed away (1630). Karmapa continued on to the monastery, where he built a stupa to preserve the relics of his teacher and also performed the death-rites.

Karmapa foresaw that a time of political oppression was approaching. He went to Lhasa, visiting the monasteries of Tsari Kyang Kha, Shol Kha and Kong Me on the way there. He gave many teachings and performed an important rite at the great Jo Khang temple in Lhasa, before continuing on to the Yang Do monastery, where he engaged himself in contemplation of the future.

The King of Tibet at this time, Desi Karma Tenkyong Wangpo, who was one of Karmapa's disciples, became strongly anti-Gelugpa and practised religious discriminations during his reign. The fifth Dalai Lama, Ngawang Lobzang Gyatso, sent three representatives to Mongolia, asking for military help from the chieftains there. The chief of the Goshot-Mongol-Gushri Khan, assumed the responsibility, and promised to visit Tibet in support of the Gelugpas.

Karmapa was very disturbed by all the unreligious activity and sent a letter to the Dalai Lama explaining that he was not in favour of military action in the name of religion and that neither he nor the Kagyu sect in any way sanctioned the activities of the King of Tsang. The Dalai Lama replied that he understood this to be the case and to rest assured that nothing untoward would happen. Karmapa realised, however, that events would take a different course.

The King of Tsang began collecting together a large army, gathering people together from Kongpo and preparing them for fighting. Karmapa went to see him and told him to cease making war preparations immediately, as it was contrary to the Buddhist Dharma. He pointed out that many thousands would die if fighting was to break out and that there would be much suffering. He also indicated that if the Tsang King were to attack then he would surely get killed.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

In the meantime Gushri Khan of the Mongols marched into Khams and engaged the non-Buddhist chieftain in fighting (1639): After a year he brought all of Khams under his control and moved his armies towards Tsang. The Dalai Lama, who had not been fully informed of the developments, was very upset and demanded that the Mongol chieftain be persuaded to return to his own lands. In his main attendant he said, "If, on account of the commitments you have made, you find it difficult to go to Gushri Khan, then I shall see him myself and try to use my religious influence with him. If we can succeed in persuading him to leave it will benefit us politically and vindicate our honour." The attendant refused to allow the Dalai Lama to approach Gushri Khan, saying that it was already too late to stop the inevitable.279

Karmapa Chos Ying Dorje began to distribute all his accumulated wealth among the poor. Knowing that he must eventually get involved in the dangerous situation he appointed Gyaltap Tulku as his temporary representative at Tsurphu monastery. He then moved to Yam Dur, where he set up a camp.

Some days passed and then the Mongol chieftain Gushri Khan attacked the Tsang capital of Shigatse. The city was surrounded. On the eighth day of the first month of the horse year (1642), after a fierce battle, the city fell and the King of Tsang was captured.282 Many were killed and thousands wounded.

Karmapa was encamped at Yam Dur when he received a letter from the Dalai Lama, asking whether he was preparing to wage war against the Gelugpas and demanding that he send his word of honour that he would refrain from taking any hostile action. Karmapa replied, "How dare we ever harm the Gelugpas in the future, even as we have never harmed them in the past," and added that he would comply with any request from the Dalai Lama to prove his sincerity on this point.

Somehow, on receiving the reply, a quibble of words and meanings erupted and the Gelugpa ministers pointed out that Karmapa had not, in exact terms, promised never to harm the followers of the Dalai Lama. Consequently forces were sent to attack Karmapa's camp. They killed many of his followers; destroying their tents and belongings. Karmapa himself avoided the slaughter and when it was over he sent the survivors away to disperse throughout the country. Then, with his servant Kuntu Zangpo, he flew in space to the Kurto district of Northern Bhutan. Those who witnessed him leave saw him in varying forms, some saw him take the shape of a vulture, others that of a deer, while some simply saw him flying in his human form.

Karmapa and Kuntu Zangpo331 landed far away from the troubles. For twelve days they had no food, but Guru Padmasambhava appeared and sustained them on sacramental pills instead. Guided by the Nagas, the Serpent Kings, they travelled towards Jyang in the Yunnan region. Bears, wolves and other animals provided food for them from the jungles. Monkeys came to receive his blessings and led him and his servant through the forests until they reached the safety of the Targee Gang monastery in Jyang, after a journey of three years and four months.

Everyone gathered to greet Karmapa and there was great rejoicing at his well-being. Receiving word of his arrival King Karma Chime Lhawang sent his chief minister to Targee Gang, with many offerings and an invitation for Karmapa to visit the palace. On the first day of the first month of that year (1642) he arrived at the palace and was laden with gifts and honoured with ceremonies and great processions. Dances and dramas were performed and he began to preach throughout the country.

On one occasion Karmapa called together beggars from the four directions and seating himself in their midst and chanting the Mantra he distributed among them all the presents received since his arrival. At this time the Mongolian forces were in the border region of Yamdo, quite close to Jyang and were then engaged in raiding and pillaging. The King of Jyang sent his army to assess the situation and in a sudden conflict they succeeded in destroying the Mongol army. Pleased with this success the King convened a meeting with the Ministers and Generals and a decision was made to send forces to attack the Mongol armies in Tibet itself. A vow was made that if they were successful in their mission they would establish Karmapa as the Supreme Ruler. Three hundred thousand soldiers were prepared, but suddenly Karmapa himself appeared before the King and forbade any such action, saying that they should certainly not undertake warlike activities as it was contrary to the Buddhist Dharma.

While preaching in the King's palace Karmapa had a vision of the wheelabouts of the new Shamar Tulku. Once again he distributed all of his accumulated possessions among beggars, passed all his personal books, relics and ritual items into the care of his servant Kuntu Zangpo and rode off towards the extreme North in search of Shamar Tulku. Carrying only little food he passed through Bok Yul, where he met twelve beggars. To them he gave the remainder of his possessions and food and continued the journey disguised as one of them.

Karmapa passed through a Naka dekhang and while begging there he was recognised, helped and honoured. A shepherd boy also recognised him intuitively and spread the word among the local people, who gathered together one hundred horses laden with provisions and presented them to him. Karmapa called the stonemasons of the area and told them to carve a large number of Mani stones.332 When the work was finished he paid their wages with all the possessions that he had just received.

He continued on to Golok and in the Li Yul district came across a boy whom he recognised to be the incarnation of Shamappa. The child had himself declared the previous day that Karmapa was coming to see him and recognised his teacher despite the beggar’s clothes that he was wearing. Together they started the return journey and in Bok Yul Karmapa realised that his servant Kunzang was becoming very anxious about his well-being and sent a party of people with mules to fetch him.

At Sul Chu Karpo Karmapa left a footprint permanently embedded on a large rock and at this place his servant Kunzang arrived to meet him. He bestowed the ordinations on the young Shamar Tulku, Yeshi Nyinpo and for two years he fully explained the Kargyudpa teachings to him. Receiving another invitation to visit the Kingdom of Nyang he travelled there and was royally welcomed at the Lan Dok palace. He founded a temple for the Live Bodhisattva, naming it Potala, and even the King of Nyang laboured in the construction of it. The youngest son of the King Mipham Tenpa Nyima, received ordination as a monk and was personally instructed by Karmapa.

Karmapa Chos Ying Dorje recognised a holy as the incarnation of Gyaltset Tulku and his enthronement ceremony was performed when he was three years old. On his return from Golok news came that incarnations of Shituk Tulku and Powo Tulku had been found. Karmapa travelled to Khams, collected the young Tulkus and brought them back to Nyang for instruction. He gave the empowerment of the Kangyur to all of them and transmitted the complete Oral teachings. On the eleventh day of the third month of the female iron ox year (1661) he finished imparting the doctrines and they set out for Lhasa visiting all the places of pilgrimage on the way.

On the third day of the third month of the female water ox year (1673) the party arrived at the Tibetan capital. Karmapa went straight to the Potala and met the Dalai Lama, who asked him all about his travels and experiences, expressing a desire to know more about the Mahamudra teachings. Feeling great compassion towards Karmapa he gave instructions that he should be free to return to Tsurphu monastery.

Karmapa went to the Jo Khang temple and there performed many important ceremonies, during which Bodhisattvas appeared and were seen by all those present. At last he returned to Tsurphu, where he was received with joy and many celebrations. At this time he indicated that he expected to leave the world soon and gave the predictions of his future rebirth to Shamar Tulku and Gyaltset Tulku.

On the ninth day of the eleventh month of the male wood tiger year (1674) he became ill. On the morning of the eleventh day of the same month a white rainbow appeared right over the monastery. He passed away on the fifteenth day of that month, the rainbow remaining in the sky overhead for several days. He was in his seventy-first year. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SHAMAR YESHE NYINPO: The seventh Shamar Tulku (1631-1694)
(ii) SITU MIPHAM CHOGYAL KAITEN: The sixth Situ Tulku (1658-1682)
(iii) GYALTSET NORBU ZANGPO: The sixth Gyaltset Tulku (1659-1698)
(iv) PAWO TSUKLEAK TRINLAY GYAMTSO: The fifth Powo Tulku (1649-1699)
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

229 the King of Tsang was eventually executed in 1642.
230 The fifth Dalai Lama, Ngawang Lobsang Gyatso, was born in 1617 into a Nyingmapa family. He established himself as Supreme Ruler of all Tibet, through the help of Gushri Khan, leader of the Mongol armies. He rebuilt the great Potala palace in Lhasa. He died in 1682.
231 According to Smillie and K. Rushforth, in A Sketch History of Tibet (pp. 198, 398), "The tenth Black Hat, extracted from high political office totally in variance with his quite proper religious way of life. He was a remarkable character, typical of the best of Tibetan Lamas," and "The Black Hat lamaenava the fighting and lived for many years, sometimes disguised as a simple monk and always accepting hardships of every kind."

233 The Yamantaka Statue
232 A wall of prayer stones, carved with mantras such as "Om Mani Padme Hum."
234 The seventh, Yeshe Nyinpo
235 The Chushe brgyod.
236 The sixth, Norbu Zangpo
237 The first, Mipham Choskyi Khyentse
238 The fifth, Tsultrim Tuklay Gyatso
239 The scriptures
240 The fourth incarnation, Tsultrim Konzang (1633-1649) died very young

YESHE DORJE: THE ELEVENTH KARMAPA (Tib. Ye shes rdorje) (1676-1702)

Yeshe Dorje was born in the male fire dragon year (1676) in Mshuk, Eastern Kham. As soon as he was born he wiped his face, sat cross-legged and said, "I am the KarmaP." At this time a rainbow formed over the house and many flowers fell down from the sky. When he was still very young he saw Chakrasambara and other Protectors and Deities in the sky above him. He pointed them out to those who were present, but they could see nothing and started to laugh at him. In reply to their mockery he flew up in the air, hovered for a while and then returned to the ground. The news of this miraculous event spread far and reached Shamar Tulku# and Gyaltshap Tulku, who both sent off their representatives to investigate further.

It was found that all the details of the birth were in exact accordance with the letter of prediction left by the previous Karmapa. Yeshe Dorje was thus brought to the great Yang Chen monastery where he met the seventh Shamar Tulku, who recognised him immediately. The young Karmapa was taken to Tsurphu monastery where he was enthroned. He performed the Black Hat ceremony shortly afterwards. From Shamar Tulku he received the preliminary ordinations and studied the scriptures under the guidance of the sixth Gyaltshap Tulku and Karma Tintay Tulku. From Shamar Tulku he also received the full esoteric teachings, including the transmission of the 'Six Yogas' of Naropa. Shamarpa passed away.

Karmapa Yeshe Dorje received the teachings, explanations and initiations of Ter Chos from Yonge Mgyur Dorje and Taksham Nuden Dorje. He performed the death rites of Shamar Tulku and built a stupa to house the relics. The Tsurphu monastery was rebuilt and many other temples and monasteries were repaired, having been badly damaged by the Mongol soldiers. One year after the passing of Shamar-Tulku-Karmapa had a vision of the new incarnation and made arrangements for the boy to be brought to Tsurphu from his birthplace in Nepal.

Karmapa performed the enthronement ceremony of the eighth Shamar Tulku and named him Palchen Choskyi Djordrup. Then he predicted that Situ Tulku would reincarnate at Jok Or in the male iron dragon year (1700) and imparted this information to the new Shamar incarnation, along with the remaining teachings. He spent much time engaged in deep meditation.

Karmapa Yeshe Dorje sent the letter of prediction concerning his next incarnation to the young Shamar Tulku. He then passed away in the male water horse year (1702), at the age of only twenty-seven. There were remarkable occurrences at that time. His foremost disciples were:
Karmapa: The Black Hat Lama of Tibet

(i) Shamor Palchen Choskyi Dodrub: The eighth Shamar Tulkhu.
(1695-1732)

(ii) Khenchen Karmap دون: Dorje.
(iii) Tenzin Chogyal: The fifth Trungpa Tulkhu.

Changchub Dorje: The Twelfth Karmapa (Tib: Byang chub rDo rje)
(1703-1732)

Changchub Dorje was born in the female sheep year (1703) at Lasa. Tok in the Derje province of Eastern Tibet. Two months after his birth he suddenly declared himself to be the Karmapa. Shamar Tulkhu heard of the birth of this remarkable child in the place mentioned in the letter of prediction and sent a search-party led by his personal secretary. On the way there they met the Terton Migyur Dorje, who guided them straight to the place.

Upon their arrival at the village they were most surprised to see a white rainbow which ended right on the roof of the house where the child had been born. Everything was found to be exactly in accordance with the details given in the letter of prediction. The small child correctly chose all the items which had belonged to the previous incarnation of Karmapa and threw away all the others in disgust. A message was sent to Situ Tulkhu, who came to meet the new incarnation, leading a party consisting of Trale Khojpoche, Surmach Garwang Rinpoché and Sangye Nyepon Tulkhu. Together they proceeded to the Karma Gon monastery, reaching there by the time Karmapa Changchub Dorje was seven years of age.

One night Karmapa had a dream of Lord Buddha preaching to many monks seated around him. Among them he saw himself, with hands folded in supplication, asking for the methods best suited for learning the Mahayana. He received a concise mystic phrase in answer and on waking from his sleep Karmapa instructed his servant to write the words down. Later, in a second dream he saw Palden Atisha and asked him several questions about the Dharma. From him he received mystic verses in answer; four sentences for the Mahayana and four for the Vajrayana.

Karmapa returned to Derje, the province of his birth and from there set out for Tsurphu, visiting many places on the way. At Tsurphu he was enthroned by Shamar Tulkhu, in the presence of Situ Tulkhu. He received the primary and final ordinations and was initiated into the complete Kargyud teachings, including the Six Yogas of Naropa, the Lineage teachings and the Oral transmission. He recognized the seventh Gyaltsap Tulkhu, Kuncheh Oser and enthroned him.

Karmapa Changchub Dorje met the Nyingmapa Siddha Chogyer Rigszin Chenmo and along with Situ Tulkhu and Gyaltsap Tulkhu they discussed various aspects of the teachings. Karmapa decided that it was time a special pilgrimage was made to Nepal. Accompanied by Shamar Tulkhu, Situ Tulkhu and Gyaltsap Tulkhu the long journey across the Himalayas was completed and on arriving in the Kathmandu valley the party went straight to the great Bodhathanag Stupa where they made many offerings. There the four incarnate Lamas were received by King Jugayamalla who was seated in a golden howdah mounted on top of a huge
Karmapa, the Black Hat Lama of Tibet

There were many attendants with gold and silver spears, ornamental umbrellas and huge drums, who escorted them to the King's palace. Karmapa led the way into the palace assembly-hall, where all observed the customary period of silence in front of the portrait of Padma. Then a splendid feast was prepared and rooms were made available. Karmapa stayed in the palace for seven days, bestowing blessings and preaching the Dharma. An epidemic had broken out in the valley just before his arrival and at the request of the King he performed a purification ceremony and the epidemic immediately subsided. Since the country was suffering from drought Karmapa threw consecrated grain into the air and it rained heavily. He preached the Dharma throughout the Kathmandu valley, fully explaining the laws of Karma to the people. The Royal Family received many excellent teachings and many Panditas came to discuss points of doctrine.

Karmapa took the party on pilgrimage to Namo Buddha, the place where, as a Bodhisattva, in the distant past Lord Buddha had offered the flesh of his own body to a hungry tigress. At this place an invitation was received from King Ranajitamalla, asking them to visit his city. Elephants were provided for Karmapa and Shamarp and fine horses for Situ Tulku and Gyaltsap Tulku. In a magnificent procession they circumambulated the city, bestowing their blessings upon all.

Karmapa and the other incarnate Lamas left Nepal and travelled on pilgrimage to Kashinagar in India, the place of the final passing of Lord Buddha. There, they all prostrated, made offerings and said prayers for the good of mankind. At this time an invitation was received for Karmapa to visit China. Retracing the route through Nepal the pilgrims returned to Tibet, reaching the Tsurphu monastery safely.

Karmapa and Shamarp Tulku left Tsurphu on the thirteenth day of the third month of the female wood snake year (1725) and travelled through Khams and North Eastern Tibet, visiting many temples and monasteries on the way to China. Passing through numerous provinces they reached Sing Chisew, where they visited the temples of Atolukhirluwa and the Goddess Tara. They performed many rites, giving special instructions to their disciples, saying that they should try their utmost to propagate the Dharma in the difficult times. This was a period of great religious discrimination. Karmapa and Shamarp Tulku considered it more favourable for them to leave their bodies and reincarnate.

Karmapa sent a letter of prediction to Situ Tulku and on the thirtieth day of the tenth month of the water rat year (1732), early in the morning of the new moon, he passed away. Shamarp Tulku followed him two days later, amidst many omens. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SITU CHOSKYI JUNNGES: The eighth Situ Tulku. (1700-1774)

(ii) GYALTSAP KUNCHOK OSER: The seventh Gyaltsap Tulku. (1699-1765)

(iii) PAWO TSUKI-LAK GAWA: The seventh Pawo Tulku. (1781)

(iv) DRUKCHEN KARGYUP TINLAY SHINGTA: The sixth Drukchen Rinpoche.

(v) YONGDRIN KARMA THUBTEN NGAWANG

(vi) JETSUN JYUNGGON TULKU:

FOOTNOTES

226 A Tsechen, 'reveler of treasures'. 227 An incarnation of the Siddha Shugden, one of Dr. Gampopa's disciples. The present Tragpo Rinpoche is a student of Sarnath, India.

228 From Surmang monastery. The present incarnation born in Sikkim as the son of Kazi Sonam Gyatso. Age 7 years.

229 The fourth incarnation.

230 Ruler of Yambu (Kathmandu) from 1722-1736, which period was remarkable for the phenomenal drought.

231 Of Pema Namgyal, a former King of Yambu, who came to the throne in 1639 and died in 1669. He was a man of great ability and learning who devoted particular energy to bringing together Pandits from many different countries and building many temples. (Shingpo, Horyuji, Shingyo, etc.) The text is based on the translation of the Tibetan in Stok and Gomang by Daniel White. Kathmandu 1973 (reprint).

232 Situated to the East of Bhagavati, near to the village of Panwar.

233 Of Bhagavati, in the Kathmandu valley. He reigned from 1722-1769.

234 In India, the place of the Panamara of Lord Buddha.

235 Rolling, Lenpo, Tsai voo, Chang-sho, Ngarit Ning ten, Hdo Chang-shen, Tser Chang yi, Ching ni, Chingshu, Lam tek Shen, Ching-shew etc.

236 The eighth, who at that time was at Palyung monastery.

237 The sixth incarnation, Choykyi Dordrup, died young.
Karmapa Da Dul Dorje made a pilgrimage to Nepal (c. 1750), meeting King Jaya Prakasamalla\textsuperscript{264} and arranged for restoration to be undertaken on the great Swayambhunath Stupa.\textsuperscript{265} He was well received by the King, the Ministers and the people, and was able to ensure that the work was satisfactorily carried out.

At the age of thirty-nine Karmapa went to the Palpung monastery,\textsuperscript{266} where he discussed the results of his meditations with the eighth Situ Tulku and received the remaining teachings and the Oral transmission from him. He recognised the tenth incarnation of Shamar Tulku\textsuperscript{267} and then travelled to Tsurphu monastery dressed in the robes of an ordinary Lama. Visiting all the villages of Khams, Eastern Tibet, he gave teachings to the people in an extremely simplified form. At the end of the journey he retired to the hermitage built by Karma Pakshi on the mountain behind Tsurphu and there spent many years in deep meditation. He revealed many precious treasures and was especially renowned for his ability to communicate with animals and birds.

The Ruler of Southern Tibet invited Karmapa to consecrate a small monastery in the palace of Phowo, which was fifteen days journey from Tsurphu. Being unable to go in person Karmapa fixed a date and time for the ceremony and sent a messenger to tell the Lamas there to make all the necessary preparations. At the exact moment of the consecration Holy grain started to rain down from the sky and everyone was very happy with the auspicious event. Later he had a vision of the new incarnation of Situ Tulku and a party was sent to collect him. He was enthroned by Karmapa and received all the teachings from him.

Karmapa Da Dul Dorje gave the letter of prediction to his disciple Situ Tulku and passed away on the fourth day of the eighth month of the female fire snake year (1797), at the age of sixty-five. There were many auspicious signs at the time of his passing and precious relics were recovered from the funeral pyre. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SITU PADMA NYINGCHE WANGPO: The ninth Situ Tulku. (1774-1853)
(ii) SHIAMAR CHOSDRUP MIPHAM GYAMTISO: The tenth Shamar Tulku. (1742-1792)
(iii) PAWO TSUKLAK CHOSKYI GYALPO: The eighth Powo Tulku
(iv) DRUKCHEN KUNZIG CHOSKYI NANGWA: The seventh Drukchen Rinpoche
(v) LADAKH HEMI GYALSA: A Prince, from Hemis monastery, Ladakh.
(vi) KHAMTRUL JIGME SENGGE: The Line of Khamtrul\textsuperscript{268} Tulku, from Khams.

\textbf{Footnotes}

\textsuperscript{264} A well known form of 'white' Mabokal, as a sixteen year old boy, holding a basket of flowers.
THIEG CHOG DORJE: THE FOURTEENTH KARMAPA

THIEG CHOG DORJE was born on the tenth day of the twelfth month of the fire snake year (1798), in the Danang village of Zalmo Gang in the Do Khams region of Eastern Tibet. Many rainbows were to be seen over the village and at the time of his birth the baby wiped his own face and said, "Om Mani Padme Hum, Hri! Ah Ahh I Li Uu Uu..." The fame of the child spread far, reaching the Kargyudpa Lama-Drukchen Khonzig Choskyi Nangwa, who sent a search-party to the region. Situ Tulku and Gyaltsap Tulku also sent search-parties and all of them met in the village of Danang. Together they took the boy to the Karma Gon monastery, where he was welcomed by the ninth Situ Tulku. Finding all the details in the letter-of-prediction to be exactly correct, Situ Tulku officially recognized him as the new incarnation of Karmapa and bestowed the primary ordination.

Staying in the Karma Gon monastery for several years, Karmapa Thieg Chog Dorje received both the New and the Old teachings and studied several versions of the life of Guru Padmasambhava. He travelled to Tsurphu, where, by the age of nineteen, he had received most of the teachings and the esoteric transmission. He took the final ordination, rebuilt the monastery and repaired all the stupas and small temples in the area. He also founded a meditation centre, calling it Drupde Santen Ling.

Acting in accordance with a prediction made by Guru Padmasambhava, Karmapa invited the Terton Chogyur Lingpa to come from Kham to the Tsurphu monastery. There were great celebrations, culminating in Lama-dances of the Eight Manifestations of Guru Padmasambhava and those of Vajrakila.

Karmapa made a pilgrimage to Kong Rinpoche, Mount Kailash in Western Tibet, and during his stay there some people were sure they could see him sitting meditating in a tent in the middle of Lake Manasarovar. He circumambulated the Holy mountain, visited all the shrines, and had a wonderful vision of Chokrasamvara. On his return journey he passed by a craggy hill, famous as the abode of a demon. Large boulders suddenly started to roll down towards the party of pilgrims, terrifying everyone. Karmapa glanced up and at that moment the large rocks remained where they were and the smaller rubble and dust completely disappeared.

Karmapa travelled to Tsari, where he had visions of the Goddess Tara and of Chokrasamvara and where he left a permanent footprint on a stone. Then he returned to Tsurphu monastery, travelling through the province of Kongpo, where he preached and bestowed many blessings on the people. He imparted the complete teachings to Drukchen Kunzig Gyamtso and Jamgon Khorlul Rinpoche.
leaving the letter of prediction with his two brothers, Dodrup Tulku and Choswang Tulku.

(1868) he passed away, in his seventy-first year. Rainbows were to be seen all around him at that time. His foremost disciples were:

(i) DRUKCHEN KUNZIG GYAMTSO: The eighth Drukchen Rinpoche.

(ii) JAMGON KHONGTRUL RINPOCHE: The first Jamgon Tulku. An incarnation of Manjushri.

(iii) DARZANG DEDON TENPA KABGYE: The first.

(iv) GYURME TENPHEL: The eighth Trungpa Tulku.

KHA CHAB DORJE: THE FIFTEENTH KARMAPA
(Tib. mkha’ khyab rdo rje) (1871-1922)

Kha Chab Dorje was born on the tenth day of the eighth month of the female iron sheep year (1871), in Shelkar village of Tsong province Western Tibet. As soon as he was born he looked up into the sky and declared himself to be the new Karmapa. He had a white mole in the middle of his forehead. By the time he was a year old he already had an astonishingly profound understanding of many subjects and was able to pass his knowledge on to others. He continued as his own teacher until the age of six.

Drukchen Rinpoche, Terton Chogyur Dechen Lingpa and Jamgon Khongtrul Rinpoche felt convinced that he must be the incarnation of Karmapa and upon consulting the letter of prediction it was found that all the details were exactly correct. As a final test the boy was asked to select items of clothing placed before him and he immediately chose those which had belonged to the previous Karmapa. Thus he was taken to the Tsurphu monastery.

In the female fire ox year (1877) he was ceremonially enthroned and on this occasion composed a prayer to MahaKala. He studied all the doctrines and became skilled in the science of medicine. At the age of eleven he travelled to Lhasa, where he met the thirteenth Dalai Lama, Thupten Gyamtsa, who honoured him greatly. In Lhasa there was a very large statue of Dorje Dratden the Protector, which offered his spear to Karmapa. Staying in Lhasa for a while, he taught widely and then returned to Tsurphu.

Karmapa Kha Chab Dorje received the empowerment of the Kanjar from Kenchen Tashi Oser and that of the Six Books of Padmasambhava from Powo Tsuklak Nyingche. At the age of fourteen he received an invitation to consecrate a newly restored monastery in Li Thang. Drawing a map of the place he dropped holy grain onto it and at that same moment showers of grain fell on the roof of the monastery.

In the male fire dog year (1886) he went to Khams, visiting the Pallung monastery, as well as many others. From Jamgon Khongtrul Rinpoche he received the teachings and initiations of the great Kargyudpa Lineage, the Bodhisattva vows, the Kalachakra and the Oral transmission. He travelled to the Dzong Sar monastery of the first KhyeNTsé Rinpoche, where he recounted all the events of his past lives. Then he visited Bonpo Gon in Li Thang, where he performed a miracle by pushing his finger right into a hard rock. When he withdrew it, streams of milky water flowed out of the hole. He visited all the region around Li Thang, imparting teachings and bestowing initiations. At the request of Dzigar Rinpoche of Shang Ling monastery he gave the rebirth prediction concerning the next Drukchen Rinpoche.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

In the male earth rat year (1888) Karmapa received many teachings and initiations from Jamgon Kongtrul Rinpoche and studied the Higher Tantras, medicine and astrology. From Jamyang Khynsey Rinpoche he received many empowerments and initiations, as well as the Kargyudpa Lineage teachings, the Mahamudra and the Oral transmission. Through the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara he realised perfection in meditation.

Karmapa made a prediction of the whereabouts of the eleventh Situ Tulku, Padma Wangchog Gyalpo, recognised him and supervised his enthronement ceremony. He then travelled to Lhasa, to Sang Ngag Chos Ling and to the great Samye monastery. He enthroned the new Drukchen Rinpoche and taught him fully. Going to Tsari he practiced his meditation there and many visions revealed themselves to him, including those of Guru Padmasambhava, Vajrasattva, Hayagriva, Kalachakra and Chakrasamvara. The Protector of Tsari also appeared and presented Karmapa with a precious statue of Guru Padmasambhava and a sky-fallen scepter.

Karmapa returned to Tsurphu in the male wood horse year (1894), founding the Tsur Kung monastery nearby, and repairing the main buildings. He built a temple of the Protector Deity of Lhasa and then travelled to Falung monastery where he taught and bestowed many initiations. At this time Jamgon Kongtrul Rinpoche came and transmitted the remaining secret teachings to him. He returned to Tsurphu where he witnessed the dance of Mabulaka and conducted many important ceremonies.

Karmapa received many requests from the King of Bhutan, asking him to visit his country. He started off on the long journey and reached Trongsa Dzong, the old capital, on the first day of the first month of the male earth dog year (1898), at the time of the New Year celebrations. He preached and bestowed the Mahamudra initiations in their complete form, with full explanations, for which the King of Bhutan was extremely grateful.

Karmapa returned to Tibet, where, guided by particular visions, he found the new incarnations of Jamgon Kongtrul Rinpoche and the tenth Pawa Tulku, supervising both enthronement ceremonies at Tsurphu monastery. To Situ Tulku and Jamgon Rinpoche he passed on all the teachings of the Mahamudra, the Kargyudpa Lineage, the Six Yogas of Naropa and the complete Oral transmission. On the first day of the first month of the male water rat year (1912) he insisted that the New Year trumpets be blown towards the East instead of towards the South, as was customary.

For many years Karmapa Kha Chab Dorje engaged himself in deep meditation. He bestowed his blessings on the people. Then he wrote a letter indicating details of his next rebirth and left it in the care of Jampal Tsalten, his favourite attendant. On the twenty-sixth day of the third month of the male water dog year (1922) he passed away, at the age of fifty-two. There were many auspicious signs visible in the sky and precious relics were recovered from amongst his ashes. His foremost disciples were:

(i) SITU PADMA WANGCHOG GYALPO: The eleventh Situ Tulku. (1886-1952)
(ii) JAMGON - KHYNSEYE - OSER: The second Jamgon Kongtrul Tulku. (1904-1953)
(iii) PAMO TSULAK TRAWE WANGCHUK: The tenth Pamo Tulku. (b. 1912)
(iv) SHAMAR JAMBYANG: The eleventh Shamar Tulku. (c. 1880-1947)
(v) GYALTSA TRAKPA GYAMTSO: The eleventh Gyaltsha Tulku (1902-1959)
(vi) KHYNSEYE RINPOCHE:
(vii) CHOSKYI NYINJE: The tenth Trungpa Tulku, who received the Rabjam ordination from the fifteenth Karmapa.

FOOTNOTES

274 (1870-1948).
275 'Long.'
276 The 'Rigchen Pechen.'
277 The ninth Pamo Tulku, who died 1911.
278 Who had many reincarnations, the third of which was Kargyudpa. The others were Nyingmapa and Sakya.
279 The 'Rigchen Pechen Chodzong... in 75 volumes.
280 The first.
281 Who gave him the empowerment of 'Drod Tulku Kunj Buddha' (10 volumes of Candrasu).
282 Where he recognized the new Drukchen Rinpoche.
283 Which is in the present Rumtek monastery, Sikkim, preserved within a Gompa (Reliquary).
284 'Nam Chab,' lit. 'sky-fallen.' It is in Rumtek.
285 Tuning che nga.
286 The second.
287 The tenth, now living in Bhutan. A great teacher.
288 The eleventh.
289 Later this was interpreted as indicating the direction in which his future reincarnation would be born. The sixteenth Karmapa was born in the East.
RANGJUNG RIGPE DORJE: THE SIXTEENTH KARMAPA
(Tib: Rang-byung Rig-pa'i-Rdo-rje)  (Born: 1924)

Rangjung Rigpe Dorje, the present Gyalwa Karmapa, was born on the fifteenth day of the sixth month of the male wood rat year (1924) at Denbhor on the banks of the Dri Chu river, near to the ’Athup' palace in Derge, Eastern Tibet. Before his birth the Siddha Gyal Je and Dzogchen Thupten Choskyi Dorje both prophesied that a great Bodhisattva would soon come to Athup and advised the family to set up a camp outside the palace so that the birth would not take place in a lay environment. His father's name was Tsewang Paldor and his mother was called Kalzang Chosdun.

While still in his mother's womb the baby could be heard reciting the Mani Mantra. One day, shortly before the birth, his mother noticed that her stomach had become completely flattened, as if she was not pregnant at all. She proceded to the camp, set up on a hill behind the palace, and at sunrise the next morning she felt a great heaviness and her stomach began to swell very rapidly.
Soon afterwards the baby was born.

There was a slight fall of rain and many rainbows appeared all around, some ending at the camp and others at the palace. When the child was born he took seven steps, saying, "Mother, Mother! I am going away!" She wrapped him in a blanket and it was noticed that all the water in the offering-basins had turned into milk. Realising the importance of the birth the family let it be known that a girl had been born, in order to protect the child from ill-wishers.

In the meantime Situ Tulku and Jamgon Khontrul Tulku had opened the letter of prediction left by the fifteenth Karmapa and found the following detailed instructions: 'East of Tsurphu, close by a river, in a place that long ago had belonged to Powo Denma Yulgyal Tokgod* and to the Minister of Ling Kesar, on the Pal hill, decorated with the letters 'A' and 'thup', is a house made of earth, belonging to a Royal and religious family. The birth will take place there on the fifteenth day of the sixth month of the rat year.'

Both Situ Tulku and Jamgon Khontrul Tulku had clear visions of the Athup palace and sent off a party to determine if the new incarnation was to be found there. Upon their arrival the party heard of the birth of the remarkable child, in conditions exactly as had been predicted in the letter. The search was over. Thus the sixteenth Karmapa was recognised. For some years he remained in the palace, in the good care of his parents.

He was a child of extraordinary natural insight, if horses or cattle were missing from the area he could always give an exact description of the place where they could be found. His room in the palace was on the third floor. One day visitors brought him tea in an earthenware pot. Karmapa threw it down into the courtyard below and then sent a servant to pick it up. Miraculously it was not broken, nor had one drop of the tea been spilled. Laughing, Karmapa squeezed together the neck of the pot and sealed it completely. For a long time it was preserved in the Aithup palace.

When Karmapa was seven years old, Situ Tulkhu and Jamgon Khongtrul Tulkhu visited the palace and performed his primary ordination. A ceremonial empowerment of the Goddess Vajratarati was completed and on the twenty-seventh day of the first month of the female iron sheep year (1931) the young incarnation was ordained as a novice monk. Then Khyentse Rinpoche, Zimpon Leshe Gyaltsen and Donyar Gyaltsen Zangkyong together offered the sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa his ceremonial robes and Hat.

On the first day of the second month of the same year he was taken to the Paljung monastery at the invitation of Situ Tulkhu. On the way the party was met by the local ruler, Tsewang Palechod, who led them to the Lhendrup Teng palace, where many fine ceremonies were performed in honour of the new incarnation. Thousands of people gathered to receive his blessings.

On the eighth day of the second month the party reached Paljung monastery. The enthronement ceremony took place four days later in the large assembly hall and thousands of pilgrims gathered to pay homage to the Gyalwa Karmapa on this auspicious occasion. On the twenty-second day of the fourth month Situ Tulkhu accompanied him to Tsurphu, visiting many monasteries and places of pilgrimage on the way. Halfway between Khams and Tsurphu, at Gyina Gon monastery, the senior secretary and a hundred Lamas honoured the new incarnation. The following day, the thirteenth of the sixth month, the Black Hat ceremony was first performed in this lifetime. The sky was filled with rainbows and many flowers fell down from the heavens. Thousands were witness to this astonishing and auspicious event.

The journey continued. The way passed through a valley near the palace of the greatest Protectors of Tibet, Nyechen Tang Lha, which was situated on the crest of a mountain. Karmapa sent sacred grain and a white Yak as offerings to this Protector and the Yak was seen to run straight up to the top without any guidance. Gyaltsap Tulkhu, Pawa Tulkhu, Jamgon Khongtrul Tulkhu and many other Lamas arrived to escort the party to Tsurphu monastery, the traditional seat of the Karmapas.

The Gyalwa Karmapa travelled to Lhasa to meet His Holiness the thirteenth Dalai Lama, who performed his 'hair-cutting' ceremony. At their first meeting Karmapa was wearing his 'Ne-Sbu' hat, but the Dalai Lama saw another hat on top of it and pointed this out to his chief Minister. When Karmapa performed the traditional prostrations he was seen to take off his small hat, but afterwards the Dalai Lama asked why he had not taken off the other hat also, as it was cus-Karmapa left for Tungnak Lhachen Gon monastery and was asked to perform a consecration ceremony. After the Holy grains had been thrown it was found that they had all turned into dazzling white Holy relics. One of the most famous hunters in the region came to Karmapa, prostrated and confessed that he had killed many innocent animals unnecessarily. He then presented his hunting dog to him. At the same time another visitor brought three baby deer and presented them to Karmapa. Soon the hunting dog and the three deer became very good friends, being completely at ease in each other's company. Other people brought cats, guinea pigs, mice and rats and soon all these animals were sleeping side by side. While Karmapa was preaching at the Thanam monastery one of the deer left a clear hoof-mark on a rock.

Karmapa reached Dil Yak monastery where the party all stayed in tents, several of which were joined together. On one occasion he was seen high up off the ground, riding a deer along the ropes from one tent to another. The party reached Radra drok in the mountains where there was a great shortage of drinking water. The Lama Samten Gyantso explained to Karmapa that the nearest spring was three miles away and asked for a blessing to help the situation. Karmapa ordered that a wooden tub should be brought and placed near the monastery. Then he said he wanted to take a bath, so people carried water to fill it up. After the bath he told the attendants to empty the water onto the ground. Immediately it started to rain and a new spring broke forth from the spot where the tub had been standing. The water shortage of the monastery was permanently resolved.

Passing by Chos Gon in Khams, where the local protector had a palace on the top of a very high mountain, Karmapa offered this protector a beautiful red horse which ran straight up the mountain to the summit. The party reached Karna Gon and as Karmapa entered the great assembly hall all the tops of the reliquaries were seen to rise themselves, as if in a salute. Several days later he visited the Dam Gon Pung cave, where a Naga King was seen to come out and honour him.

Situ Tulku came to Karma Gon and took Karmapa to the Palpung monastery where he received the full Kargyudpa 'Treasury' teachings and the Oral transmission. He travelled to Latag where he gave many teachings to the Ruler before returning to Palpung and continuing on to Li Thang, accompanied by Situ Tulku. They visited Dzog Sar monastery, where the Abbot Khyentse Choskyi Lodru requested that the Black Hat ceremony be performed. During this auspicious event Khyentse Rinpoche saw Karmapa in the form of Dusum Khyenpa, the first incarnation, and the Black Hat was to be seen floating about eighteen inches above his head.

At Pangphug Gon monastery there was a statue of Dusum Khyenpa that had been known to speak on several occasions. In the main hall, on a pillar support stone, Situ Tulku made a permanent footprint on the left side and Karmapa made one on the right. On the flagstone in front of the monastery his dog left a print and his horse left a hoof print on a stone in the stable. Close by the monastery there is a lake at the head of the valley, where Karmapa left about twenty footprint impressions on a large rock.

Karmapa travelled to Takshi monastery, quite close by, and there staged the Dance of Mahakala. Two neighbouring provinces were fighting and many people had been killed, so Karmapa visited the area and made peace between the various parties. The Ruler of China, General Chang Kai-Shek, invited Karmapa to visit, but he did not accept the invitation. Instead he returned to Palpung monastery, where he took the empowerments and initiations of 'Drupthop Kunta' and studied the Vinaya Swatra, the Prajnaparamita, the Abhidharma Kosa, the Cakrasamvara Tantra, the Kalachakra Tantra and other teachings, under the guidance of Situ Tulku and Khentse Rinpoche. He received all these in their complete forms.

On the fifteenth day of the ninth month of the male iron dragon year (1940) he travelled to Tsorpu, visiting the Panchen monastery on the way. In that place there was a statue of the Protector Zhing Kyong, riding on a horse. As soon as Karmapa approached the horse started to neigh, much to the surprise of everyone. He proceeded to Dam Chung, where the main Deity offered him a large unpaired nine-eyed Zir-stone, a type of precious banded-agate. The party reached Tsorpu on the eleventh day of the eighth month of the female iron snake year (1941). For the next few years Karmapa engaged himself in his study and meditations, while the monastery was extensively rebuilt.

In the male wood monkey year (1944) he made pilgrimage to Trag and Samye monasteries and then visited the Drowolung monastery in South Tibet, a seat of Marpa the Translator, where he had marvellous visions of Marpa, Jetsun Milarepa and Je Gampopa. He received an invitation from His Royal Highness Jigme Wangchuk, King of Bhutan, asking him to visit his country. In the second month of the male wood monkey year (1944) Karmapa travelled there and visited the Bumthang district of the North, where he was most warmly welcomed by the King. At his request the Black Hat ceremony was performed and on this occasion the King saw Karmapa in many different miraculous forms.

Karmapa visited the Champa and Kuje temples in Bumthang, Northern Bhutan, where he offered a ceremonial silk scarf to the image of Guru Padmasambhava in the Kuje shrine, where there is an impression of Padmasambhava’s body in the rock. The silk scarf flew high up into the air and stuck itself onto the forehead of the large statue. All who witnessed this were very amazed and it was taken to be a most auspicious and significant event. From Bhutan Karmapa returned to Tsorpu monastery.

Situ Tulku travelled from Khams to Tsorpu, meeting Karmapa there on the eleventh day of the ninth month of the female wood bird year (1945). At the age twenty-three Karmapa received the detailed final ordination, together with the initiations and explanations of the higher Kargyu teachings. On the twenty second day of the fourth month of the female fire pig year (1947), he left for Teod in Western Tibet and Situ Tulkhu returned to his monastery in Khams.

Karmapa visited several Kargyu monasteries at Mendong and Lu Kar and from Teod he travelled on pilgrimage to Nepal. There he was highly honoured by King Tribhuvan Bir Bikram Shah Dev and the Royal family and performed the Black Hat ceremony for them all. He visited all the main pilgrimage places in Nepal and bestowed his blessings upon thousands. For this journey the King of Bhutan graciously delegated four high government officials to act as guides and interpreters. The Maharaja of Sikkim, Sir Tashi Namgyal, sent Kazi Sherab Gyatsen to act as his personal escort. All this help was greatly appreciated as it enabled the pilgrimage to take place in the most satisfactory manner.

From Nepal Karmapa travelled to India via Lumbini the birth place of Lord Buddha and on to Sarnath and Bodhi Gaya, where he performed prostrations and prayers; there were many fine ceremonies. The pilgrimage was continued to Abanta, Ellora and Kushinagara, the place of Lord Buddha's final passing. He received an invitation from Sir Tashi Namgyal of Sikkim, asking him to bless his country with a visit. Accordingly Karmapa travelled to Gangtok, the capital, and stayed in the monastery attached to the Royal palace. The Black Hat ceremony was performed and he preached to the people.

On the thirty third day of the first month of the male earth rat year (1948) Karmapa returned to India and travelled to Rewalgar, in the North West, where he spent several days and performed a special rite of Guru Padmasambhava. Thousands came to receive his blessings and the local people remarked that many white snakes appeared from a stone wall and that there were unusual movements on the surface of the lake.

The party travelled on due North, via Kunu and Putang, to the Holy mountain of Kailash. Karmapa made three complete circumambulations of this mountain, taking three days for each one, and also went around the Holy lake of Mansarovar. He visited all the places of pilgrimage in the region. Then he travelled right across Tibet, via the Mendong Kargyu monastery, and reached Tsurphu on the seventeenth day of the eleventh month of the male earth rat year (1948).

Karmapa invited Jampol Khongtrul Tulkhu to come and give further teachings to him at Tsurphu. From him he received many teachings, including the 'Six Yoga' of Naropa and the remaining Oral transmission. In the year of the male Monkey (1950) an epidemic of smallpox struck Tsurphu, so Karmapa performed the 'Tajra Kila' rites. Soon it had subsided and all those who were affected recovered very quickly.

On the twenty-ninth day of the fourth month of the male water dragon year (1952) he visited Chang in Northern Tibet and there performed the Black Hat ceremony. He went to the Kar Chung monastery and before entering it was seen to spit on the ground outside. An elderly lady devotedly gathered up the spittle and carefully preserved it. Later it was found to have turned into precious shining relics, which kept on multiplying. Many of these were given to sick people, helping them to become cured, and many are still preserved by his followers. Karmapa returned to Tsurphu on the seventeenth day of the tenth month of the same year (1952).

On the eighteenth day of the fourth month of the male water snake year (1953) Karmapa journeyed to Lhasa, where he had audience with His Holiness the fourteenth Dalai Lama, Tenzin Gyatso, and received the empowerment of Kalachakra from him. On the twenty-fifth day of the eighth month of the same year he returned to Tsurphu, where he imparted the full empowerment, explanation and initiation of 'Chu Long Ten' to Chong Rinpoche of the Mindroling Nyingmapa monastery. He also performed 'Men Ladr', the collection of medicinal plants, and distributed them widely.

On the seventeenth day of the sixth month of the male wood horse year (1954) the Gyalwa Karmapa visited China, together with His Holiness the Dalai Lama, Chong Rinpoche and other High Lamas. During this visit Karmapa made a prediction of the whereabouts of the new Situ incarnation, the twelfth, and a letter containing details of this was sent to Tibet. After a stay in Peking and other parts of China, Karmapa returned to Tibet, travelling via many monasteries in Khams and Do, where he bestowed teachings and blessings. On this occasion he was asked to represent His Holiness the Dalai Lama who was himself unable to make the journey. (1955).

Karmapa went to the Palpung monastery, where he recognised and enthroned the new incarnation of Situ, Tsonyod Nyinchen Wangpo. He visited Lhasa briefly, where he had some important conversations with His Holiness the Dalai Lama after which he returned to Tsurphu, reaching the monastery on the seventeenth day of the fifth month of the female wood sheep year (1955).

The Dalai Lama accepted his invitation to visit Tsurphu, during which visit the Black Hat ceremony was performed for him, and in return he gave the empowerment of the compassionate Adivatbusha. At this time fighting broke out in Eastern Tibet, between the Khampas and the Chinese. The Chinese sent a request for Karmapa to visit the area of Chamdo and he travelled there and advised both sides to refrain from any further hostilities. He made them promise to keep a five-year truce, but the Chinese were now trying to convert everyone to communism and people were feeling very uneasy. While in Chamdo Karmapa had numerous visitors and bestowed many empowerments and blessings to create stability in the area. Then he travelled to Lhasa, where he explained the situation to the Dalai Lama before returning to his monastery at Tsurphu.

On the twenty-ninth day of the ninth month of the male fire monkey year (1956) Karmapa travelled once more on pilgrimage to India. He rested at the Dechen Choskor Ling monastery and again at the Kargyud monastery at Yatrong, near Sikkim. He visited Gangtok, the Sikkimese capital, where he was most warmly welcomed by the Maharaja, Sir Tashi Namgyal, who deputed Kazi Sonam Gyamtso as Karmapa's personal guide and interpreter. From Sikkim the party moved to India, visiting Bodh Gaya, Sarnath, Kushinagar and Lumbini, where Karmapa met up with His Holiness the Dalai Lama, who was also on pilgrimage there.

The journey continued to Nepal, where Karmapa visited the three Holy places, Bodhanath, Swayambhunath and Namio Buddhaya and gave blessings and teachings to many thousands. He returned once more to India, where he visited many Holy places of the South, including Ajanta, Ellora, and the great Stupa at Sanchi. He continued on up to Kalimpong, near Darjeeling, where he was met by Her Royal Highness Azi Wangmo of Bhutan. He travelled to Sikkim, visiting the Potong monastery in the North. There the elderly Lamas of the nearly ruined Rumtek monastery asked him to visit that place also. Karmapa told them that the time was not yet right, but that he would come later. He returned to Tsurphu, by which time further hostilities had started in the Doomed region of Khams.

The Ninth Sangye Nyenpa Rinpoche and the Eighth Traleg Rinpoche both came to stay in Tsurphu, having left Khams on account of the troubles there. Karmapa recognised the twelfth incarnation of Gyalsap Tulkhu, Trakpa Tenpai Yaphel, and performed his enthronement at Tsurphu monastery. From Sechen Klongtrul Rinpoche's invitation of the teachings of Longchenpa the Siddha, along with the full explanations, Situ Tulkhu came to visit Tsurphu.

Fighting broke out all over Tibet and Karmapa was begged by his disciples to flee the country while he had the chance. He told them not to worry, saying “It is not necessary for me to leave yet. But if the time comes you can be assured that there will be no difficulty for me.” Sometime later Karmapa sent Situ Tulkhu and the ninth Sangye Nyenpa Tulkhu to Bhutan. He gave instructions for the restoration of the Nyide Gon monastery in Lhobrag, in the South, telling the monks to go about life in their normal way. At this time a new monastery was being built for Karmapa at Kur Tod, in Northern Bhutan, under the patronage of Her Royal Highness Azi Wangmo, who had met him in Kalimpong. The monastery was finished and prepared for use.

The Chinese hostilities became intolerable and future possibilities for a peaceful existence were very unlikely. Realising that the cause of the Dharma would best be served by escaping from the ever-tightening grips of the Chinese. His Holiness the Gyalwa Karmapa decided that he had no choice but to move to more peaceful areas. Accordingly, on the fourth day of the second month of the earth pig year (1959), accompanied by an entourage of one hundred and sixty Lamas, monks and laymen, Karmapa left Tsurphu monastery, the ancient seat of the Karmapas since the twelfth century, and proceeded towards Bhutan. Accompanying him were Shamar Tulkhu, Gyaltsap Tulkhu and the fourth Ponlop Rinpoche, as well as many other incarnate Lamas. Jangtshog Khontrul Tulkhu was already in Kalimpong, India, and Situ Tulkhu was in Bhutan.

Under the directions of the Gyalwa Karmapa the party were able to bring with them the most precious of the sacred statues, ritual items, relics, icons, paintings, books and costumes, which had been preserved at the Tsurphu monastery over the centuries. The hazardous and difficult journey, taking twenty-one days in all, passed through Ngorbog in Southern Tibet, the birthplace of Marpa the Translator. Rites were performed at various sacred places on the way, for the welfare of all sentient beings and for the preservation of the Buddhist Dharma in the difficult times ahead.

The party arrived safely at Shabje Thang, in the Rumtek district of North Bhutan, on the twenty-fifth day of the second month of the earth pig year (1959). They were most warmly welcomed by the Royal Highness Tsurtrim Palmo, the Aunt of His Royal Highness the King, and many Ministers and high ranking officials of the government. At Bumthang Karmapa visited the Kye, Champa and Tashi Cho Ling temples, where special rites were performed for the protection and progress of the Buddhist Dharma.

His Majesty King Jigme Dorje Wangchuk, accompanied by his senior Ministers, gave a warm welcome and reception to His Holiness the Gyalwa Karmapa at Khasa Drab Chu, near the Bhutanese capital of Thimphu. At this time discussions were started with the Government of India, considering future plans for the resettlement of the Gyalwa Karmapa and his many followers. It was decided that all should transit through Bhutan and settle temporarily in Dharamsala, North Western India.

Meanwhile, in Sikkim, the Royal family headed by Sir Tashi Namgyal had been discussing what could best be done to help Karmapa in this time of difficulty and uncertainty. The Maharaja had not forgotten the long-standing links of the Royal family and people of Sikkim with the Line of Karmapa incarnates. It was decided to offer him a permanent place in Sikkim.

There was one thought uppermost in Karmapa's mind, and it was that, though in exile, he should not rest but must take full responsibility for rekindling and revitalising the torch of the Dharma, with the material and spiritual cooperation of the many Buddhists throughout the world. He felt that the Dharma had become like a lamp which needed an immediate and sustained supply of vital oil, in order to be able to burn a clear strong light.

In his contemplations the Gyalwa Karmapa felt that Sikkim would undoubtedly be the best place to set about creating the conditions for the fulfilment of his mission. Sikkim he considered especially suitable on account of the natural Buddhist inclinations of the people and particularly as the country had been sanctified by a visit of Guru Padmasambhava in the distant past. Therefore he readily accepted the kind invitation to set up his base in that country. Accompanied by Her Royal Highness Tsurtrim Palmo of Bhutan Karmapa led the party to Gangtok arriving on the twenty-fifth day of the fourth month of the earth pig year (1959). He was received at the palace by the Maharaja, members of the Royal family, government officials and the Sikkimese people. He was highly honoured and all received his blessings.

Sir Tashi Namgyal, the Maharaja, offered Karmapa the choice of several sites in his Kingdom, for the location of the new monastery. Karmapa selected the site at Rumtek, where a Karma Kagyud monastery had been built during the time of his ninth incarnation, Wangchuk Dorje. This place possessed all the auspicious attributes needed for the site of a seat of the Karmapa: seven streams flowing towards it, seven hills facing it, a mountain behind, snow ranges in front and a river below, spiraling downhill like the form of a conch-shell.

Karmapa and his party immediately arranged to proceed directly to Rumtek and arrived there on the fifth day of the fifth month of the earth pig year (1959). At that time Rumtek consisted of a monastery mostly in ruins and about half a dozen huts surrounded by jungle. There was neither adequate accommodation nor facilities for preparing food. Conditions were extremely difficult.

The immediate problem was to commence making the place habitable. During this period land was cleared, tents were set up and everyone began to work hard in order to fulfil the dream of establishing a new Centre for the Gyalwa Karmapa.

THE RUMTEK CENTRE

Karmapa travelled to New Delhi, where he met Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the Indian Prime Minister. He was received with great warmth and cordiality and there were many discussions. Pandit Nehru fully understood the difficulties faced by Karmapa's followers and promised that the Indian Government would provide financial assistance for the construction of the new monastery. He made assurances that there would be a free supply of food and clothing for the people there.

On the fifteenth day of the second month of the female iron ox year (1961) the community of monks at Rumtek began preparations for Yarsa, the Buddha's rainy-summer retreat, as laid down in the ancient Buddhist scriptures. The Maharaja of Sikkim graciously gifted seventy-four acres of land at Rumtek to the Gyalwa Karmapa, in perpetuity. The Sikkim Government generously donated funds towards the preliminary construction costs and provided free timber. A motorable road was made, electric cables brought in and water provided.
Karmapa: The Black Hat Lama of Tibet

The Government of India made a large grant for the immediate construction of an assembly-hall and for residential quarters for the monks. A further sum was allocated for a dispensary, housing for the medical officers and contributions were received from the general public, even though no appeal was made. Despite the generosity of so many people these funds were insufficient for the purpose, so Karmapa added a huge amount from his own resources.

Work on clearing the site began on the auspicious twenty-second day of the eleventh month of the water tiger year (1962). Monks and laymen pledged themselves to complete the clearing and preparatory work in the shortest possible time, working in both heat and cold. It took one hundred and eight men, working ten hours a day, some five hundred and forty days to clear and level the site. There were many casual labourers not included in this figure. The foundation stone of the new monastic centre was laid by the new ruler of Sikkim, Palden Thondup Namgyal, on the sixteenth of June, nineteen sixty-four, a most auspicious day according to the Tibetan calendar.

It took four years to complete the construction of the new centre, designed in the most beautiful traditional Tibetan style. One hundred and thirty disciples, including volunteers of various nationalities, worked together to complete the new Centre for Dharma. It was named 'Pal-Karmapa-Densa-Sled-Drup-Chos-Khor-Ling', meaning 'The Seat of His Holiness The Gyalwa Karmapa: A Centre for the Teaching and Practice of the Dharma'.

The rare treasured religious relics, icons and books brought from Tibet were installed in the new monastery. On the first day of the first month of the fire horse year (1966) the Gyalwa Karmapa ceremonially entered the new Centre. It was a magnificent and highly auspicious occasion.

RECENT ACTIVITIES

In 1967 Karmapa, accompanied by a party of ninety-five followers, visited Thimpu, the capital of Bhutan, at the request of His Majesty the late King. Reaching there on the tenth day of the eighth month he was warmly received and taken to the Tashi Choskhor Ling palace in a ceremonial procession. During the course of his stay in Bhutan he visited Tak Tsang, the 'Tiger's nest' cave-monastery, famous for the visit of Guru Padmasambhava. He also travelled to the Kyichu temple in Paro, there performing special rites for peace and tranquility in the world and for the preservation and propagation of the Dharma everywhere. Since 1967 Karmapa has been making regular visits to Bhutan, at the invitation of His Majesty the King and the Royal family.

His Royal Highness the late King and Her Royal Highness the Queen Mother most generously presented the Tashi Choskhor-Ling palace at Rumthang, together with its entire landed property, to Karmapa, who proposes to start a large Dharma Centre there. Work on the construction of the main shrine and residential quarters for about three hundred and fifty monks, near to the main palace, was started in 1969.

Karmapa has taken measures to establish monasteries in Ladakh and Nepal. Further monasteries have been given in Bhutan and in Calcutta a new Centre is being constructed. In 1971 Karmapa conducted readings of the Buddhist scriptures and gave initiations to a large gathering of Buddhists from many different countries at the new Rumtek Centre. In the same year one thousand ten-inch high gilded statues of Lord Buddha were made, filled with herbs and charms and blessed. In addition eighty-four statues of the Indian Siddhas, six of Tibetan Siddhas and many others of the teachers of all sects of Buddhism were similarly prepared. All were then placed in boxes and presented on the altars of the main assembly-hall.

In 1972 Karmapa undertook another extensive pilgrimage throughout India, accompanied by the thirteen Shamar Tulku, the fifth Punlop Tulku and other Lamas and monks from the new Rumtek monastery. The party visited Bodh Gaya, Sarnath, Sanchi, Ajanta, Ellora and Nagarjunasagar and then returned to Sikkim. People journeyed continually to see the Gyalwa Karmapa and many received his blessings.

In 1974 Karmapa led a party of Karmapa Lamas to the West, visiting Europe, America and Canada, and performing the Black Hat rite on a number of occasions. In this way he has been able to establish direct contact with his overseas Centres and to spread his teachings more widely. To all those seeking the Way of the Dharma he acts, in his previous incarnations, as a guide, teacher, friend and true example.

"May all spiritual leaders enjoy long lives and prosperity. May the religious Order multiply and may all fulfill their duties. May the blessings of the Dharma liberate all departed souls. In this world may sickness, poverty, wars and evil influences be cut at the root, and permanently destroyed. May all things be Auspicious. May all aspirations be well fulfilled. May the darkness of this Kali Yuga, The Black Age, be dispersed!"
The Spiritual Heads of the four major Buddhist sects in Tibet, photographed together in India shortly after their escape from Tibet. They are (left to right): Dodjon Rinpoche of the Nyingmapa sect, The Gyalwa Karmapa of the Kagyudpas, The Sakya Rinpoche of the Sakya sect, and The Dalai Lama of the Gelugpas.
ACTIVITIES AT THE CENTRE

The rich heritage of traditional Tibetan culture has been much encouraged by the establishing of a printing-press, an arts department and a metal-casting section. Many wood blocks for printing books have been carved and the press has produced quite a large number of scriptural texts in Tibetan. Skilled artists are engaged in painting traditional icons (Tangkas) and expert craftsmen manufacture high quality ritual objects, bronzes and temple fittings, from gold, silver, copper, bronze and iron.

Young incarnate Lamas and monks, among them the Ven. Shamar Tulku, the Ven. Situ Tulku, the Ven. Gyalsey Tulku and the Ven. Khontrul Tulku, take part in the varied activities at the Centre. Many come to Rumtek in order to study traditional literature, philosophy, arts, sciences and correct religious practices. Special training is given so that the young Lamas become well-versed in the drawing of pantherons, Mandalas and the making of sacrificial cakes (Tonmas). They are taught the proper intonation of vocal sounds (Pariguang), the blowing of trumpets, conch-shells and other traditionally Tibetan instruments. Religious dance dramas are performed regularly. In the training of young Lamas stress is laid on the reading and writing of Tibetan literature of religious importance and the memorization of ten major religious rites. Examinations are conducted regularly, covering the many different subjects.

RELIGIOUS CEREMONIES AND OBSERVANCES

Religious ceremonies and rites, as laid down in the Buddhist scriptures, are regularly observed at the Rumtek monastic centre. The following are part of the general programme of events:

(1) 'Tsedrup Tsap She Kha Chor': The Rite for long-life. From the ninth to the fifteenth day of every 1st month.

(2) 'Dolma Mandal Zhi Chog': The Four Mandalas of Goddess Tara and 'Tseringma': Worship of the Guardian Deity. From the third to the ninth of every month.

(3) 'Drup Chen' (Parpa-dance) and 'Tse-Chu' (Guru Padmasambhava): Dance training and full rehearsals are conducted throughout every third month, for the dances due each year.

(4) 'Chos Ling Terin Khyi Parpa Drup Chen' (The Rites of Vajrakila, as introduced by Terton Chogyur Lingpa): Together with the traditional Lama-dances these are held every alternate year, from the first to the eleventh day of the fourth month.

(5) 'Khojlo Demchog': Preparation of the Mandalas of the Tutelary Deity Chokrasamvara, in coloured sand, and their accompanying Rites. From the first to the eighth day of every fifth month, continuously for seven days.

(6) 'Chod Kyi Tseg Khor': The Chod Rite of Phadampa Sangye, from the fifth to the ninth day of every sixth month, for five days continuously.

(7) 'Versda': The Buddha's rainy summer retreat. From the fifteenth day (full moon) of every sixth month, until the thirtieth day of every seventh month. Religious instruction, memorization of scriptures and the reading and writing of religious books are all part of the required observances at this time.

(Tib. Dhyar-chos - summer retreat)

(8) 'Gyurwa Gya-mitso': The Mandala of Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara, in the red form. Preparation of the coloured Mandala from the twenty-first to the twenty-seventh day of every seventh month, with all the accompanying Rites.

(9) 'Karma Lhagpa Zhi Tron': Rites of the peaceful and wrathful Terton, Karma Lhungpa, from the first to the fifth days of every ninth month.

(10) 'Kun Rig Cho Ga': Worship and Rites of Vairocana, the Dhyani Buddha, from the third to ninth days of every tenth month.

(11) 'Drolod Yestor': Worship and Rites of the wrathful Dorje Drolo, from the twenty-second to the thirtieth days of every eleventh month.

(12) 'Gonpo Dorje Ber Nagpo Chen': Worship and Rites of the Great Protector Black Mahakala and Lama-dances, from the twenty-second to the thirtieth days of every twelfth month.

On Auspicious Days: The following monthly practices are observed in addition:

(1) 'Dulkar Ngeondup Kunzol': A ceremony to the Goddess White Tara, in the morning, and 'Tenphingma': Ceremonies of the Guardian Deity, in the afternoon, on the third day of every month.

(2) 'Gyurwa Gya-mitso': Rites of the Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara, in the morning, and 'Jesung Milarepa-Lharrup': Praise of Jetsun Milarepa, in the afternoon, on the eighth day of every month.

(3) 'Thug Drug Bar Cbed Lam Se': The Dharma-heart practices, in the morning, and 'Zhing Kyong': Protector Rites, in the afternoon, on the tenth day of every month.

(4) 'Hell Kyong Ten Ma Cho Nyi; Sol Chod': Offerings to the Twelve Guardian Deities, on the thirteenth day of every month.

(5) 'Demchok': Rites of the Tutelary Chokrasamvara, in the morning, and 'Thang Lha Nyen Do': Deity offerings in the form of coloured threads, in the afternoon of the fifteenth day (full moon) of every month.

(6) 'Dolma': The Rites of Goddess Tara in the morning, and 'Phagmo Dampalyi': The Rites of the Great Dakini Vajravarahi, in the afternoon, on the twenty-third day of every month.

(7) 'Thug Drug': The Heart-Yoga practices, in the morning, and 'Phagmo Lha Nge': Rites of the Five Dakinis, in the afternoon, on the twenty-fifth day of every month.

(8) 'Rin Rig Nam Par Nang Dze': Rite of the Yoga-Tantra, the 'all-seeing' practice. On the third day of every month.

In Addition:

(i) 'Lar Nge': Yoga-Tantra observances on the day of the rising moon, and

(ii) 'Lar Nge': Yoga-Tantra observances on the day of the waxing moon.

The Protector Mahakala is worshipped continuously in the Eastern-corner temple, with four monks in attendance, as was advised by His Holiness the Dalai Lama. In the West-corner room there is a small temple, where one monk keeps constant vigil.

Footnote:
A Note on the Tibetan Calendar

The Tibetan calendar is divided into major cycles of sixty years duration. These sixty year cycles are themselves divided into five minor twelve-year cycles, each year of which is identified by the name of an animal. These are five bird or reptile. The twelve years are also grouped consecutively with a distinguishing elemental. There are four elements, with alternating male and female attributes. Thus each sixty year cycle runs:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Elements</th>
<th>Male or Female</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>0</td>
<td>Metal Rat</td>
<td>Male</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Metal Ox</td>
<td>Female</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Tiger</td>
<td>Male</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Rabbit</td>
<td>Female</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Dragon</td>
<td>Male</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Snake</td>
<td>Female</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Horse</td>
<td>Male</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Sheep</td>
<td>Female</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Monkey</td>
<td>Male</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Dragon</td>
<td>Female</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

A year is based on the Lunar calendar, certain days of which are generally considered to be particularly auspicious, as are those falling on the 8th, 18th, 28th, and 25th of the month. When a day is deemed especially auspicious, owing to a specific combination of the phase of the moon and the point at which it occurs within the sixty-year cycle, such a day may be omitted from the calendar altogether and a more beneficial day of the month doubled in its place.

(Tibetan time systems can be further understood through the great Kalschaka Tantric)
PRECIOUS TREASURES OF THE KARMA-KARGYUDPA SECT
Preserved at the Rumtek Monastery

(1) Inside a golden relic-box, a statue of Mijo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa, made from marble by himself. The face is painted and the rest of the image is covered with gold and precious wrappings. It is said that "Whoever sees this image must quickly become Liberated". When the statue was made a small piece of marble was left over and this was squeezed by the Karmapa’s hand, leaving a clear impression of his palm. This piece can be seen preserved below the main statue, along with a small personal image of Vajrapani, the Protector-Goddess of the Karmapas.

(2) Inside a golden relic-box, a statue of Pemag Khenpo, once the personal icon of the Siddha Naropa, who presented it to Marpa. It is of copper and is heavily ornamented. One of the most precious treasures of the Karmpa incarnates.

(3) A statue of Pema Juvgues Chodrub Pal Barma, a form of Guru Padmasambhava, which was miraculously discovered within a mine by Kha Chab Dorje, the fifteenth Karmapa.

(4) A statue of Nar Lka Yangtshul, made from Dzi Chimi metal, it was presented to Rangjung Dorje, the third Karmapa, by the Protector of the Tsari lake in Southern Tibet.

(5) A statue of Chokzam Jampal Naropa, made from mixed white, red and yellow Dzi Chimi metals, discovered from within the relic-box of the Ruler of Derge, in Khams.

(6) A statue of Mahakala, named Gompo Gya Namsa, consecrated by Karma Pakshi, the second Karmapa.

(7) A five-pronged Yecdre (Vajra), made from Dzi Chimi metal, which belonged to the Terton Dorje Lingpa, who discovered it.

(8) A statue of Tong Drol Gomden, a form of Guru Padmasambhava, in a relic-box of silver. It was discovered by the Terton Chogyur Lingpa from the Chompe-Tak-Tok in Tsari Tso Kar.

(9) A statue of Guru Dawa Chenpo Chogma Atsong, a form of Guru Padmasambhava. A most important relic from the Tsurphu monastery of the Karmpas. It is preserved within a golden relic-box, decorated with the dancing figures of Dakinis.

(10) A statue of Tamag Khenpo Dukpe Namgyal, a form of Guru Padmasambhava, made by Tami Gonson from Dzi Chimi metal and discovered by the Terton Ratna Lingpa. It is preserved within a golden relic-box, with the auspicious symbols around.

(11) A statue of Tongtul Sangdrep, a form of Guru Padmasambhava, discovered by the Terton Ratna Lingpa and presented to the fifteenth Karmapa. It is preserved within a silver relic-box, inscribed with the auspicious symbols.

(12) A statue of Dolma Ngodrup Pel Barma, a form of the Goddess Tara, made from Li Kadar, a kind of bell metal. The image is heavily gilded, with many precious red corals decorating the upper part. It is preserved within a beautiful relic box. This statue helps successive Karmpapas to make their important predictions.

(13) A statue of Yeshe Nyingpo, a form of Guru Padmasambhava, discovered by the Terton Tashang Nudan Dorje. Inside the head of the image is preserved a precious jewel.

(14) A statue of Lord Buddha, made in Eastern India from Li Kadar metal. It was presented to the present Karmapa by Situ Tulku, after his ordination ceremony.

(15) A statue of Vajrasamani, made from red Dzi Chimi metal. She is the Guardian Deity of the Line of Karmpapas.

(16) A statue of Lord Buddha, in earth-witness Maha, made in Eastern India from Li Kadar metal. It was once the property of Oser Gocha, the King of Bengal who was the father of the first Buddhist Queen of Tibet. This precious image was presented to the tenth Tulku by King Mantrasimha of Bengal. It is considered to be as important as the Lord Buddha statue called Jowo Yeshe Nyingpo, which is in the great Jo Khang temple of Lhasa.

(17) A Yang Yum statue of Guru Padmasambhava, discovered by Terton Ugyen Chogyur Dechen Lingpa whilst he was preparing precious medicines in the cave known as Khando Mom Deong Gi Dechen Pung in lower Khams. This small statue was recovered from within a lump of the medicinal mixtures. It is preserved within a fine golden relic-box.

(18) Relics of Lord Buddha, discovered by Terton Tashang Nudan Dorje. They are preserved within a golden relic-box.

(19) A statue of Jetsun Dolma, the Goddess Tara, known as Zii Ji Baru, the Guardian Deity of the Buddhist King Indrabhuti of India. It is completely covered with inset precious jewels.

(20) White funeral reliquary (Rinschen) inside a statue of Dusum Khynapa, the first Karmapa. It is made of Li Kadar metal from Eastern India and was consecrated by himself. This most precious image has thrice preached the Six Yogas of Siddha Naropa. It is heavily gilded and painted.

(21) A statue of Dusum Khynapa, the first Karmapa, made from mixed red, yellow and white Dzi Chimi metal. It preserves the funeral relics of Dusum Khynapa and is believed to be good likeness of him. Though paint has many times been applied to the top of the head, it always peels off or disappears completely. Many tests of this have been made.
A statue of the Goddess Tara: it was the Guardian Deity of King Indrabhuit of India. It is covered with precious jewels.

(22) A statue of Vajradhara, the Adi-Buddha and root-Guru of the Kargyudpa sect. It was made by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, from a rhinoceros horn. It is partly gilded and painted.

(23) A statue of the Siddha Tilopa, carved by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, from a rhinoceros horn. It is partly gilded and painted.

(24) A statue of the Siddha Naropa, carved by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, from a rhinoceros horn. It is partly gilded and painted.

(25) A statue of the teacher Marpa, carved by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, from a rhinoceros horn. It is partly gilded and painted.

(26) A statue of Jetsun Milarepa, carved by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, from a rhinoceros horn. It is partly gilded and painted.

(27) A statue of Vajrapani, called Chag Dor, holding a kite-bird, made by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa, in gilded copper.

(28) A Yab Yum statue of Purpakila, named Dorje Shown Dule Kangyig, presented to the fifteenth Karmapa by Sherab Jungnes, a great Doctor. It was his Protector Deity.

(29) A round golden relic-box (Gan), usually carried by H. H. The Gyalwa Karmapa, containing relics found in the head of Dharmadhuti, the son of the teacher Marpa. When he was cremated a small statue of Vajrasattva was found within a cluster of relics.

(30) A golden relic-box containing the original green silk used to wrap up the Namgyal Purpa' (ritual knife) worn by Yeshe Tsoigyal, the disciple of Guru Padmasambhava. It was found within the Thang La rock, one of the eight great pilgrimage centres of Tibet.

(31) A relic of Karma Pakshi, the second Karmapa, being a cheek-bone in the form of the Tibetan letter 'Dhi', along with several other relics, all preserved within a fine golden relic-box.

(32) A stone statue of Anulomatshottara, discovered from within a large round stone by Drigor Dorje Trakpa.

(33) Inside a fine relic-box, relics preserved in the form of the Tibetan letter 'Ahi', which appeared among the remains of a rib-bone of Makyö Dorje, the eighth Karmapa.

(34) Within a golden relic-box, a bone of Lhasam Pema Sel, the consort of Guru Padmasambhava, showing the self-formed (Rangjung) statue of Jetsun Dolma, The Goddess Tara.

(35) Within a large golden relic-box is a smaller golden box containing a statue which used to be worn by the hair of King Strong Ysen Gampo, the Siddha King of Tibet. It is called De Chang Wang Gi Gyulpo, meaning 'Fulfiller of Desires'. It is a golden form of Jamphala, the wealth Deity and was retrieved from the precious lake of Tsari Tso Kar by Rangjung Dorje, the third Karmapa.
A precious statue of the Goddess Saraswati, preserved in the Rumtek monastery.

(36) A Namchak sky-fallen Purpa (ritual knife), discovered by Terchen Chogyur Lingpa. It is a great treasure and is kept within a relic-box.

(37) A Namchak sky-fallen Purpa, of mixed Dzi Chimi metal of a red and white colour, discovered by Terchen Chogyur Lingpa.

(38) A white statue showing the ten miracles of Lord Buddha. It was made by the Siddha Nagarjuna, who discovered the material Lu Zim from the great Nagalake in India. It was presented to Rolpe Dorje, the fourth Karmapa, while on the way to China.

(39) A grey-green statue showing the ten miracles of Lord Buddha. It was made by the Siddha Nagarjuna out of Lu Zim, a metal-like material recovered from the Nagalake. It was presented to Rolpe Dorje, the fourth Karmapa, while on the way to China.

(40) A statue of Lord Buddha, made of Li metal from Eastern India. This was the personal Guardian of Palden Atisha, from whom it passed on through to Je Tsongkhapa, founder of the Gelugpa sect. When Delzhin Shepa, the fifth Karmapa, was returning to Tibet after visiting China this statue was sent to him by Je Tsongkhapa, his former disciple.

(41) A statue of Lord Buddha, made of Li metal from Eastern India, presented to Shamar Taiiku by the present H. H. The Dalai Lama, after ordaining him as a monk. This statue is called Marze Songe.

(42) A statue of Vajrapani, made from Chinese bell-metal.

(43) A painting (Thangka) of Palden Atisha, drawn and painted by himself, with an inscription on the reverse, in his own hand.

(44) A series of forty-six scroll-paintings (Thangkas) of the Kargyudpa Lineage of Teachers. Very precious to the Kargyudpa sect.

(45) A statue of Lord Buddha in the standing posture, known as Tshag Pa Trong Mer Ma, which was the personal Guardian of King Ashoka of India. It was presented to the teacher Marpa by Siddhu Maitripa.

(46) A statue of Lord Buddha, known as Tshag Pa Chom Sling Ma, the personal Guardian Deity of the Indian Siddha Jowo Ser Lingpa, the teacher of Atisha.

(47) A statue of Lord Buddha, made of yellow Li-metal. The Guardian Deity of Sakya Kunga Nyinpo.

(48) A statue of the white Tara, made of red Dzi Chimi metal by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa.

(49) A statue of Avalokiteshvara, known as Sa Yi Nyinpo, made of Dzi Chimi metal by the tenth Karmapa.

(50) A statue of Vajrasana, made of Dzi Chimi metal. It was the main Guardian Deity of Lama Ngoppa, one of the important disciples of Marpa. It is a statue that has spoken on occasions ("Song Chon").

(51) A statue of Jritui Dolma, the Goddess Tara, known as Ngodrup Pal Karma.
Karma: The Black Hat Lama of Tibet of yellow Li metal. The Guardian of the great Kenchen Shiwa.

(52) A statue of Karma Pakshi, the second Karma, made by himself and named Pakshi Nga Tra Ma ('My likeness'). It is composed of mixed white, black and multicoloured Dzey Chum metal. It was consecrated by himself.

BOOKS

(1) The Kanjur: in 104 volumes.
(2) The Tanjur: in 206 volumes.
(3) The 'Rinchen Ter Zod': in 61 volumes.
(4) The 'Dam Ngag Zod': in 10 volumes.
(5) The 'Ngag Zod': in 3 volumes.
(6) The 'She Cha Zod': in 3 volumes.
(7) The 'Padma Karpo Sung Bum': in 14 volumes.
(8) The 'Dratop Kuntu': in 10 volumes.
(9) The 'Kha Chab Dorje Ka Bum': in 10 volumes.
(10) The 'Khongtrul Ka Bum': in 10 volumes.
(11) The 'Mila Gur Bum': in 1 volume.
(12) The 'Seng Treng Namthar': in 2 volumes.
(13) The 'Shamar Kha Chod Wangpo Ka Bum': in 4 volumes of 10.
(14) The 'Yeshe Khr Sam': in 1 volume.
(15) The 'Druppo Ka Bum': in 2 volumes.
(16) The 'Chog Chen': in 3 volumes.

Plus numerous smaller works.

FOOTNOTES

1. Nara Khandroma (Skr: Sarvabuddha Dakini).
2. (1280-1370), a great discoverer of treasures (Tercon).
3. (1403-1478), a great discoverer of treasures (Tercon). He was a devotee of Upagupta, the Tantric Tatttyara. He brought together the important, Old Tantras, compiling them as the 'Nying ma rGyud Bum', the '200,000 Old Tantras'.
4. Princess Bhekuti, the daughter of King Amitavamara of Nepal (Tib: Ozer Gocha), who married King Seong Ten Cempho of Tibet.
5. Of three fingers width in size.

Preparations of materials for building.

Clearing the site for the new monastery.

Pictures missing
APPENDIX: (A)

THE SHAMAR LINEAGE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Incarnation</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Years</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st</td>
<td>TRAKPA SENG</td>
<td>(1283-1349)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2nd</td>
<td>KHA CHOD WANGPO</td>
<td>(1350-1405)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3rd</td>
<td>CHOSPAL YESHE</td>
<td>(1406-1452)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4th</td>
<td>CHOSKYI TRAKPA</td>
<td>(1453-1524)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th</td>
<td>KUNCHOK YENLAK</td>
<td>(1525-1583)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6th</td>
<td>CHOSKYI WANGCHUK</td>
<td>(1584-1630)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th</td>
<td>YESHE NYINGPO</td>
<td>(1631-1694)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th</td>
<td>PALCHEN CHOSKYI DODRUP</td>
<td>(1695-1732)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th</td>
<td>KUNCHOK JUNGANES</td>
<td>(1733-1741)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th</td>
<td>MIPHAM CHOSDRUP GYAMTSO</td>
<td>(1742-1792)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>(No formal recognition, for political reasons, until:)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th</td>
<td>JAMBYANG RINPOCHE</td>
<td>(c.1880-1947)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12th</td>
<td>TINLAI KUNCHUP</td>
<td>(1948-1950)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13th</td>
<td>CHOSKYI LODRU</td>
<td>(1952-present)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The first Shamur Tulku, TRAKPA SENG, was born in the Tibetan female water sheep year (1283) at Pompor Gang, on the bank of the Shel river in Khams, Eastern Tibet. Early one morning in his fourth year he had visions of the Siddha Protector Deshe Drup Thangpa and the Goddess Tara, receiving important initiations from them.

By the time he was six he had quite a reputation as a seer of demons and often described to people the amazing forms of Tutelary Deities and Protectors. His parents became worried about this and took him to see Luma Lodru Trakpa, in the hope that he would find a way to exercise the disturbing influences. The Lama asked the small boy to tell him what it was that he could see and was given a fully detailed description of the Tantric Deity Hayagriva and his accompanying Mantrala. Recognizing the unique powers of perception inherent in the boy the Lama advised his parents to make him a monk, saying that it was likely that he would become a great Lama, thus benefiting the cause of the Buddhist Dharma.

The boy was ordained as a monk and studied with Lama Trakpa and Lopon Gyal Je. At the age of seventeen he met Rangjung Dorje, the third Karmapa, accompanied him to the Tsurphu monastery and received precepts from him. Then he went to the great Song Phu Neutok college, where he completed his studies. He soon became famous as a scholar and master of debate.

At the age of twenty-four, at Dechen Yong, he again met Karmapa and received from him the complete teachings, including the 'Six Yogas' of Siddha Naropa. For a period of two years he went into retreat in a cave. While there practising the Dream Yoga he had a vision of Rangjung Dorje, who advised him to start a meditation centre. The Protector Marakala provided all the details of the location and it was founded at Nesang. The buildings were quickly completed and within a short time Shamur Trakpa Seng had about twenty-five disciples, who practised Yoga meditation there. Then he returned to his cave and spent the rest of his life in meditation.

On the twelfth day of the second month of the female ox year he passed away amidst many auspicious signs, in his sixty-seventh year. His foremost disciples were Yagde Panchen and Tokden Gon Gyalwa. (1283-1349)

The second Shamur Tulku, KHA CHOD WANGPO, was born in the Tibetan male
KARMAPA THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

iron tiger year (1350) at Chenad Lung in Chang Namshung, Northern Tibet. At the age of seven months Karmapa Rolpe Dorje appeared before him in a vision and said:

"The flower is ready, but not yet opened,
Wait for the right time, for you are still human,
Highly qualified as you are, please wait a little longer,
And I shall teach you to become fully perfected!"

Then Karmapa snapped his fingers in the air and from that moment the young child could remember all the details of his past life and began to tell people that he was the incarnation of Trakpa Senge.

By the age of fourteen months he was preaching the Dharma and at the age of three years was giving specific teachings. His fame spread quickly, reaching servants and disciples of the previous Shamar Tulku. They came to visit him and immediately recognised him as the new incarnation. Then he was taken to Kampo Nesang monastery, where he was enthroned.

At the age of seven years, while crossing a river, he met Karmapa Rolpe Dorje, who taught him the complete Mahamudra, the Six Yogas and the Karpyudpa Lineage. From Khenpo Dondrup Pal he received the primary and secondary ordinations. Having completed his studies he travelled to the pilgrimage-place of Tsari, where he had an auspicious vision of the Sidda Donbhi Heruka. Later he received a Red Hat (Tib: Zha-mar) from the Gyalwa Karmapa in recognition of his great achievements and as a symbol of his function as a teacher.

Shamar Kha Chod Wangpo, the Dzogchen Rinpoche, recognised him as the next incarnation of Karmapa, Dezshin Shogpa, and enthroned him at the Tsurphu monastery where he transmittted the teachings to him. At the age of thirty-seven he founded a large monastic meditation centre at Gaden Mamo and soon there were three hundred Yogis practising there. He engaged himself in the perfection of the secret teachings and had many visions of Protectors and Tsetenlha Deities, from whom he received many important initiations.

On the twenty-ninth day of the seventh month of the female wood bird year
(1405) he passed away. His foremost disciples were the fifth Karmapa, Lama Kazhpa Rinchen and Sowa Rigpe Raldré (1335-1405).

(3)
The third Shamar Tulku, CHOSKYE TRAKPA, was born on the eleventh day of the second month of the male fire dog year (1406) in Trag Do of Kongpo province in Southern Tibet. While still inside his mother's womb he could be heard reciting the 'Mani Mantra' and at the time of his birth there were several rainbows in the shape of an umbrella, which formed right over the roof of the house. On the soles of his feet there was formed the Mongolian letter 'Gyal' (meaning Victory).
He was immediately recognised as the incarnation of Shamarpa and was identified as such by several of his former disciples. All the prediction details agreed precisely with the circumstances of his birth, so he was taken to Taktse, passing through Gaden Mamo meditation centre on the way there.

At the age of six years he was observed climbing all over the great Wompo rock, known to be the residence of an important Protectot Deity. On the third day of the tenth month of the female water snake year (1413), at the age of eight, he met Karmapa Deszhin Shogpa at Pang Dor and together they proceeded to Taktse.

On the tenth day of the eleventh month of the same year he took the preliminary ordination from Karmapa and received the precepts and teachings. Later he recognised and enthroned the new Karmapa, Tongwa Donden and took him to his monastery. From Khenchen Sonam Zangpo he received the final ordination.
Geshe Rgyalzyn gave him some important teachings as did the pupil of his former incarnation, Sowa Rigpe Raldré. Having completed all his studies he began to import teachings. A fine Lama, he had many disciples. After many years spent spreading the Dharma he passed away on the fourth day of the sixth month of the male water monkey year (1452), at the age of forty-seven. There were numerous rainbows overhead at this time and flowers fell down from the sky. His foremost disciples were Jampal Zangpo, Gelmon Zhonu Pal the historian and Ngampa Chattel. (1406-1452)

(4)
The fourth Shamar Tulku, CHOSKYE TRAKPA, was born on the third day of the third month of the female water bird year (1453) at Kangmar in Domed, Eastern Tibet. On the night of his birth people in the region saw two moons in the sky.
When he was born they held relatives that he knew the Gyawla Karmapa.

At the age of seven years he was taken to the Kangmar monastery and there he went straight up to his throne and sat upon it. His previous disciples mixed up all the books and placed them before him, but he selected all the writings of the Karmapas and then put all the pages in the right order.

Shamarpa was invited to Chang Mo Sar and to the great Surmang monastery, where he met Chos Trag Gyamtsso, the seventh Karmapa. The Black Hat ceremony was performed for his benefit and he received many teachings and initiations at this time. At the age of twelve he performed the Red Hat ceremony and was formally enthroned. He had a vision of the Goddess Saraswati, who offered him an 'Ardu (Myrobalan) fruit. As a result of this he was able to learn very quickly.
He went to Gaden Mamo where he meditated for six months. In the male iron
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

Tiger year (1470) at the age of seventeen Shamar Tulku made a brief visit to Mongolia and upon his return to Tibet he received all the final teachings from Karmapa. Go Lotsawa Zhonu Pal, a disciple of his previous incarnation, taught him Sanskrit and the classical treatises.

At the age of forty-six he became Supreme Ruler of Tibet. He founded the large Gaden Mamo monastery, with an assembly-hall of ninety-four pillars. The work was started on the second day of the third month of the male earth monkey year (1488) and was completed on the tenth day of the sixth month of the male Iron dog year (1490). At the age of fifty-one, he founded a large monastery at Yang Chen, a short distance North of Tsarphu, with seventy-two pillars in the main assembly-hall. This work was started on the nineteenth day of the fourth month of the female water pig year (1503) and was completed in the second month of the rat year (1504).

In the monkey year (1524), on the twenty-fifth day of the twelfth month, Shamar Tulku passed away, amidst many highly auspicious omens. He was seventy-two. His foremost disciples were Taktshang Nampyal Trakpa, Zhalu Lotsawa and Drigung Katta. (1453-1524)

The fifth Shamar Tulku, KUNCHOK YENLAK, was born on the tenth day of the eighth month of the female wood bird year (1525) at Gaden Kang Sar in Kongpo district. At the time of his birth many flowers bloomed even though it was the middle of winter. As soon as he was born he was heard to chant the 'mani mantra'. He was quickly recognised as the new incarnation and enshrined by Karmapa Mkyo Dorje, who began to impart the teachings.

By the time he was twelve Shamar Tulku had completed his studies. Attaining perfection in his meditation he attracted many fine disciples. He recognised the ninth Karmapa, Wangchuk Dorje, and performed his enthronement and over the next years transmitted all the esoteric teachings to him.

On the second day of the seventh month of the female water sheep year (1583), in his fifty-ninth year, he passed away. There were many unusually auspicious signs at that time. His foremost disciples were the ninth Karmapa, Karma Thinlaypa, Drigung Chogyal Phuntsok and Taktshang Kunga Tashi. (1525-1583)

The sixth Shamar Tulku, CHOSKYI WANGCHUK, was born on the third day of the ninth month of the male wood monkey year (1584) in Shohong. There were many auspicious signs at the time of his birth and at an early age he was a remarkable child. Karmapa Wangchuk Dorje recognised him when he was five years old and enshrined him at the Dragpo Shedrup Ling monastic college. From Karmapa he received the higher teachings and by his twelfth year was considered an expert in meditation. Under the excellent Lama Karma Thinlaypa he studied Sanskrit and quickly became proficient in it.

On the eleventh day of the seventh month of the serpent year (1583) he founded the Thupden Nyingche Ling meditation centre. By the age of sixteen he had fully mastered Sanskrit and had a reputation as a fine scholar. He visited colleges of all the different sects, took part in many scriptural examinations and debates and became recognised as one of the greatest scholars of his time. He fully memorised thirty-two volumes of the Buddhist scriptures and on one very important occasion defeated the Bonpos in a great debate.

Shamar Choskyi Wangchuk had several auspicious visions of the Sakyapa Pandita and received important teachings from him. He composed a beautiful prayer for the Sakyapa Pandita and the Buddha Sutra. The Ruler of Jang invited him to visit there and he did so, correcting the mistakes in the Kanjur Sutras in the monasteries. He imparted the Mahamudra teachings and attracted many fine disciples.

He travelled to the great Surmang monastery and gave teachings and initiations to the monks and Lamas there. Shortly afterwards he recognised and enshrined the tenth Karmapa, Chos Ying Dorje. Then he travelled on pilgrimage to Nepal. Arriving in the Kathmandu valley he went straight to the great Bodhanath Stupa where he was met by King Laksmimara Simha Malla, who honoured him and presented him with a garland of flowers. Impressively the Brahmins with his knowledge of Sanskrit he debated doctrinal matters with them and spread the Dharma in Nepal. King Simha Malla, Ruler of another of the valley Kingdoms, sent a large elephant for him to ride upon. He visited the great Swayambhunath Stupa and built four golden altars at the four directions, instead of his original plan for a golden roof above it. A record of this auspicious visit, in the male iron dragon year (1640), was inscribed under the arch of the South side of the temple.

Shamar Tulku returned to Tibet, travelling via Yolmo in Northern Nepal. Passing through Southern Tibet he gave the Lama 1 Naljor initiations to the people and explained the laws of Karma At-Tashigam he met the Gyalwa Karmapa, presented him with a mongoose from Nepal and imparted the remaining teachings to him.

On the fourth day of the second month of the male iron horse year (1630) Shamar Tulku became ill. His disciples requested him to postpone his passing until the arrival of Khedrup Karma Changme, who still had to receive some important teachings. Shamar Tulku made and painted a small clay statue of himself and blessed and consecrated it (this is preserved in Rumtek monastery). Khedrup
APPENDIXES

Karma Chagme reached him in time and was able to receive the teachings required. Then, on the twenty-eighth day of the ninth month of the male iron horse year (1630), in the morning, he passed away. There were many auspicious signs. His foremost disciples were the tenth Karmapa, Karma Mipham Tsewang Rabten (the Ruler of Jyang) and Khedrup Karma Chagme (1584-1630).

(7)

The seventh Shamar Tulkhu, YI-SHE NYINGPO, was born in the female iron sheep year (1631) at Golog on the bank of the Ma Chu river, in Eastern Tibet. The tenth Karmapa recognised and enstooled him and also gave him teachings. Shamar Tulkhu visited Jyang and Lhasa, where he learnt many doctrines and studied philosophy. From the Gyalwa Karmapa he received the complete teachings and perfected them.

He recognised Yeshe Dorje, the eleventh Karmapa and enstooled him, transmitting the complete teachings. On the fifteenth day of the twelfth month of the male wood dog year (1694) he passed away. His foremost disciple was the eleventh Karmapa (1631-1694).

(8)

The eighth Shamar Tulkhu, PALCHEN CHOSKYI DODRUP, was born on the tenth day of the ninth month of the female wood pig year (1695) at Yolmo Kangra in Northern Nepal. White rainbows appeared over the house at the time of his birth. As a child he explained all the details of his previous incarnations and listed the monasteries of his order. The fame of the remarkable child spread quickly and the Gyalwa Karmapa sent a party to visit him. He was immediately recognised as the new Shamarpa.

The King of Nepal (probably King Bhaskara Malla of Kathmandu, 1700-1714) honoured him greatly and a Yogini called Zitapuri predicted that he would become a Siddha. At the age of seven he left Nepal and travelled to the Tagna monastery in Western Tibet, where he was highly honoured and escorted to Tsurphu. Karmapa enstooled him and gave him many teachings. The Tibetan government officially granted permission for him to remain in the country (he was born in Nepal and presumably had been considered a foreigner) and he took his seat in the great Yang Chen monastery.

Shamar Choskyi Dordrup recognised the eighth Situ Tulkhu. He received all the teachings from the eleventh Karmapa and later recognised the twelfth Karmapa, Chungchub Dorje. He revisited Nepal and then travelled to China with the Karmapa. He passed away in China on the second day of the eleventh month of the water rat year (1732), two days after the passing of the Gyalwa Karmapa. His foremost disciple was the eight Situ Tulku. (1695-1732)

(9)

The ninth Shamal Tulku, KUNCHOK JUNGEN, was born in the female water ox year (1733) and was recognised and enthroned by Situ Tulku, who had been a disciple of his previous incarnation. The Gelugpa government had passed an order forbidding anyone to predict about or enthrone any Shamal incarnation, but Situ Tulku challenged the order in the High Courts and won the case.

Lama Khutog Rigdzen Chenmo made a prediction that if the enthronement ceremony could take place at the Khutog Gon monastery in Kham, then there would be a good chance that the child would live for a long time. Unfortunately, the Lama died and the other Lamas of the monastery refused to allow Situ Tulku to perform the enthronement ceremony there, for fear of losing their monastery in reprisal by the Gelugpas. The young Shamal Tulku passed away at the age of eight, in the female iron bird year (1741), having received only the essence of the teachings. (1733-1741)

(10)

The tenth Shamal Tulku, MIPIHAM CHOSDRUP GYAMTSO, was born in the water dog year (1742) in Tashi Tse of Tsang province. He was born as the brother of the Panchen Rinpoche, Lobzang Palden Yeshe (1738-1780), and was recognised by the thirteenth Karmapa and the eighth Situ Tulku.

From Situ Tulku he received the primary and secondary ordinations, and all teachings were transmitted to him. Sometimes later he recognised the ninth Situ Tulku and taught him everything. Shamal Tulku spent many years reviving the Dharma in Tibet and then went on pilgrimage to Nepal.

While he was in Nepal fighting broke out between that country and Tibet. In Lhasa an influential Gelugpa Minister, Taisag Tenpei Conpo, became aware of a political opportunity and claimed that Shamal Tulku was instigating the fighting with Nepal. He seized the great Yang Chen monastery of the Shamarpas and an order was passed by the government declaring that all the monasteries of Shamal Tulku must become Gelugpas and that he should never reincarnate again. His ceremonial Red Hat was buried under the floor of the temple of Shamarpas in Lhasa and the building was turned into a court house. In fact Shamal Tulku was trying to make peace with the Nepalese and had visited Nepal only for reasons of pilgrimage. He offered a great bell to the Swayambhun Stupa in Kathmandu (it is still to be seen) and then passed away in Nepal at the age of fifty. He had many important disciples. (1742-1792)

(11)

The eleventh Shamal Tulku, JAMBYANG RINPOCHE, lived mostly in North Tibet. He was the son of the Karmapa Kha Chab Dorje but remained virtually unknown. He practised his meditation in remote areas, receiving teachings and initiations, but never participated in the monastic life. He became perfected as a Siddha, leaving impressions of his feet on rocks at Shawa Trak, in Northern Tibet. He was a very saintly Lama and passed away in 1947, but was known to only a few.

(c. 1895-1947)

(12)

The twelfth Shamal Tulku, TINLAY KUNCHAP, was born on the first day of the first month of the male iron tiger year (1948). He was recognised by the sixteenth Karmapa and installed at the Tsurphu monastery. He passed away at the age of one year and two months. (1948-1950)

(13)

The thirteenth Shamal Tulku, CHOISKHYI LODRU, was born on the third day of the eighth month of the male water dragon year (1952) in the Arou palace of Dege, Eastern Tibet. Before his birth the eleventh Situ Tulku had prophesied that one of the highest Karatrupa incarnations would be born there. At the time of his birth the sky was filled with rainbows, one forming like a tent right over the palace. All the water in the neighborhood turned milky, thus informing the people of a miraculous birth in the region. In the old Yang Chen monastery of the Shamarpas there was a statue of the Protector Deity, riding on a horse. At the time when Shamal Choiskyi Lodru was born the horse spat out some sheep's bones which had been put in its mouth after the monastery had been consecrated.

At the age of six the young lama was taken to Tsurphu monastery. His nurse was circumambulating the building when suddenly the boy, who was being carried on her back, pointed to some Lamas and monks who had come in from the Western gate and said "Those are my Lamas, my monks!" They had come from the Yang Chen monastery.

The sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa confirmed that it was indeed the new Shamarpa incarnation, but since the order of the ruling Gelugpas was still in force, banning recognition of Shamar incarnations, he did not reveal this fact publicly. Before leaving Tibet the small boy was secretly taken to the Yang Chen monastery, where he pointed out the statues of his previous incarnations and described the events of each of their lives.

At the age of nine Shamar Tulku was brought to Sikkim by the present Gyalwa Karmapa. Karmapa discussed his recognition with H. H. the Dalai Lama. The matter was put to test by meditation and by dream and there was a positive result. H. H. the Dalai Lama formally allowed for his reinstatement and laid aside all the political interferences of the past.

One month before his planned enthronement Shamar Tulku, accompanied by his brother Jigme, made a visit to Dharamsala and there had audience with H. H. the present fourteenth Dalai Lama, who confirmed his official reinstatement. The matter was settled without any disagreement. On the fifteenth day of the fourth month of the male wood dragon year (1964) Shamar Tulku Choskyi Lodru, the thirteenth formal incarnation, was enthroned by Karmapa in the old Rumtek monastery in Sikkim. He is presently studying with H. H. the Gyalwa Karmapa in the new Rumtek monastery. His is in his twenty-first year.

An informal portrait of the Thirteenth Shamar Tulku (1972).
THE SITU INCARNATIONS
(A Red Hat Karma Kargyudpa)

Prior to the first Situ Tulkü the Lineage was formed by three great Yogis:
(i) Dragön Rechen (1088-1158)
(ii) Naljor Yeshe Wangpo (1220-1281)
(iii) Rigowa Ratnabhadra (1281-1343)

Dragön Rechen was born at Nyamo Shung in Yarlung, Southern Tibet. As a small child a rainbow was frequently to be seen over his head. At the age of nine years he ran away from home and went to study with the teacher Dragoma. He received the teachings of the Inner Heat and was initiated into the cycle of Chakrasamvara. He had a vision of Dusum Khyenpa, the first Karmapa, and from him received the teachings in an esoteric way. These he imparted to Gyalay Bom Trakpa. After a life immersed in meditation he passed away at the age of seventy. There were many auspicious signs. His line passed to Naljor Yeshe Wangpo, who in turn passed it to Rigowa Ratnabhadra.

(1)

The first Situ Tulkü, CHOSKYI GYALTSEN, was born in the region of Karma Gon. He became a disciple of Delzhin Shegpa, the fifth Karmapa, and from him received the initiations and teachings of the Mahamudra in the complete form. He perfected the teachings and travelled to China with the Karmapa. The Chinese Emperor Tai Ming Chen (Yung Lo) conferred the honorific title 'Tai Situ' on him. He spent most of his life meditating in caves and was a fine Lama. (1377-1448).

(2)

The second Situ Tulkü, TASHI NAMGYAL, was born into a royal family in Tibet and was recognised by Tongwa Donden, the sixth Karmapa, who enthroned him and gave him the complete teachings. He was an excellent Lama and became the companion-tutor of Chos Trag Gyamtso, the seventh Karmapa. He visited many parts of Tibet, giving teachings and bestowing initiations. There were many auspicious signs at his passing. (1450-1497).

(3)

The third Situ Tulkü, TASHI PALJOR, was recognised and installed by the seventh Karmapa and from him he received all the teachings. He perfected them and then recognised Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa. He passed on all the teachings to Karma Tsalaypo. Then he passed away at Karma Gon. (1498-1541).
The fourth Situ Tulkū, CHOSKYI GOCHIA, was born in Tse Chu near Surmang. He was recognised and installed by Mipso Dorje, the eighth Karmapa, from whom he received all the teachings. Later he recognised Wangchuk Dorje, the ninth Karmapa, and passed away sometime afterwards. There were many auspicious signs. (1542-1585).

The fifth Situ Tulkū, CHOSKYI GYALTSEN PALZANG, was born in the male fire dog year (1586). He was recognised by Wangchuk Dorje, the ninth Karmapa, and from him received all the teachings. He built the Yer Mo Che monastery (with one hundred and sixty pillars in the main assembly-hall) and was presented with a Red Hat by the Karmapa. He passed away in the female fire bird year (1657) amidst many highly auspicious signs. (1586-1657).

The sixth Situ Tulkū, MIPHAM CHOGYAL RARTEN, was born in Moshod. He was recognised and enthroned by Chos Ying Dorje, the tenth Karmapa. He performed the miracle of hanging his monks robe and rosary on a sunbeam and left many of his footprints on stones and rocks. He spent some time studying at Tsurphu and Karma Gon monasteries, where he impressed everyone with his great learning and insight.

Situ Tulkū was a great Sanskrit scholar, an astrologer, a doctor and a fine painter. Many beautiful Thangkas were made by his hand and he also wrote the 'Stong Bum', a compendium of all knowledge. From the tenth Karmapa he received all the teachings. He forecast the details of his future incarnation and then went to Ri Wo Cha Gang in China, where he passed away. There were many highly auspicious signs at that time. His disciples were numerous. (1658-1682).

The seventh Situ Tulkū, KAWE NYIMA, was born as the son of the royal family of Ling. He was immediately recognised as the incarnation and was admitted to a Sakya college. He passed away very young having received only the essence of the teachings. (1683-1698).

The eighth Situ Tulkū, CHOSKYI JUNGBES, was born in the province of A-Lu Shekar. At the age of eight years he was recognised by the eighth Shamar Tulkū, Palchen Choskyi Dodrup, and was taken to Tsurphu monastery for his enthronement. From Shamar Tulkū he received all the teachings and initiations and studied philosophy and medicine.

Situ Tulkū travelled to Lhasa, at the time when Tibet was ruled by the Ministers Nyagpo, Lampa and Gya Rawa. Nyagpo invited him to make some predictions and Situpa declared that the Ministers would be overthrown and that Nyagpo would be killed. In the year of the monkey (1716) it happened that Pho Lhawa Sonam Togyal killed him. Situpa became very well known in Nepal.

In the female fire sheep year (1727) he founded the great Pallung monastery in Eastern Tibet, on the seventh day of the third month. He visited Jyang, as invited by the Ruler, and imparted all the teachings to Du Dul Dorje, the thirteenth Karmapa, and to the tenth Shamar Tulkū. He was recognised as a fine scholar and was an excellent artist.

He visited Nepal on pilgrimage and was highly honoured there. Once, after a debate with Pandita Jaya Mangola of Kashmir, he was told by him that he merited seven umbrellas according to the Indian standards of honour. After discussing the Vinaya Sutras and points of Dharma with Pandita Prahidma he was told that he must have been blessed by Lord Shiva Shankara, since that was the only way he could have achieved such insight and learning.

Situ Tulkū returned to Tibet and preached throughout the land. He translated many books from the Sanskrit, including prayers to the Goddess Tara. All the precious teachings he passed on to his many disciples. Then he visited China at the invitation of Emperor Chi'en Lung (1735-1796) and was highly honoured.

While meditating in the lotus-posture of a Buddha he passed away and it was observed that his heart-region retained heat for seven days afterwards and there was a strong smell of incense everywhere. His foremost disciples were the thirteenth Karmapa, the tenth Shamar Tulkū, the Drukchen Thinlay Shingta, Drigung Choskyi Gyalwa, Pamo Tshulak Gyalwa, Druktop Chos Je Gyal, Khentrul Choskyi Nyima and Lotsawa Tsewang Kunchap. (1700-1774).

The ninth Situ Tulkū, PADMA NYINGCHE WANGPO, was born in Yilung in Khams, Eastern Tibet. At the age of five years he was formally enthroned and received all the teachings from the thirteenth Gyalwa Karmapa and the tenth Shamar Tulkhu. He spent most of his life in deep meditation and was a great scholar and teacher. At the age of sixty-one years he received his final initiations and practised the teachings for eighteen years afterwards. At the age of seventy-nine he passed away. At that time the sky was filled with rainbows and there were many other highly auspicious signs. He recognised the first Jamgon Khungtrol Tulkhu as a teacher of the Karma-Kargyudpas. (1774-1853).

(10)

The tenth Situ Tulkhu, PADMA KUNZANG CHOGYAL, was born at Nam Tso in Chang, near to a lake, in the male wood tiger year (1854). His formal enthronement was performed by the fourteenth Karmapa, Thseg Cho Dorje, and the first Jamgon Khungtrol Tulkhu, Lodra Taye. He spent the whole of his life perfecting the Kargyudpa teachings and became a Siddha. He left many of his footprints on rocks and was able to walk right up sheer mountain faces. At his passing there were numerous highly auspicious signs. (1854-1885).

(11)

The eleventh Situ Tulkhu, PADMA WANGCHUK GYALPO, was born in the male fire dog year (1886) in Li Thang. There were many unusual and highly auspicious signs at that time. The predictions of the Gyalwa Karmapa concerning his reincarnation were found to be absolutely correct. At the age of four years he was recognised by Karmapa and taken to the great Palpung monastery.

From Kha Chab Dorje, the fifteenth Karmapa, he received the ordinations and teachings. Jamgon Khungtrol Tulkhu also taught him and bestowed many empowerments and initiations on him. Situ Tulkhu later discovered and recognised the present Gyalwa Karmapa, Rangjung Rigpe Dorje, the sixteenth incarnation, and performed his formal enthronement and ordination. He transmitted the complete teachings to him and bestowed all the initiations, explanations and empowerments.

At about the age of fifty he visited the great Surmang monastery, and there performed many miracles. He passed the rest of his life partly in meditation and partly bestowing teachings to his many disciples. Then, at the age of sixty-seven, he passed away amidst many auspicious signs. (1886-1952).

(12)

The twelfth Situ Tulkhu, PADMA DONYO NYINGCHE WANGPO, was born in the male wood horse year (1954) in Taiyul. The details of his birth were completely in accordance with the prediction of the present sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa. He was taken to the Palpung monastery founded in his eighth incarnation and ceremonially enthroned there by the present Gyalwa Karmapa. At that time it was clearly noticed that he recognised all his old servants and disciples. After receiving all the customary initiations and empowerments he left Tibet for Bhutan, at about the time of the great exodus. He is now studying in the new Rumtek monastery, Sikkim, and is in his nineteenth year.
THE GYALTSPAP LINEAGE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Incarnation</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Dates</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st</td>
<td>GOSHI PALJOR DODRUP</td>
<td>(c.1427-1489)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2nd</td>
<td>TASHI NAMGYAL</td>
<td>(1490-1518)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3rd</td>
<td>TRAKPA PALJOR</td>
<td>(1519-1549)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4th</td>
<td>TRAKPA DODRUP</td>
<td>(1550-1617)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th</td>
<td>TRAKPA CHOS YANG</td>
<td>(1618-1658)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6th</td>
<td>NORHU ZANGPO</td>
<td>(1659-1698)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th</td>
<td>KUNCHOK OSER</td>
<td>(1699-1765)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th</td>
<td>CHOSPAL ZANGPO</td>
<td>(1766-1820)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th</td>
<td>TRAKPA YESHE</td>
<td>(1821-1876)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th</td>
<td>TENPAI NYIMA</td>
<td>(1877-1901)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th</td>
<td>TRAKPA GYAMTSO</td>
<td>(1902-1959)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12th</td>
<td>TRAKPA TENPAI YAPHEL</td>
<td>(1960-present)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

The first Gyaltsap Tulkun, GOSHI PALJOR DODRUP, was born in Yagde Nyewo. From the sixth Karmapa, Tongwa Dondon, he received the complete teachings and initiations, perfecting them in his lifetime. He recognised, enthroned and taught the seventh Karmapa, Chos Trag Gyamtso and bestowed the ordinations on him. He lived a very saintly life and passed away at the age of sixty-three, in the male earth dog year. He prophesied that he would have many successors. (c.1427-1489).

The second Gyaltsap Tulkun, TASHI NAMGYAL, was born in Nyewo and was recognised by Chos Trag Gyamtso, the seventh Karmapa, from whom he received all the initiations and teachings. He was presented with an Orange Hat by Karmapa, in recognition of his high attainments. A fine Lama, he enthroned Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa, and transmitted the teachings to him. When he passed away there were many auspicious signs. (1490-1518).

The third Gyaltsap Tulkun, TRAKPA PALJOR, was recognised by Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa, who passed on all the teachings to him. He practised his meditations to perfection and had visions of many Protectors and Tutelary Deities. He passed away at an early age, amidst auspicious omens. (1519-1549).

The fourth Gyaltsap Tulkun, TRAKPA DODRUP, was recognised by Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa, and from him received many initiations and teachings. Another of his teachers was the fifth Shamar Tulkun, Kunchok Yenlak. He composed a detailed commentary on the Bodhisattva doctrines and another on the teachings of Hemantara. He was a Siddha and had many disciples. (1550-1617).

The fifth Gyaltsap Tulkun, TRAKPA CHOS YANG, was born in Tenchen Gar in the Tsang province, in the female fire snake year (1617/18). He was recognised by the sixth Shamar Tulku, Choskyi Wangchuk, enthroned by him and received all the teachings. He spent most of his life practising deep meditation. A contemporary of the fifth Dalai Lama, under whose rule the Kargyu school suffered greatly, Gyalsap Tulku was able to keep control over his monasteries and was known as a great diplomat in the times of difficulty. He had many disciples. (1618-1658).

The sixth Gyalsap Tulku, NORBU ZANGPO, was born in the male iron rat year (1660) in the Gelhang district of Jyang. He was a remarkable child and could explain all the details of his past lives. The tenth Karmapa, Chos Ying Dorje, predicted his whereabouts, recognised him and enthroned him at the age of three. Gyalsap Tulku received all the teachings and became a great Siddha. With the seventh Shamar Tulku he recognised the eleventh Karmapa, Yeshe Dorje, whom he also taught. (1660-1698).

The seventh Gyalsap Tulku, KUNCHOK OSER, was born in Nyemo Chu Gor. He was recognised and enthroned by the twelfth Karmapa, Changchub Dorje, and received all the teachings from him. He travelled to Tsurphu monastery where he received ordination from Situ Tulku in his fifteenth year. The eighth Shamar Tulku, Palchen Choskyi Dodrup, transmitted the remaining Oral teachings to him. Then he travelled to the auspicious pilgrimage place of Tsari Tso Kur, where he meditated for three years.

Gyalsap Tulku travelled to Nepal with the twelfth Karmapa, the eighth Shamar Tulku and the eighth Situ Tulku. Together they visited many places of pilgrimage and were highly honoured by the people. After this the party travelled to India and then returned to Tibet. Gyalsap Tulku passed away in his sixty-fourth year amidst many highly auspicious signs, having recognised the thirteenth Karmapa, Du Dul Dorje. (1699-1765).

The eighth Gyalsap Tulku, CHOSPAL ZANGPO, was concerned in the recognition of the fourteenth Karmapa, Teg Cheg Dorje. He was an excellent Lama and had many disciples. (1766-1820).

The ninth Gyalsap Tulku, TRAKPA YESHE, was an excellent Lama, who received all the teachings and initiations. At his passing there were many auspicious signs. (1821-1876).

The tenth Gyalsap Tulku, TENPAI NYIMA, received all the teachings and perfected them in his lifetime. He was a fine Lama and had many excellent disciples. (1877-1901).

The eleventh Gyalsap Tulku, TRAKPA GYAMTSO, received all the teachings from the fifteenth Karmapa, Kha Chab Dorje. He had many disciples. At the time of his passing there were many auspicious signs. (1902-1959).

The twelfth Gyalsap Tulku, TRAKPA TENPAI YAPHEL, was recognised by the sixteenth Karmapa, Rangjung Rigpe Dorje, and was enthroned at the Tsurphu monastery. He was brought from Tibet by the present Gyalwa Karmapa and is now studying in the new Rumtek monastery, Sikkim. He is in his eighteenth year.
APPENDIX: (D)

THE JAMGON KHONGTRUL INCARNATIONS

(1)

The first Jamgon Khongtrul Tulku, LODRA TAYE, was born in the female water bird year (1813) in Rong Chap of the Derge province, in Eastern Tibet. Born into a Bonpo family he quickly perfected their teachings. Then he received ordinations from the Nyingmapas and Kargyudpas and had many teachers. The ninth Situ Tulku, Padma Nyingche Wangpo, recognised him as a Tulku of the Karma-Kargyudpas. He became a disciple of the fourteenth Gyalwa Karmapa.

Jamgon Khongtrul Tulku was an excellent artist and a fine physician. He had more than sixty teachers and perfected the science of medicine. Terton Chogyur Lingpa (1829-1870) met him and recognised him as an emanation of the Bodhisattva Maitreya.

In his lifetime he wrote more than ninety books, covering the whole range of Tibetan culture. He was of the direct Lineage of Siddha Krishnacharin and an emanation of Siddha Avadhutipra. He spent the whole of his life bestowing initiations and explaining the teachings to his numerous disciples, amongst whom was the fifteenth Gyalwa Karmapa, Kha Chab Dorje, whom he recognised. Throughout his life he never once became ill. He passed away in his eighty-eighth year, amongst many important and auspicious omens. His other foremost disciples were the tenth Situ Tulku, the tenth Trungpa Tulku and Jamgon Mipham Rinpoche. (1813-c.1901).

(2)

The second Jamgon Khongtrul Tulku, KHYENTSE OSER, of Palpung, was recognised by the fifteenth Karmapa, Kha Chab Dorje. He received all the teachings from Karmapa and also from the tenth Trungpa Tulku. He spent most of his life practising meditation and imparted all the teachings to the present sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa. He had many fine disciples and was renowned as an excellent Lama. He left prediction details of his future rebirth. (1904-1953).

(3)

The third Jamgon Khongtrul Tulku, LODRA CHOKSYI SENGE TENPAIL GOCHA, was born in Central Tibet into the wealthy Sanda Sang family. It was found that the prediction details left by the previous Khongtrul Tulku were exactly in accordance with those of his birth. He was recognised as the new incarnation and received empowerments and initiations. Shortly after the increase in Chinese hostilities he safely escaped to India. He was enthroned at the old Rumtek monastery at the age of six years and is presently studying with the sixteenth Karmapa in the new Rumtek monastery. He is in his nineteenth year.
Karmapa: The Black Hat Lama of Tibet

The Third Jampal Khongtrul Tulku (1965)
APPENDIX: (E)

THE PAWO INCARNATIONS

The first Powo Tulkus, CHOSWANG LHUNDRUP, was a Siddha who could fly in the air and walk on water. He was given the name 'Powo', meaning 'Hero', by the local people.

Many of the later Powo Tulkus were disciples of the Karmapas and were famed for their knowledge of the Six Yogas. The present incarnation, PAWO TSUKLAK NAWA, in his sixties, lives in Bhutan and is a meditation teacher there. One of the great incarnations of the Kargyudpa Lineage, he has perfected the Six Yogas of Siddha Naropa and the Mahamudra. His Lineage:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Incarnation</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Years</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st</td>
<td>CHOSWANG LHUNDRUP</td>
<td>(1440-1503)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2nd</td>
<td>TSUKLAK TRENGWA</td>
<td>(1504-1566)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3rd</td>
<td>TSUKLAK GYAMTSO</td>
<td>(1567-1633)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK KUNZANG</td>
<td>(1633-1649)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK TINLAY GYAMTSO</td>
<td>(1649-1699)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK CHOSKYI DODRUP</td>
<td>(1701-? )</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK GAWA</td>
<td>(? -1781)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK CHOSKYI GYALPO</td>
<td>(? - ? )</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK NYINGCHE</td>
<td>(? -1911)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th</td>
<td>TSUKLAK NAWA WANGCHUK</td>
<td>(1912-present)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

APPENDIX: (F)

OTHER HIGH LAMAS OF THE KARGYUDPA SECT

TRUNGPA TULKU

The Eleventh CHOYAM TRUNGPA TULKU was born in North-Eastern Tibet in February 1939. He was the Supreme Abbot of the great Surmang monastery, founded in his first incarnation as Trung Mase the Siddha. The present incarnation was recognised by the sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa, from whom he received many important initiations and teachings. After reaching the West he founded the Samye Ling Tibetan monastic centre in Scotland. Now he is in America, where he has established two important new centres of Buddhism.

The Lineage

1. Kunga Gyaltset
2. Kunga Zangpo
3. Kunga Osel
4. Kunga Namgyal
5. Tenzin Chogyal
6. Lodro Tenphel
7. Jampal Chogyal
8. Gyurme Tenphel
9. Karma Tenphel
10. Choekyi Nyinje
11. Choekyi Gyamtso

Trungpa Tulkus, (1966, 1968)
KALU RINPOCHE

The second KALU RINPOCHE has a monastery in Sonada near Darjeeling and has twice visited Europe, Canada and America, founding a number of new Centres for Buddhist Dharma and meditation. He is an excellent teacher, especially of the 'Six Yogas' of Siddha Naropa.

SANGYE NYENPA TULKU

The first Sangye Nyenpa Tulku, DEMA DRUPCHEN, was a great Siddha. He was the main teacher of Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Gyalwa Karmapa. All his subsequent incarnations were fine teachers and Yogas, famous for the extraordinary miracles which they performed. The present incarnation, the tenth, is aged nine years and lives in the new Rumtek monastery in Sikkim.

PONLOP RINPOCHE

The first PONLOP TULKU was a Siddha of the Nyingmapa tradition. The fourth incarnation, Je-Won Ponlop, was born into a Nyingmapa family. He travelled to the Tsurphu monastery and received Kargyudpa teachings from his elder brother, who was a meditation teacher there. He became part of the Karma-Kargyudpa and was a fine Lama. He passed away in the old Rumtek monastery in the male water tiger year (1962).

The fifth PONLOP TULKU, Sangrub Ngedon Tenpe Gyaltse, was born at the new Rumtek monastery at sunrise on the twenty-sixth day of the fourth month of the female wood snake year (1965), as the son of the General Secretary of the monastery. His birth was in accordance with a prediction made by H. H. The Sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa and his recognition was confirmed by H. H. The Fourteenth Dalai Lama. He was enthroned at Rumtek, where he is now studying. He is seven years old.
THE TWO KHYENTSE RINPOCHES

TRONGSAR KHYENTSE WANGPO
The third incarnation, aged twenty-six. He lives in Madhya Pradesh, India. Of the Karma-Kagyu Line.

DELGO KHYENTSE RINPOCHE
The second incarnation, aged fifty-eight. He lives in the Kichu monastery, Bhutan. Of the Nyingma-Kagyu Line.

DARZANG RINPOCHE
An emanation of Je Gampopa, he lives in Nepal, aged forty-five.

KHENGPO TRANGU
The eighth incarnation. Aged forty, he is the Abbot of the new Rumtek monastery.

DRU PON RINPOCHE
The second DRU PON TULKU, presently studying in Rumtek, Sikkim, aged seven years.

SARCHU RINPOCHE
The third incarnation, aged fifty-seven, lives in Kathmandu, Nepal.

TRALFG RINPOCHE
The ninth incarnation, now aged eighteen, lives in Sarnath, India.
APPENDIX: (G)

CLARIFICATIONS OF DIVISIONS WITHIN THE KARGYUDPA SECT

(i) THE DRUKPA BRANCH

The Drukpa Kargyud is composed of three sections, being termed the 'top', the 'bottom' and the 'middle'. Thus:

The 'top': Founded by Gyalwa Ling Repa, who passed the teachings on to Drogon Tsangpa Gyare (founder of the Tsangpa subsect). He in turn passed them to Go Tsangpa Gönpo Dorje, whose foremost disciple was Siddha Urgyenpa (the teacher of the third Karmapa). Siddha Urgyenpa passed them on to his disciple Gyalwa Yang Gonpa. This section became known as the 'Namkhye Karma', or 'Star of Heaven'. It was very large.

The 'bottom': Founded by Siddha Lorepa, who went to Bhutan and there met Tsangpa Gyare, from whom he received all the teachings by the time he was seven. At the age of thirteen he went to Khara and there meditated for three years. He travelled to Nam Tso, where there is an island in the middle of a lake and two caves on the island, both of which he used for prolonged meditation. He had only one load of barley flour and had to eat his animal-skin clothing, yet he was able to spend many years there and ultimately attained perfection. One summer he performed a miracle of creating a path of ice from the island to the shore. As he walked across it a shepherd saw the ice melting behind him and thus his fame spread far. He had about a thousand disciples and founded two monasteries, Karpo Chos Ling (in Tibet) and Tarpa Ling (in Bhutan). He passed away at the age of sixty-four in the male iron dog year (1250). This section became known as the 'Sutyi Ts'i Shing', or 'Tree Branches'.

The 'middle': Founded by Wonres Dharma Senge, the nephew of Tsangpa Gyare. Born in the fire bird year (1177), he received all the ordinations and initiations from his uncle. He prophesied the coming of a flood but stopped it by leaving his footprint on a rock in front of the great Ralung monastery. Then he repaired the monastery, constructed many new shrines and built great statues. He passed away at the age of sixty-one leaving eight successors in charge of the monastery. They were:

The elder brother of Sherab Senge, Yeshe Rinchen, spent fifty years as their spiritual leader and was succeeded by:

The First DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE. Gyalwang Kunga Paljor, who was born in the male earth monkey year (1368?). He was the first teacher of the 'Drukchen
The first DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Jambyang Choskyi Trakpa, was born in Jayul, according to the prediction of his predecessor. He became a disciple of Ngawang Choskyi Gyalpo and received many teachings and initiations from Shamar Tulkhu and the Gyalwa Karmapa. Perfecting his meditation he became a Siddha, leaving many footprints permanently on rocks and was able to sit in the air in the lotus-posture of a Buddha. In accordance with the instructions of the Dakini Sukhasiddhi he founded the Tashi Thong Mon Ling monastery. He performed many miracles and passed away at the age of forty-five.

The second DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Padma Karpo was born in the female fire pig year (1527). He had many teachers and quickly became a Siddha. He founded the Sang Ngos Chos Ling monastery and wrote many books. His foremost disciples were (i) Thuchhen Choogon and (ii) Yongdzin Ngawang Zangpo, who founded the great Dechen Choekhor Ling monastery.

The third DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Mipham Wangpo.
The fourth DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Paksum Wangpo.
The fifth DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Tinalay Shingta.
The sixth DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Kunzig Chosnang.
The seventh DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Jigme Migyur Wangyal.
The eighth DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Mipham Choskyi Wangpo.
The ninth DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Khezrub Yeshe Gyamtso.

The eleventh DRUKCHEN RINPOCHE: Jigme Migyur Wangkyi-Dorje, the present incarnation, who was predicted and recognised by the sixteenth Gyalwa Karmapa. His enthronement ceremony was performed at the Do Tsku monastery in Darjeeling. He is now aged nine years and already exhibits powers of prophecy. His monastery is at the Mem tea-estate, below Sukhia Pokhari in the Darjeeling district.

The third KHAMTRUL RINPOCHE: Kunga Tenzin (1680-1729), a disciple of the first Dzigar Choktrul Rinpoche, he founded the Khampa Gar monastery in Eastern Tibet.

The fourth KHAMTRUL RINPOCHE: Choekyi Nyima (1730-1780).
The fifth KHAMTRUL RINPOCHE: Dupjud Nyima (1781-1847).
The sixth KHAMTRUL RINPOCHE: Tenpai Nyima (1848-1907).
The seventh KHAMTRUL RINPOCHE: Sangye Tenzin (1908-1929).
The eighth Khamtrul Rinpoche: Dorjed Nyima (born 1930), the present incarnation, who lives in Tashijong (Himachal Pradesh) where he has established a Tibetan Art and Craft center.

The Eighth Khamtrul Tulku.

(III) THE BHUTAN BRANCH

In accordance with a prophecy made by Drogon Tsangpa Gyare, his disciple Sangye Won produced a disciple called Phajo Drogon, who went to Bhutan. There he founded the Tan Go monastery and spread the Dharma widely.

(IV) THE DRIGUNG BRANCH

Founded by Jigten Sumgun, of Khams, a disciple of Lama Phagmo Gru Dorje Gyaltsen (a disciple of Je Gampopa). He founded the Drigung monastery in 1179 and had many fine disciples, the foremost of whom was Lama Nyeu, who was born in Lhanang in the male wood monkey year (1164). He received all the teachings from Jigten Gugpo (who is also known as Rinchen Pal) and then travelled to Mount Kailash in Western Tibet, where he meditated for thirty-four years. He attained perfection and became a great Siddha, as did many of his disciples. Another great teacher of this school was Kadampa Chosje, born in Khams in the iron dog year (1190). He was initiated by Jigten Gonpo and quickly attained perfection. He founded the Lung Shok and Rinchen Ling monasteries.

"Half the Tibetan people are Drukpas, Half the Drukpas are begging ascetics, Half the begging ascetics are Saints."

(popular Tibetan saying)
THE SITUATION

"In the sky before me is my Lama,
In the form of Mikyo Dorje, the eighth Karmapa.
Wrapped in countless waves of Enjoyment,
He wears the robes of a monk.
Upon his head is the Black Hat Crown,
And his complexion is of a golden colour."

"He holds sceptre and bell,
Symbolic of the Unity of Wisdom and Means:
Thus he makes the non-dual Voidness-Bliss
Discernible."

"As I make this prayer and meditate,
The Fire of devotion flames.
As I meditate upon it,
The Blessing of the Lama blazes in reply.
When I meditate upon this Blessing,
Warm and sacred, like fire,
All the powers come to me,
And the Mani-jewels burst into flame."

"From the sky and from the earth,
Yet neither from above nor from below,
The Blessing falls like rain.
From my very heart, KYE!
Listen to me, and to my prayer!"

"Manifestation is in the Void,
The Void is in all things manifested:
Manifestation, inseparable from the Void,
Is the body of the Lama.
To this body I am praying,
Oh Precious Lama, give me the Blessing."

"Sound is in the Void,
The Void is in all sound:
Sound and Void, inseparable,
Is the speech of the Lama.
To this speech I am praying,
Oh Precious Lama, give me the Blessing."

"Bliss is in the Void,
The Void is in all Bliss,
Bliss and Void, inseparable, is the Mind of the Lama.
To this Mind I am praying.
Oh Precious Lama, give me the Blessing."

"KYE! Listen to me.
When the Lama-jewel appears,
The sky is filled with rainbow light.
Imagine the eight Goddesses of offerings,
The Blessing flames like fire, HU RU RU....
Like a flash come the first Realizations, SHA RA RA...."

"KYE! Listen to me.
Great Lama, that in your presence
I may attain the Realizations.
Come and Bless me.
From that supremely sacred place
Descend.
Bestow upon me the supreme attainment
Of the Four Initiations.
Bestow upon me the occult powers.
Remove all my wrong ideas
And mental obstacles.
Make every being peaceful."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance,
And the faults that bind us,
Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands
I am penitent."

The second is the Ratna Dakini, yellow of colour. She removes pride, and is the Heavenly Mother of Jewels:

"In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini,
Yellow of colour.
All sickness, malefic influences and defilements,
Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance,
And the faults that bind us,
Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands
I am penitent."

The third is the Padma Dakini, red of colour. She removes passion, and is the Heavenly Mother of the Lotus:

"In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini,
Red of colour.
All sickness, malefic influences and defilements,
Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance,
And the faults that bind us,
Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands
I am penitent."

The fourth is the Buddha Dakini, white of colour. She removes ignorance, and is the Heavenly Mother of the Buddhas:

"In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini,
White of colour.
All sickness, malefic influences and defilements,
Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance,
And the faults that bind us,
Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands
I am penitent."

THE VISUALIZATION: THE APPEARANCE OF THE DAKINIS
The first is the Karma Dakini, green of colour. She removes envy, and is the Heavenly Mother of Action:

"In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini,
Green of colour.
All sickness, malefic influences and defilements,
Are purified in Her light."
The fifth is the Heavenly Mother of the Samaya, bound by oath, black of colour. She purifies the vows of Yogis, and is not different from Sri Devi, the Maha Kali. "In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini, Black of colour. All sickness, malefic influences and defilements, Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance, And the faults that bind us, Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands I am penitent."

The sixth is the Vajra Dakini, blue of colour. She removes all ill-will and hatred, and is the Heavenly Mother of the adamantine Vajra. "In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini, Blue of colour. All sickness, malefic influences and defilements, Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance, And the faults that bind us, Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands I am penitent."

The seventh is the Heavenly Mother of many colours. She removes the faults and failings born of the three 'poisons' of craving, hatred and ignorance. "In the sky before me is the Wisdom Dakini, Smoky of colour. All sickness, malefic influences and defilements, Are purified in Her light."

"For all sins, veils of ignorance, And the faults that bind us, Before the revered Yogini, with folded hands I am penitent."

(MEDITATION)

The sky is full of Mikyo Dorje.

AH

THE GURU LAMA YOGA OF THE KARMAPAS

Estatic Joy of the Vajra, shining in rays of eight colours.

HO

The Heavenly Messengers flame at the power of your speech.

HUNG

Fierce is your Buddha-activity, purified all defilements.

OM

DEVOTION TO THE KARMAPAS

"Most venerated Holy One,
With power over the Four Bodies,
Whatever you undertake is the Divine play
Of the transcending Wisdom,
Encompassing all.
Oh Karmapa, in whom resides the power of the Buddha,
Ocean of Buddha's Blessings,
Think of me."

"You have gathered a heap of virtues,
And all that is good.
The essence of the Buddhas,
Is manifested in the Holy Lama,
Great in mercy.
Born of the Higher Senses, is your Body of Illusion.
Oh venerated Vajra-essence of speech,
Think of me."

"As long as this body lasts,
It is upon you that we rely.
Of the nature of the Four Bodies,
Is the Oral Transmission of Gampopa:
Giver of Blessings,
To those who are worthy,
You of the magnificent succession,
Think of me."

"All negative mental fabrications,
Collapse of themselves.
In the Dharma-batu, immaculate,
Your Form of Light appears,
Oh Master of the Buddha-activity,
Who knows past, present and future,
Great Heart of Love,
Think of me."

"In this Age of Darkness,
Many are the ways which you show
For controlling all beings.
Oh power of the Victorious Ones,
Caring for all, without discrimination,
You from whom all occult powers emerge,
Most Holy One,
Think of me."

"Who are all the Victorious Ones
In One,
Who can ripen those who are worthy.
The Order of the Karmapas, showing the Vajrayana Path of Bliss,
Away from the two veils of ignorance,
Oh faultless One,
Think of me."

"By yourself, you have attained
The Four Activities of the Buddhas.
Through your Will and Blessing,
Bestow upon me the Wisdom Supreme.
The succession of Realized Ones,
Is concentrated within you.
Oh speech of the Vajra, Great Karmapa,
Think of me."

"Possessing the Eight Virtues,
Of the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara,
Having the Seven Aspects,
Of the Tutelary Heruka:
Thou who are all the Buddhas in One,
The power of the Jinas,
The real Buddha, venerated Mikyo Dorje,
Think of me."

"You who are all the Jinas in One,
Karmapa, think of me.
You who are all the Buddhas in One,
Karmapa, think of me.
You who are all the Tathagatas in One,
Karmapa, think of me.
You who are Omniscient,
Karmapa, think of me."

THE MANTRA: "KARMAPA CHEN NO"
(Repeat it as often as you can)

PRAYER
"You who are all mercy,
Think of me.
You who are all the Buddhas in One,
Think of me.
You who are at all times the Supreme Teacher,
Think of me."

"To Mikyo Dorje, I am praying.
To Chos Trag Gyamso, I am praying.
To the Oral Transmission of Gampopa, I am praying.
To the Order of the Karmapas, I am praying."

"Most venerable One, may I become like you.
Learned Abbot, may I become like you.
Guru-Lama, may I become like you.
Protector of the people, may I become like you."

"With your spiritual father, Omniscient, Sangye Nyenpa, great in realization,
Oh Victorious One, Mikyo Dorje,
If I do not pray to you, to whom should I pray?
Of your mercy, if you do not look towards me,
Who will look?
Therefore, to you I am praying,
That you give me your blessing."
"Of all the sentient beings, especially those who rely upon you alone as their Guardian, cherish us, beyond Time itself. And bestow upon us the Realization of the Mahamudra."

"If you do not give the blessing, who will bless me? In your love if you do not hold me, who will hold me? If you do not show me your grace, who will show it? If you do not control me, the willing one, who will control me? Oh most venerated One, if you don't guard me from bad action, who will guard me? Master of the spiritual powers, if you do not protect me, who will protect me?"

"It is you who will accompany me through the lifetimes. Cut the root of all my doubts, and always be the Wish-fulfilling Gem. I rely upon you continuously, for you can protect me. Oh Eternally Awakened One, dry up the lake of the world's sufferings."

"Ocean of virtues untellable, teacher of all beings, like the sky, their only mother. Oh treasure-house of mercy, beyond imagination, in this Age of Darkness, if you do not listen to the people, then who will listen?"

"If you do not protect me now, then when will you protect me? If you do not bestow the powers upon me now, when will you bestow them? When I see my mind and yours as One, I am Liberated from delusion, and all the knots of my consciousness are untied. All people, like the vast expanse of the Heavens, are related to each other. I pray that now and always, you may bring them to Liberation."

LAMA MOST SACRED
"Look towards all sentient beings, and save those who pray to you. At this time, like he whose house collapses, is the mediator beset by fears. Pray turn your mind towards him."

LAMA THE GREAT JEWEL
"You who know the Ultimate Meaning, you who know how to transfer the Blessing, you who can show us the Ultimate Realization, having the Divine Eye and the occult powers, showing a mass of miracles, inexpressible is the kindness that you bestow upon us: for you put Enlightenment right in my hand."

"When unfortunate manifestations come, you are the guide, showing the Voidness in its manifold aspects. Transcendent Lord of the Universe, from the depths of my heart, I beseech you, for you alone have the required powers."

"To you of the merciful heart, I am speaking, oh Master of the powers, of the Oral Transmission, beyond debate, all powerful One, of action beyond compare."

"Most Holy One, Fully Enlightened, all the grace of body, speech and mind is yours. For the sake of all beings, here and now I am offering myself to you. Of your great love accept me. And having accepted me, you who have the power, always protect me."
Oh venerated One, from my heart I beseech you,
Give me the blessing,
That I may become like you."

"To the most revered and Holy Lama, I am praying,
Give me your Blessing,
May I understand all that you do,
And may I remember all that you say."

"Give me your Blessing,
That I may realize my mind and yours
As One."

"From birth to birth,
Throughout all my life-times,
Give me your Blessings,
That all I do may add to your Happiness,
May whatever be displeasing to you,
Never arise in me.
Pray give me your Blessing."

"In the innermost recess of my heart,
Remembering the hour of death,
May pure devotion be born in me.
May disgust with the world be attained by renunciation.
May I always remain with the Blessings
Of Mikyo Dorje, the Joyful One."

"Throughout all my life-times,
May the venerated Karmapa, Mikyo Dorje,
Be my Lama,
And from the transcending Path of the Vajrayana,
Of the Arising and Perfecting Path of Yoga,
May I attain the Realization of the non-dual body."

"In all my life-times, may my Teacher be the Gyalwa Karmapa,
Who wears the sacred Black Hat Vajra Crown.
May my Protector Yadam be that honoured One,
Of the Great Bliss.
May I always be in the presence of Chakrasamvara."

"The Heart of the Path is devotion and the Mahamudra,
The essence of dissatisfaction with the world,
Is the body of the Precious Lama.
And He Himself is the Full Attainment
Of the Celestial Buddha, Vajradhara,
Indivisible."

ENTREATING THE LINE OF THE LAMA SUCCESSION:
"To the matchless Line of the Oral Transmission of Gampopa,
I am praying,
To that Supreme among men, Dusum Khyenpa,
I am praying,
To the Realization Line of the Order of Kargyudpa,
I am praying,
To the One great in mercy, Rangjung Dorje, the Omniscient,
I am praying,
To the One of great ability, Sangye Nyenpa,
I am praying,
To the One of grace abounding, the Gawi Yangchen, *
I am praying,
To the Vajra-voiced One,
I am praying,
To the good voice of the egoless state,
I am praying,
To the incomparably good Mikyo Dorje,
I am praying,
To the peerless One of great Love,
I am praying,
To the peerless One of the merciful Heart,
I am praying,
To the peerless One greatly skilled,
I am praying."

ASKING FOR THE BLESSING
"Uncertain is the time of my death,
And from my innermost heart I pray
Give me your Blessing.
Bless me that from deep within me,

* The Great Voice of Ecstasy.
Dissatisfaction with the world may arise,
Bless me that all outer things may appear meaningless,
Bless me that I may understand the impermanence of everything."

"You, whose loving kindness encompasses all,
Away from any attachment to your own,
To you I pray.
You, whose Buddha-activity knows no bounds,
To you I pray.
To you, whose Blessings are beyond now and then,
To you I pray.
To you, whose Holy Sight and Words are full of meaning,
To you I pray."

THE PRAYER OF THE BUDDHA OCEAN-WIDE, CALLED THE GYALWA GYAMTSO: In the Circle of Fire, recite this:

"Sitting on the crown of my head,
In the moon-disc in the heart of the Lotus,
Is the Gyalwa Karmapa Rangjung Dorje.
Surrounding him are the host of Kargyudpa Lamas.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"In my heart, on the Eternal Vajra-seat,
Is the Lord Buddha of the Great Mercy,
Surrounded by all the Buddhas, Ocean-wide.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"To my right, flaming in the enjoyment of the Great Bliss,
Is the King of the Angry Ones, the peerless Hayagriva, Surrounded by the Ocean of Heroes.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"To my left, in the Palace of Pure Space,
Is the Secret Mother, the Wisdom Dakini,
Surrounded by an Ocean of Dakinis.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"Above me, in the Pure Palace of the Gods,
Is the Vajra-Guru, Padmasambhava, Lotus-born,
Surrounded by an Ocean of Siddhas.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"Below, in the Palace of the Great Vows,
Are the Dharma-Proteectors, with their consorts,
Surrounded by an Ocean of Vow-keepers.
With deepest devotion I am praying,
Pour your Blessings upon me,
That I may see the Voidness of all things,
Both inner and outer."

"Having prayed with faith and devotion,
To my Root-Lama, and to all the Line,
May I and all sentient beings
Of the Six Spheres, Attain the most Perfect Realization."

"Oh Great One, Rangjung Dorje,
Finding you is like finding the Wish-fulfilling Gem.
If I and all others make the offering to you,
Pray fulfill our heart's desires.
And may all be Auspicious!"

"By your Bodhisattva Actions,
The Rays of Mercy stream in the Ten Directions,
Just like the moon becoming full on the fifteenth day."
THE VOW OF MAHAMUDRA

by

Rangiung Dorje

(1)
I pray to the Guru, to the Yidam and to those Holy Beings in the Mandala,
I pray to the Buddhas and to their Bodhisattva Sons in the Three Times and the Ten Directions,
Remember me, have compassion and pity on me,
Bless with accomplishment my wishes."

(2)
"The pure action of my body and my mind,
My virtuous deeds and those of all sentient beings,
Are like clear streams flowing from the Snow Mountain—void of the defilements of the Three Circles.
May they flow freely into the great ocean—the ocean of the Buddha’s Four Bodies."

(3)
"Until I attain the Four Bodies of Buddha,
May even the name of Samsaric miseries and sins
Be unheard in all my future lives,
While I enjoy the happy Dharma-oceans."

(4)
"May faith, intelligence, diligence and leisure,
Good Gurus and the essential teachings come to me,
May I practice rightly, without stumbling and hindrances,
The blessings of Dharma filling my future lives."

(5)
"The Holy and Wisdom reckonings liberate me from ignorance,
The pith-instructions destroy my dark doubts forever,
Through the Light from meditation, vividly and unmistakably I behold Reality.
Increase, Oh Light of the Three Wisdoms."

(6)
"The Root-principle is the Two Truths—the absence of the concrete and the null views,
The Superb Path is the Provisions—without either the exaggerating or minimizing views.
The Fruit is the Two Benefits of neither Nirodha nor Samsara.
In future life, may I meet such right teachings."

(7)
"The Essence of Mind is the Two-in-One, the Void and the Radiant Original Source, Maha Mudra, the Diamond Practice, is the Purifier.
The Purified are the flickering and insubstantial blindness and defilements.
May I attain the Immaculate Dharma, the Purified Fruit."

(8)
"The View of Maha Mudra lies in neither adding nor deducting from the Nature of Mind,
Being mindful of this View, without distraction, is the Root-action of Maha Mudra,
Of all meditations, this is the highest practice.
Let me always find this right teaching of the View, Action and Practice."

(9)
"All Dharma are the expression of Mind:
The Mind is No-Mind, Void in essence,
Void, yet not extinct, it manifests all.
Let me observe this essence and retain this immutable View."

(10)
"In our confusion, we consider the self-manifestation apparent in outer objects,
In our blindness we hold the self-awareness to be the real ego:
Because of the Two Clinging, sentient beings wander in Samsara,
May I cut this root of confusion and blindness."

(11)
"Nothing really exists,' Buddha, himself, sees no existence.
'All is not empty', since the causes of Nirvana and Samsara exist.
This is the Middle-Path of the Two-in-One, neither agreeing nor contradicting,
May I realize the discrimination-free Mind-essence."

(12)
"No one can describe that by saying, 'This is it!'
No one can deny that by saying, 'This is not it!'

Such is the Non-created Nature of Being, which transcends the realm of Consciousness.
May I attain, decisively, this uttermost Truth."

(13)
"Ignorant of this, we drift in the ocean of Samsara,
If one realizes this essence, there is no other Buddha.
In the final Truth, there is neither Yes nor No,
May I realize the Dharma nature, the principle of Alaya."*

(14)
"The manifestation is Mind, the Voidness is also Mind,
The Enlightenment is Mind, and the blindness is also Mind,
The springing of things is Mind, and their extinction is also Mind.
May I understand that all Increasing and Decreasing inher in Mind."

(15)
"Unsullied by intentional practice or meditation-with-effort,
Away from the Worldly Mind of distraction,
With no effort and correction, I rest comfortably on the Natural state of Mind.
May I find the adroit and subtle teachings of Mind Practice."

(16)
"The waves of Thought flow strong and weak, clear and dim—subside, Without disturbance the River of Consciousness flows Naturally,
Far from the mud of drowsiness and distraction.
Let the steady and immutable Ocean of Samadhi absorb me."

(17)
"Repeatedly contemplating the Inconceivable Mind,
Clearly discerning the Indiscernible Meaning,
I forever elimate the doubts of Yes and No.
Let me surely behold my Original Face."

(18)
"When I observe the outer objects, I find nothing but my own Mind:
When I observe my Mind, I find nothing but the Voidness.
Observing both Mind and Objects, freed am I from the Two Clinging.
Let me realize the True Nature of the Illuminating Mind-essence."

* Accumulations, the permanent non-dissolution.
"Because that transcends the Mind, it is called the Great Symbol:
Because that frees from the extremes, it is called the Great Middle Way:
Because that encompasses all and embraces all, it is called the Great Perfection.
Let me understand that knowing One is knowing All."

"With clinging absent, the Great Illiss continuously arises;
With no form to cling to, the Radiant Light outshines the dark hindrances:
May I constantly practice the practice of no-effort, transcending Mind;
The Natural and Spontaneous Non-Discerning."

"The craving for ecstasy and good experience in meditation, naturally dissolves;
The evil thoughts and blindness rest Innately Pure in the Dharmadhatu.
In the 'ordinary mind' there is no loss or gain, no claim or disclaim.
Away from words, let me realize the Truth of the Dharma Essence."

"Not knowing their natures are identical with Buddha's, Sentient beings wander endlessly in Samsara;
To those misery-bound, who have undergone endless sufferings,
May I forever pity them with unbearable Great Compassion."

"Right in that moment when the Great Compassion arises, Emerges nakedly and vividly the Great Voidness;
Let me always find this unmistakable Two-in-One Path,
And practice it day and night."

"With meditation-produced clairvoyance and other miraculous powers,
May I ripen all the sentient beings and adorn Buddha's Pure Land;
May I fulfill the compassionate vows of all Buddhas,
And eventually achieve the Highest Enlightenment and Perfections."

"The power of the compassion of Buddha,
The power of the loving Bodhisattvas,
The power of all virtues and good deeds,"
GLOSSARY

ABHIDHARMA (Skt.): A section of the Buddhist Canon concerning metaphysics. A basic work of the Hinayana. A Hrdaya Sutra.

ACHARYA (Skt.): 'Master'. An honorific title denoting great spiritual attainment. The head of a religious Order.

ADI (Skt.): 'Original'; 'The Beginning'.

AJH BUDDHA (Skt.): The 'Original Buddha'; the Root-Teacher, the symbol of universality and completeness.

AKALI (Skt.): The vowels and consonants, the structural elements of all Mantras. In the Tantras it has been said that 'the whole Universe is nothing but Akali'. The esoteric significance of these sounds is the inner relationship between the left and right subtle nerves (Nadis) of the Yoga-body.

AMITABHA (Skt.): One of the five Dhyani Buddhas, the Buddha of Boundless-Light and Discriminating Wisdom. (Tib: 'Osmo'-bya).

AMITAYUS (Skt.): The Buddha of Boundless Life. (Tib: Tsrep-med).

AMRITA (Skt.): Nectar, the Elixir of Immortality.

ARHAT (Skt.): A Worthy-One, who has transcended the Cycle of Rebirths. (Tib: Trachompa).

AVALOKITESHVARA (Skt.): The Great Compassionate Bodhisattva. (Tib: Chen-ri-rgyas).

BARDO (Tib.): The Intermediate State, between death and rebirth. There are various forms of Barlo. (See: 'The Tibetan Book of the Dead').

BLACK PILLS: Special sacramental medicine, prepared and distributed by the Gyalwa Karmapa, to confer Liberation from all suffering. Generally associated with the 'Black Hat' rite.

BOHDA GAYA: The pilgrimage-place in Bihar state, N.E. India, where Buddha gained his Enlightenment.

BODHISATTVA (Skt.): One who is freed from the notion of self and who works for the Liberation of all beings.

BONPO (Tib.): The indigenous religion of Tibet. A form of Shamanism which, in the course of time, adopted many of the Buddhist practices.

BYAMS-CHOS (Tib.): The Doctrines of Maitreya, the Future-Buddha. The 'Five Treatises' of Maitreya.

CHAKRA (Skt.): 'Wheel', 'Centre', 'Cycle'. Especially in connection with the subtle focal points of the Yoga-Body.

CHAKRASAMVARA (Skt.): An important Tantric Tutelary Deity (Yidam), the mystic aspect of the Teacher. Of supreme importance to the Kargyu sect. (Tib: Deugkhang).

CHOD (Tib.): The rite of 'slaying the ego'. A Tantric practice revealed by Siddha
KARMAPA, THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

Phadampa Sangye. Especially familiar to the Nyingmapa and Karigypa sects.

CHORTEN (Tib.): A structure, usually built to house funeral relics, or other precious remains. Built as a symbol of the subtle Yoga-Body. (Skt: Stupa).

CONSCIOUSNESS-TRANSFORMATION YOGA: The Yoga which confers the power to transfer the consciousness principle from the human body, at will (Tib: Phowej). One of the ‘Six Yogas’ of Siddha Naropa.

DAKINI (Skt.): Heavenly Goddess, ‘angel’. Guardians of the esoteric teachings, personifications of the cosmic feminine energy, sometimes creative, sometimes destructive. They play an important part in the Tantric hierarchy. (Tib: Khandroma).

DALAI LAMA (Tib.): The incarnate spiritual Head of the Gelugpa sect. The Ruler of Tibet from 1642 until the Chinese invasion of 1958/9. The present Dalai Lama is the fourteenth incarnation.

DAMARU (Tib.): A double-sided ritual drum.

DAM NGAGS (Tib.): The ‘Oral Transmission’ of the secret teachings. Many of the Tantric teachings were never written down, but passed directly from teacher to disciple.

DANGWANG (Tib.): The control of the pitch and resonance of the voice. An important aspect of ritual chanting.

DHUTSE (Tib.): Sacramental medicine, composed of five herbs noted for their powerful curative properties. The ‘Five Elixirs’ (Skt: Pancamrana).

DHARMA (Skt.): Religious Doctrine. The Buddhist Law, governing all aspects of existence. (Tib: Cbsa).

DHARMADHATU (Skt.): Absolute Truth. The ‘Universal Whole’. The ultimate location of everything.

DHYANI-BUDDHA (Skt.): There are five Buddha aspects, Amitabha, Akshobhya, Amoghasiddhi, Ratnasambhava and Vairocana. These are known as Dhyan-Buddhas, each of which has an all-important part in the great transformation. They are the expressions of the varied Tantric teachings and form the basis of every Buddhist Mandala.

DOHA (Skt.): Mystic song, as sung by the Siddhas. This form probably originated in Eastern India, where wandering Holy Men (Siddhas) can still be heard to sing them.

DOLMA (Tib.): The Great Mother Goddess and Saviouress, a personification of peaceful and helpful influences. She has twenty-one different forms. (Skt: Tara).

DOLMA YESHE KORLO (Tib.): The Mystic Circle of the emanations of the Goddess Dolma.

212

GLOSSARY

DORJE (Tib.): The Adamantine (‘Diamond’) Sceptre. Symbol of the Vajrayana, the Tantric Way of Buddhism. (Skt: Vajra).

DORJE CHANG (Tib.): The Celestial Buddha, the Root-Guru of the Karigypa sect. Usually dark blue in colour, he holds a Sceptre and Bell, symbol of the Union of Wisdom and Means. (Skt: Vajradhara).

DORJE NALJORMA (Tib.): See Vajrayogini.

DORJE PHAMGO (Tib.): See Vajravarahi.

DREAM YOGA: The Yoga which awakens the consciousness from both the sleeping and waking “dream-states” of Samakic existence to a true unconditioned Conscious state (Nirvana). One of the ‘Six Yogas’ of Siddha Naropa.

DROLLING (Tib.): The Yoga of Transformation, used for the animation of corpses.

DRUP DE (Tib.): The place where a community of monks practises meditation, in caves or other retreats.

DRUPTOP (Tib.): See Siddha.

DZICHIM (Tib.): A precious metal, with properties of spiritual power, made or found by magical means. There are various colours of this precious material, used for casting bronze statues and decorative talismans.

DZOGCHEN (Tib.): The Tantra of Non-Duality. A meditative Way, followed particularly by adherents of the Nyingmapa sect. It is called the ‘Great Perfection’. (Skt: Mahasangama).

EKADHATU (Skt.): ‘One Element’. A particular metal used for the casting of sacred objects.

EKAJATA (Skt.): A Tantric form of Mahakali, depicted with one eye, one tooth, one breast and one hair. A secret Mother-Goddess and Protector, especially familiar to the Nyingmapa sect.

GADEN (Tib.): A Paradise, presided over by the Future Buddha Maitreya.

GARUDA (Skt.): A huge hawk-like bird, the devourer of snakes and poisons. One of the outer gate-keepers of Mandalas. In the Hindu pantheon Garuda is the vehicle of Vishnu, ‘Lord of the Universe’. (Tib: Khyung).

GAU (Tib.): An anumeta-box, reliquary. Usually made of metal.

GELONG (Tib.): An ordained monk.

GELUGPA (Tib.): The ‘Reformed’ sect of Tibetan Buddhism, founded by Je Tsongkhapa. It is the ‘Yellow Hat’ sect. The Dalai Lama is their reincarnate Teacher.

GE NYEN (Tib.): The primary ordination, given to both lay people and monks. Various Buddhist vows are taken at this time.

GESHE (Tib.): ‘Doctor of Divinity’. An honorific title, usually received after passing difficult religious examinations.

GE TSUL (Tib.): A novice monk. An ordination of ten vows.
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

GHANTA (Skt.): Ritual Bell, symbolic of the female principle. (Tib: Triklu).
GIRI (Skt.): One of the ten orders of ascetics of Shankaracharya. It denotes one who lives in forests and foothills.
GOMCHEN (Tib.): Ascetic. (Skt: Yogin).
GONPO (Tib.): A Protector. Especially used for Mahakala, the Great Time Deity. Usually black of colour and very wrathful.
GREAT PERFECTION: See Degechen.
GUHYASAMAJA (Skt.): The name of a Tantric Tendental Deity, the embodiment of a specific esoteric teaching.
GURU (Skt.): Teacher, Master. (Tib: Lama).
GYALWA GYAMISO (Tib.): A red, four armed form of Avalokiteshvara.
HAYAVRAVIVA (Tib.): A horse-headed Tantra Deity. (Tib: Tamdrin).
HEART DROP: The Degechen Nyin-tig. The Tantric doctrines of Vimalamitra, as taught mainly by the Nyingmapa sect. The Nga-ba Ati doctrines.
HERUKA (Skt.): Wrathful Tantric Deities, usually winged. The embodiment of the male qualities of Buddhahood, they unite with the Dakinis of certain realms.
HEVAJRA (Skt.): An important Tantric Tendental Deity, the mystic aspect of the Teacher. Hevajra means ‘The Indestructible’, ‘The Adamantine One’. Depicted usually blue of colour, dancing, with sixteen arms, embracing his consort Nairatma (‘Non-self’). It is also the name of a Tantra which gives the explanations and mystic symbolism of this form.
HINAYANA (Skt.): The ancient Theravada tradition of Buddhism, as currently practised in Ceylon, Burma, Thailand and Cambodia.
ILLUSORY-BODY YOGA: The Yoga through which Full Knowledge of the purely relative existence of natural phenomena is attained. (Tib: Gyu-ta). One of the ‘Six Yogas’ of Siddha Naropa.
INNER-HEAT YOGA: The Yoga through which Psychic Energy is developed and controlled, creating a source of inner warmth and invulnerability to extreme cold. (Tib: Tummo). One of the ‘Six Yogas’ of Siddha Naropa.
INTERMEDIATE-STATE YOGA: The Yoga through which the transition through the Intermediate State between death and re-birth can be controlled and transcended. (Tib: Barlo). One of the ‘Six Yogas’ of Siddha Naropa.
JAMBHALA (Skt.): The God of Wealth. Usually depicted holding a mongoose.
JNANA DAKINI (Skt.): A Wisdom-holding Goddess (Dakini). (Tib: Yeshe Khandroma).
KADAMPA (Tib.): A sect of Buddhism in Tibet, founded by Pandid Atisha in the eleventh century. It influenced the Kagyu-pa and later sects.
KALACHAKRA (Skt.): An important Tantric Tendental Deity, the mystic aspect of the Teacher. Kalachakra means ‘Cycle of Time’, and is depicted blue of colour, with twenty-four arms, embracing his consort. Also the name of a Tantra, which gives the relationships between the Yoga-Body and the Astrological patterns and cycles. (Tib: Dukchen).
KALI (Skt.): The Mother Goddess, of the Hindu pantheon. Dark and wrathful externally, she conceals her inner compassionate nature. The spouse of Kala, ‘Time’. (Tib: Lhama).
KALI YUGA (Skt.): The last of the Four Ages, which make up the Great Time Cycle (Malyugya) of the Indian classical tradition. It is the present Dark Age, of egotism and dissertation.
KANG RINPOCHE (Tib.): Mount Kailash, in Western Tibet. The main place of pilgrimage for both Buddhists and Hindus. This mountain can be understood as an initiatory Mandala.
KANJUR (Tib.): Canonical literature, ‘Translation of the Buddha Word’ consisting of Vinyay Sutras, the Puja-pujaratna, the Mahayana Sutras and various meditative and ritual instructions (Tantras). About one hundred volumes in entirety, attributed to Lord Buddha himself.
KARGYUYDPA (Tib.): A sect of Buddhism in Tibet, founded by Marpa ‘The Translator’, in the eleventh century. The sect which especially stresses the importance of the ‘Oral Transmission’.
KARIKA (Skt.): A commentary on the Sutras.
KARMA (Skt.): Action and reaction, understood as One. The course of events. Destiny, self-made.
KHENCHEN (Hon. Tib.): See Khenspo.
KHANDROMA (Tib.): See Dakini.
KAZHIHA (Tib.): An Order, denoting spiritual attainment. One who is especially fit for bestowing monastic ordination.
KHENPO (Tib.): Abbot of a monastery, and in charge of monastic and academic studies.
KURUKULLA (Skt.): A Tantric form of the Goddess Tara, depicted holding a bow and arrow made of flowers.
KUSHINAGARA: The pilgrimage-place in U.P., India, the site of the Parinirvana of Lord Buddha.
LAMA (Tib.): Teacher, Guru. A Superior Man. (Skt: Gurus).
LAMRIM (Tib.): Meditation Way.
LHAMO (Tib.): A Mother-Goddess, a female Divinity, usually of a wrathful nature, but boon-bestowing. (Skt: Atmrika).
KARMAPA: THE BLACK HAT LAMA OF TIBET

LIGHT YOGA: The Yoga through which Knowledge of the Void, from which all phenomena are made visible, is attained. (Tib. Osal). One of the 'Six Yogas' of Siddha Naropa.

LI KADUR (Tib.): A metallic compound, used for the casting of images and bells.

LOTSAWA (Tib.): A Translator of the Buddhist teachings.

LUMINIE: The birthplace of Lord Buddha, in Nepal.

LUNG (Tib): 'Wind'. An empowerment, or authorization.

MADHYAMAKA (Skts): A philosophical concept, expounded by the Siddha Ngarjuna. The 'Middle Way' of Buddhism.

MAHAKALA (Skts): The Great Time Deity, a Tantric Protector, especially of the Kargyapa sect. He is usually depicted as being extremely wrathful, black of colour, and holding a skull-cup and chopper. A Guardian of deep secrets, his consort is the Mahakali (Tib. Gompo Nakpo Chen).

MAHAKALAKAAMUKHIA (Skts): The crow-headed form of Mahakala. In the form of a cremation-oracle.

MAHAMAYA (Skts): The Great Illusion. The name of a Tutelary Deity and the teachings concerning the overcoming of illusion.

MAHAMUDRA (Skts): The Great Sign, Great Symbol. The Inexpressible, the Highest Teaching. A mystic concept, especially held by the Karma-Kargyadpas. (Tib: Chakya Chenpo).

MAHAYANA (Skts): The 'Greater Way' of Northern Buddhism, as opposed to the Hinayana ('Lesser Way') of the South. The teachings of Mahayana stress the Bodhisattva path, and incorporate the Tantras as the means to the attainment of compassion. The Vajrayana is the inner part of the Mahayana.

MAHAYOGINI TANTRA (Skts): The esoteric teaching of the Great Yogini Cycle. (Tib: Namjorwa Gyud).

MAITREYA (Skts): The Future Buddha, from the West. He is usually depicted seated on a throne, with a Stupa over his head.

MAITRI (Skts): Compassion. The essence of action as a Bodhisattva.

MALLA (Skts): A rosary, used for counting Mantras. Prayer-stands.

MANDALA (Skts): A Mystic Circle, generally used to convey initiations. Symbols and expressions of the psychological processes of unfoldment and integration. (Tib: Koro).

MANI (Skts): Jewel, in the mystic sense. The philosopher's stone. The 'Mani' Mantra is of the Compassionate Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara.

MANJUSOSA (Skts): A form of the Bodhisattva Manjushri.

MANJUSRI (Skts): The Great Compassionate Bodhisattva of Wisdom. The embodiment of All Learning. He is usually shown holding a sword and a book. (Tib: Jambyang).

MANTRA (Skts): Mystic sound-syllables, composed of vowels and consonants.

GLOSSEY

Understood as the component vibrations of the Universe. Used for controlling the Mind and for transforming it.

MANTRAYANA (Skts): The Way of Mantra practice.

MĀTRIKĀ (Skts): Mother Goddess. Forms of Mahākāli.

MUDRA (Skts): Gesture, 'Seal', Consort. A mystic term, with many meanings in different contexts. As Mahamudra, the Higher Teaching.

NĀDI (Skts): The subtle nerve-channels of the Yoga-Body. (Tib: Tsaa).

NĀIYATĀMA (Skts): A Wisdom-holding Dakini, embodiment of the 'Non-self' Consort of Heruka. (Tib: Dagnema).

NAGA (Skts): A snake or serpent, Guardians of the underwater, treasures and certain esoteric secrets. (Tib: Lu).

NAMCHAK (Tib.): Literally 'Sky-fallen'. The name given to meteorite-metal. Used for ritual objects and talismans.

NARO KHANIDROMA (Tib.): An emanation of the Great Dakini, in the form in which she revealed herself to the Siddha Naropa. (Skts: Sarisbuddha Dakini).

NATH (Skts): 'Lord'. The name of a sect of Sadhus in India. A title of Shiva, Lord of Yoga.

NIRVANA (Skts): The final extinction of the false idea of self. Freedom from the suffering of Samara.

NORBU (Tib.): Gem. The Wish-granting Gem. (Skts: Maharatna).

NORBU KOR SEBS (Tib.): Particular esoteric teachings revealed to the Siddha Tilopa. (Lit: 'Jewel-Mind Cycle').

NYEN ZOCH (Tib.): Full ordination, of 253 vows.

NYINGMAPA (Tib.): The original ('Old') sect of Buddhism in Tibet, founded by Guru Padmasambhava, the Lotus-born. Closely related to the Kargyupa sect.

NYING THIG (Tib.): See Heart Drop.

PADMA (Skts): Lotus. Mystically as well as actually. Symbol of femininity.

PADMASAMBHAVA: A native of Ugyen, Guru Padmasambhava visited Tibet in the middle of the eighth century, at the request of the Tibetan King. He subdued the Shamanist demons and established Tantric Buddhism. Founder of the Nyingmapa sect. He is also known as Padma Jungnyo or Guru Rinpoche.

PANCHAMIRITA (Skts): The Five Elixirs, of medicinal herbs. A sacrament.

PANDHIKA (Skts): Scholar-Teacher. A learned man of great reputation.

PARANIRVANA (Skts): 'Beyond Nirvana'. The passing of a Bodhisattva, the Greater Enlightenment, away from this world.
PAWO (Tib.): Hero. The name given to the Siddha Choswang Lhundrup, who became the first Paowo Rinpoche.

PHOWA (Tib.): See Transference Yoga.

PHYAGVA CHENPO (Tib.): See Mahamudra.

POTALA (Tib.): The Great Palace of the Dalai Lamas, in Lhasa, largely built in the seventeenth century. It is situated on a hill overlooking the city, a site used for fortresses and monasteries for many centuries previously.

PRAJNAMULA (Skt.): The Root-Wisdom teachings, related to the great Prajnaparamita.

PRAJNAPARAMITA (Skt.): 'The Perfection of Wisdom.' The treatise containing the essence of Mahayana, revealed to the Siddha Nagarjun. The book exists in many different lengths, from a few verses to many hundreds of pages. The principle theme is the concept of Voidness (Sunyata).

PRATIMOKSHA (Skt.): A treatise concerning monastic rules.

PUMBHA (Tib.): Elixir Jar. (Skt: Kalasha).

PURPA DRUP CHEN (Tib.): See Vajrakila.

PURPAKILA (Tib.): See Vajrakila.

RAJHUM (Tib.): The first step of ordination, of 5 vows.

RANGJUNG (Tib.): Self-originated. See Swyambhun.

RINPOCHE (Tib.): Literally 'Precious One', the honorific title given to High Lamas and Teachers.

RINSHIEL (Tib.): Precious relics in the form of small, hard, shining particles, sometimes found among the funeral ashes of Saints or Holy Men. They are of many different kinds and have great esoteric significance. They are much sought after by devotees, and are usually preserved in Stupas or statues.

SADHU (Skt.): An Indian Holy Man. An Ascetic.

SAKYA (Skt.): The name of the early sect of Buddhism in Tibet, founded by Lama Drogmi. A 'Red Hat' sect.

SAKYA LAMA: The Leader of the Sakya sect. The Sakya Pandita.

SAKYAPA (Tib.): 'Of the Sakya sect'.

SAKYAMUNI (Skt.): Gautama the Buddha, born in Lumbini. Founder of Buddhism.

SAKYA PANDITA (Skt.): Sakya Kunga Gyatset (1182-1251).

SAMANTABHADRA (Skt.): The first Bodhisattva. The Adi-Buddha of the Nying-ma sect. (Tib: Kuntu Zangpo).

SAMSARA (Skt.): The Cycle of Existence; birth, old-age and death. The infinite interaction of cause and effect.

SANGHA (Skt.): The Order of Buddhist monks and nuns. (Tib: Gaden).

SARASWATI (Skt.): The Goddess of Learning and the Arts. (Tib: Yang Chenma).

GLOSSARY

SARNATH: The deer-park, near Benares, U.P., India, where Gautama Buddha first proclaimed the Dharma.

SARVABUDDHA DAKINI (Skt.): The Tantric Dakini who embodies the Wisdom of all the Buddhas and who initiated the Siddha Naropa into the mysteries of Buddhist esoterism.

SHAMAR (Tib.): The 'Red Hat' Lama of the Karma-Kagyupa sect.

SHAMBALA (Tib.): A mythical country of uncertain location, thought to be to the North West of Urgyen, from where the Kalachakra Tantra is said to have originated, the King of Shambhala having written the treatise down after listening to Lord Buddha discourse on the subject. Recent evidence suggests it can be identified with the Samalpur area of Orissa.

SHES DA (Tib.): School of Philosophy.

SHINJE (Tib.): Protector of the Buddhist Dharma, the Great Lord of Death. (Skt: Yama).

SIDHVA (Skt.): A Perfected Being. A Saint.

SIDDHI (Skt.): Yogic powers, attained through inner development.

SIX DOCTRINES/YOGAS: See Naro Chos Drag.

STUPA (Skt.): See Chorten.

SUHLE BREATHE: A Yogic technique developed by the Indian Siddhas, by which means Psychic Energy is circulated through the subtle nerve-channels. (Tib: Tsa Lung).

SUTRA (Skt.): Discourses of Lord Buddha. A 'song'. Scriptural text.

SWAYAMBUH (Skt.): Self-originated. Naturally-formed. (Tib: Rangjung).

TAMDRIN (Tib.): See Hayagriva.

TANJUR (Tib.): Canonical literature, consisting of translated works of individual Indian Masters (Siddhas), being the commentaries on the Sutras and Tantras. Various later theories and practices are also included in the Tanjur, which generally comprises about two hundred volumes.

TANTRA (Skt.): Teachings outlining mystic practices as the most direct way to Enlightenment. The esoteric teachings specific for the Kali Yoga, this Dark Age. (Tib: Gyud).

TARA (Skt.): The Compassionate Mother Goddess, generally green or white of colour. (Tib: Dolma).

TATHAGATA (Skt.): Gautama, Lord Buddha. Lit.: 'He who exists only as such'.

TERCHEN (Tib.): A store of hidden treasure. An honorific title.

TERCHOS (Tib.): Literally 'Treasure of the Dharma'. Teachings traditionally hidden by Guru Padmasambhava.

TERMA (Tib.): Treasure. A teaching, text or religious object, which has been revealed for the propagation of the Dharma.
TERTON (Tib.): One who reveals hidden treasures or teachings, usually an incar-nate Lama. (Skt. Vidyadharas).

THANGKA (Tib.): A scroll painting. Usually mounted on a banner.

TIKA (Skt.): A detailed explanation of a Sutra.

TORMA (Tib.): An offering cake, usually made of barley-flour, butter and sugar. Coloured with various intricate designs, they are offered to the invoked Deities and are then frequently distributed amongst those participating in the rites.

TRILBÜ (Tib.): Ritual Bell. (Skt. Ghanata.)

TSA LUNG (Tib.): See Subtle Breath.

TSECHU (Tib.): Ceremony of the Eight Manifestations of Guru Padmasambhava.

TSEPADING (Tib.): The Buddha of Boundless Life. (Skt. Amitayus).

TULKU (Tib.): An Incarnate Lama.

TUMMO (Tib.): See Inner Heat Yoga.

TUSHITA (Skt.): See Gaden.

TUTELARY: See Yidam.

URGEYEN: The native country of Guru Padmasambhava. Most likely modern Orissa.

VAJRA (Skt.): The Adamantine Sceptre, symbol of the Vajrayana. The expression of masculinity. (Tib. Dorje).

VAJRADAKINI (Skt.): The Vajra-Goddess. The initiatory aspect of femininity.

VAJRADHARA (Skt.): The Celestial Buddha, the Root-Guru of the Kargyudpa sect. (Tib. Dorje Chang).

VAJRAMUKRAS MUDRA (Skt.): The mystic gesture (Mudra) of the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara, in which the hands are crossed over the chest. Symbolic of the seed-syllable ‘Hum’, an expression of the Great Void.

VAJRA MUKUT: The Black Vajra-Hat, presented to the Fifth Karmapa by the Chinese Emperor Tai Ming Chen. The mere sight of this Hat is said to confer Liberation.

VAJRAPANI (Skt.): The name of a Bodhisattva and Protector, usually depicted holding a Vajra in the right hand. He manifests both peacefully and wrathfully. (Tib. Chana Dorje).

VAJRASATTVA (Skt.): The Higher Aspect of the Dhyani-Buddhas, and an embodiment of the Celestial Buddha Vajradhara. He is generally white in colour and is depicted holding a Sceptre (Vajra) above a Bell (Ghanata). (Tib. Dorje Sempa).

VAJRAVAKINI (Skt.): The Sow-headed Goddess, a Guardian of secrets. Symbol of the Great subtle-nerve (Sahasrāra) and a most important Protector of the Karmapas. (Tib. Dorje Phlagon).

VAJRAYANA (Skt.): The Way of the Vajra. The Adamantine Path, leading quickly to Enlightenment.

VAJRAYOGINI (Skt.): The Bliss-Dakini, who dances ecstatically. An important and highly symbolical Tantric concept of femininity. Symbol of the Subtle Fire. (Tib. Dorje Naljirma).

VARSHA (Skt.): The period of retreat during the rainy season, when monks are forbidden to travel. (Tib. Yarnay).

VEDA (Skt.): The ancient hymns and scriptures of the Hindu Brahmanic tradition.

VINYAPUSPAMALLA (Skt.): A text relating to the Vinyaya Sutras.

VINYA SUTRAS (Skt.): A section of the Buddhist canon, concerning religious discipline. A basic text of the Hinayana tradition, included in the Kanjur.

VIRA (Skt.): Hero. (Tib. Pavo).

WANG (Tib.): Empowerment, Initiation. The mystic transmission of a teaching. Aka Wangkar.

YAB-YUM (Tib.): The Male/Female aspect of Divinity, combined as One, indicating the Union of all Dualities. The One-ness, freed from polarity.

YAMANTAKA (Skt.): A Tantric Tutelary Deity, a Protector of the Buddhist Dharma. Usually depicted in a wrathful form, with a bull’s head and thirty-four arms.

YANG CHENMA (Tib.): See Saraswati.

YESHE (Tib.): Wisdom.

YIDAM (Tib.): Tutelary Deity, Protector and benefactor, in the esoteric sense. The mystic form of the Teacher and the embodiment of the secret teachings. (Skt: Isatdevata).

YOGA (Skt.): Cosmic Union. The aim of all spiritual endeavour.

YOGI (Skt.): One who practises Yoga.

YOGINI (Skt.): A female Yogi.

ZHAMAR (Tib.): ‘Red Hat’. See Skamar.

ZHANAG (Tib.): ‘Black Hat’. See Vajra Mukut.

ZI STONE: A form of precious banded agate, highly prized by Tibetans. (Tib. Zi).